Lost Italians Die Amid Desert Sands

Whole 94th Battalion Said Doomed In Somaliland Wilds

LONDON, Feb. 22—(CP).—The entire 94th Battalion of the Italian Colonial Infantry is believed dying of thirst in a desert near the Kenya border, a Reuters News Agency dispatch from the East African front said today.

Driven from Afmadu, Italian Somaliland, by the British 11 days ago, the battalion was said to have fled into trackless sands southward toward Gelib, 80 miles away.

The troops have not appeared in the vicinity of Gelib yet, but a doctor who accompanied the Italians for 40 miles returned and surrendered to the British at Afmadu.

Alfonso Sinking Fast In Rome

ROME, Feb. 22—(AP). — Former King Alfonso XIII. of Spain lay near death to-day after a series of new heart attacks.

His strength was said to be waning fast, and physicians remained in constant attendance. A priest was at hand to administer the final rites of the church to the last monarch of devoutly Catholic Spain.

Queen Victoria Eugenia, Alfonso's designated heir Prince Don Juan, and two other children, Prince Jaime and Princess Beatrice, were at the bedside. A fourth child, Princess Christina, was summoned from Turin.

The former monarch slept fitfully during the night with the aid of injections, though he suffered a heart attack at about 3 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT Friday), and was able to receive Communion from a Spanish priest at 6 a.m.

A bulletin issued by Alfonso's physician, Dr. Giovanni Calazza, at 10 a.m., said:

British Ships Run Gauntlet No Losses For Entire Week

LONDON, Feb. 22—(CP).—Reports of sea warfare were meagre in the week ended February 22. Not a single British ship was reported sunk during the period—except in the German communiques.

Shipping circles in New York reported the loss of a tiny German vessel of 688 tons and a 2,962-ton Egyptian ship. Spanish dispatches indicated the torpedoing of the 3,181-ton French ship Guilvinec, which was sailing in ballast.

A 1,500-ton merchantman in enemy hands was sunk off the Norwegian coast by the British submarine Sealion, but the name of the vessel was not learned.

For the week ended February 9 the British Admiralty announced the loss of 29,806 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping, or approximately half the average weekly loss of the war.

Japs Claim Push Aimed Only At Chungking

TOKYO, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka was quoted today by the authoritative newspaper Asahi as saying that any increase in Japanese military forces in French Indo-China was aimed at Chungking, not Singapore.

The same paper commented politely but firmly on Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye's absences from the Japanese parliament—purportedly because of illness —saying "there seems to be room for criticism of his continued absence and his occasional illnesses at the most critical times."

(Konoye has been reported ill for 12 days and his early appearance before the Diet has been regarded as unlikely. Several times in the past the tall, thin prince has taken to his bed at times of crisis. These retirements sometimes have been regarded as political.)

"We say that if the illness of the prince is not too serious," Asahi said, "it would be no end of help if he attended the diet in spite of more or less indisposition. However, if the illness is serious, we earnestly hope for a more thoroughgoing treatment of the patient, at the same time giving someone the right to speak with responsibility for the premier.

GREEKS reported today that they had showered leaflets behind the Italian lines in Albania telling of Italian defeats in North and East Africa and assuring that soldiers who surrender would be treated well.

Greek spokesmen said a number of Italians waved the leaflets as a token of surrender when they desired to come inside the Greek lines.

Pilot And 3, Lost In Peru Desert

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 22—(AP)—Airplanes today searched the desolate Sechura desert, 500 miles north of here, for four persons who ventured into the wastelands from a stranded Condor airliner in search of help.

Of 12 others who remained with the liner after it was forced down Wednesday, four suffering from slight injuries were picked up by the pilot of a private plane and taken to Chiclayo, on the southern rim of the desert, 100 miles away.

Biggest Scrap Since Mass Raids

British Squadrons Hit At Coast, Hidden Beneath Smoke Screen

DOVER, Feb. 21 (CP)—Large formations of German and British warplanes clashed today in a great battle above the Strait of Dover at England's southeast corner facing the invasion coast.

Royal Air Force squadrons swarmed over Dover on what appeared to be offensive sweeps against German-held France.

The action was one of the biggest and fiercest battles since the mass day raids of last summer and last fall. It started upon the appearance of formations of German bombers, escorted by fighters for full daylight attacks.

More than 100 British and German planes tangled in a five-mile-high combat above the Channel coast and observers said the Germans finally fled to their French bases.

German warships laid a smoke-screen on the water off Cap Gris Nez, on the French coast, which was indictinctly outlined in brilliant sunshine. New buildings recently have been constructed by the Germans there on the French cliffs.

Huge formations of British planes apparently directed a three-point attack at Boulogne, Dunkirk and Ostend, in France and Belgium. The strongest concentration of attackers drove south of Dover toward Boulogne.

The sound of diving planes and distant firing echoed back to Kent.

The German night raiders started numerous fires in Swansea and caused casualties. One of the planes was reported shot down by an R.A.F. fighter and crashed in flames.

Swansea is the principal port for shipment of anthracite from Welsh mines and is known as "the Metallurgical Capital of Wales."

Many of the town's civil defence workers—without sleep for three days—still were on the job this morning.

The latest assault lasted 3½ hours, during which high explosive and incendiary bombs were showered on the coastal city.

Deaths were caused, the Government acknowledged.

There also were raids in East England. A few bombs were dropped in London, but they caused few casualties and little damage, a communique said.

R.A.F. Bombers Busy.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(CP).—The German naval base at Wilhelmshaven, the big shipbuilding centre of Emden and the port of Brest in Nazi-occupied France were heavily bombed last night by the Royal Air Force, an official announcement today said. The raid on Wilhelmshaven was the 43rd on that vital port since the war began.

British bombers also attacked industrial targets in the Ruhr, the announcement said, but bad visibility rendered it impossible to observe details of results.

So He Flew Away

Plymouth, Eng., Feb. 22 (CP)

A YOUNG French air mechanic who said he was "fed up" with German domination armed himself with a revolver, seized a passenger airplane at an airdrome in occupied France and flew it to England.

Anti-aircraft guns fired at him as he crossed the coast, but he managed to land on a bumpy field at Tregantle, Cornwall.

'Is this England?" he asked a farmer who approached the plane.

"Yes," said the farmer.

"Shall I be clicked," (handcuffed) he asked anxiously as some soldiers approached.

They gave him food and cigarettes and then took him away to be questioned.

No Fear In States Of U.K. Defeat Says War Writer

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22 —(AP)—Kirke Simpson, veteran Associated Press writer and a Pulitzer Prize winner, said today in a prepared address that if he reads the signs in Washington correctly "There is no longer great fear that England can be actually conquered."

"This is a far cry from the view held by many experienced American military observers only a few months ago," he told the Georgia Press Institute.

"Even before France fell and while Germany's blitzkrieg legions still were rolling across the Low Countries, there were many in Washington gloomily certain that France and Britain could not halt the Nazi rush.

The British escape from Dunkirk, he said, was the first sympton of Britain's ability to hold out in her fight against whatever might be thrown at her.

"So far as I know," he added, "no American who has been in England in recent months, whether a high placed presidential emissary like Harry Hopkins, a sight-seer deluxe like Wendell Willkie, or just an American newspaperman on duty at the front, believes now that England can be smashed by invasion, by bombing or by threats of starvation under a sea blockade."

Triangle Of Death

London, Feb. 22 (CP)

THE Admiralty designed a huge triangular area of the central Mediterranean extending from Italy to Africa today as "dangerous to shipping" of all nations.

The area extends approximately 600 miles from the heel of the Italian "boot" to Bengasi, on the Libyan coast, thence approximately 600 miles to French Tunisia, across to Sardinia and the Italian mainland.

Navy circles said this did not mean the area was being declared a minefield, but one in which ships "might expect anything"—mines, bombs, torpedoes, or shells.

South African Units Take Port Jumbo In Italian Somaliland

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Feb. 22 (CP-Reuters)—The port of Jumbo, near Chisimaio at the mouth of the Juba river in Italian Somaliland has fallen to South African troops, it was announced officially today.

A brigade staff and one colonel, together with a number of European and native prisoners were captured, along with considerable quantities of guns and materials.

Kumbo lies on the Indian ocean about 10 miles northeast of Chisimaio, which fell to South African forces last week and opened the way for a drive across the Juba river.

A communique today said troop concentrations were hit and that "Italian troops travelling in two lorries near Boda, north of Jumbo, indicated to our aircraft that they desired to surrender."

Vichy, France, Feb. 22 (AP)

THE Vichy Government has notified Japan it cannot accept a proposal that approximately one third of Laos and Cambodia provinces in French Indo-China be ceded to Thailand, informed sources said today.

Ontario, Quebec Losers Under Sirois Report

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 — (CP). — Losses for two provinces and gains for seven on the basis of 1940 financing forecasts would have resulted from implementation of recommendations by the Rowell-Sirois Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, according to statistics tabled in the House of Commons by Finance Minister Ilsley.

The figures are included in documents prepared for the recent Dominion-Provincial conference by financial experts commissioned by the Government to bring up to date figures contained in the Sirois report. The original report was based on 1937 figures.

The tabled documents estimated that if the Sirois recommendations had been in effect, Ontario would have lost $6,019,000 in the 1940 fiscal year, on the basis of the Ontario Government's forecast of the province's financial position.

On the same basis, British Columbia's position would have been $3,611,000 worse.

On the basis of actual financial results during 1939, these provinces would have gained $10,581,000 and $598,000 respectively, had the Sirois recommendations been in effect then, the documents estimated.

Using estimates for the 1940 fiscal year of each province as their basis, the documents indicated the following financial gains under the Sirois plan (gains for 1939 in brackets):

Salonika Offered Slavs With Slice Of North Albania

LONDON, Feb. 22 (CP)—Authoritative sources declared today that "an open move by the German army into Bulgaria is expected to take place within the next two days."

The British minister in Sofia, George Rendel, will leave the country if Bulgaria is definitely invaded and occupied by the Germans without resistance, these sources said. Decision as to his departure, however, would rest in his hands.

(An unconfirmed report, last night according to Reuters News Agency despatches from Belgrade, said that German troops have been crossing into Bulgaria, across the Danube at the Bulgarian town of Rustchuk, since 4 p.m. Friday. Rustchuk is opposite Giurgiu, Rumania, where the Germans have built pontoon bridges. Reuters despatch described the situation "as serious and dangerous.")

Belief a German invasion of Bulgaria is imminent was based, it was said, on reports that bridging of the Danube river is "now in progress," that heavy restrictions have been imposed on all rail traffic and that Bulgarian houses have been requisitioned as billets for German officers.

VANCOUVER, Feb. 22.—(CP)—Salvage operations were underway today in Burrard Inlet to bring to the surface the wreckage of a Royal Norweigan Naval Air Force training plane.

The plane crashed late yesterday near Point Atkinson lighthouse carrying to death Sub Lieutenant Harold Kruse, 25, and Flt. Pupil Erling Jorgensen, 25.

Bodies of Jorgensen and Kruse presumably were carried down with the wreckage into deep water near the lighthouse.

Jorgensen was married three months ago to Miss Mary Loosemore of Toronto.

British Troops Expected To Block Greek Road To Salonika

LONDON, Feb. 22—(CP).—Bulgaria appeared about to be written off the books as an independent nation today. The wearing down process pursued by the Nazis over the past two months seemed to have reached a point where Bulgaria's acquiesence to German occupation is assured.

London let it be known that that Britain expects the Germams to march into Bulgaria in full force over the week-end. When this becomes apparent the British Minister in Sofia, George Rendel, will leave the country, and Bulgaria, like Rumania, will be regarded as territory occupied by the enemy.

The German advance will not be the signal for the immediate opening of hostilities. Neither Britain nor Turkey will march. All indications are that Britain's plans are predicated on the possibility of a Nazi attack on Greece from Bulgaria.

Unless she is willing to see her present dominant position in the Mediterranean diminished and the Greek victories over Italy nullified, Britain will have to bear the brunt of any fighting growing from a German attack on Salonika. Greece has her hands full keeping the Italians on the run in Albania and will have few men to spare.

Effective aid from Turkey is not likely to materialize before Britain demonstrates that the Germans can be checked. But Britain is confident that Turkey will remain loyal to the Anglo-Turkish alliance, and that her help eventually will be decisive in Southeast Europe.

Turkey maintained her hostility to the Germans throughout the period of German victories in Western Europe last Summer, and is not likely to blackslide now the prospects of the Axis are not so bright.

Bulgaria's submission will open vast areas of Southeastern Europe as targets for British air power. From its bases in Greece and Crete the R.A.F. will be able to disorganize the enemy's oil production and transport.

Want Canada's Part on Canvas

Fullest Use Of Canadian Artists Urged To Depict Role In War

OTTAWA, Feb. 22—(CP).—Supported by outstanding personalities in the cultural and historical life of the Dominion, representations have been made to the Federal Government for the fullest use of Canadian artists in recording the war activities and achievements of Canada's fighting forces.

The proposal was officially placed before the Government in the annual report of the National Gallery of Canada, tabled in the House of Commons.

The National Gallery report recalls that it was Canada, through the initiative of Lord Beaverbrook who now is British Minister of Aircraft Production, that pioneered the idea of recording on canvas activities of the Canadian forces in the First Great War. The United Kingdom and the United States followed the example, but the Canadian collection is still regarded as the most important and complete art record of the war in existence.

Shortly after outbreak of the present war the British Government entrusted Sir Kenneth Clark, Director of the National Gallery in London, with the task of recording war activities of the Motherland's forces. He is assisted by a committee including three artist members and representatives of the Admiralty, War Office, and Ministry of Information.

Trustees of Canada's National National Gallery in their report urged the Dominion Government to create a similar committee immediately "to record the activities of the fighting forces in Canada and overseas and also other phases of Canada's war activities. They suggested it should include representatives of the navy, army and air force.

"I am strongly of the opinion that

Huns Claim British Ship Using U.S. Colors

BERLIN, Feb. 22. —(AP)— The Germans claimed today the sinking of the British merchant ship "Canadian Cruiser" in the Indian Ocean.

They described the 7,178-ton ship as out of Montreal (which would indicate the sinking, if confirmed, took place some weeks ago, since the Port of Montreal has been closed for the winter season).

At first the German high command in its daily communique had described the ship sunk as "a Canadian cruiser."

The Germans alleged the ship had United States colors painted on its hull "to conceal its nationality."

Seaway Session Set For Hydro, Ontario, Ottawa

TORONTO, Feb. 22 — (CP). — A week-end adjournment of the Ontario Legislature enabled Government Ministers today to give their attention to matters other than those of legislation. The Legislature adjourned yesterday to meet again Monday.

A meeting between Dominion Government officials and representatives of the Provincial Government and the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be held to iron out details of the St. Lawrence seaway as it affects this province.

A second conference at Queen's Park will be that of fire chiefs from areas where civilian defence committee organizations have been established. Dr. W. O. Gliddon of Ottawa, Federal air raids precaution officer, will preside at this gathering.

Before adjourning the Legislature gave first reading to 10 bills and heard a statement from Health Minister Harold Kirby that his department was worried about the scarlet fever situation in military centres of the province.

Mr. Kirby rose and read to the members an anonymous note which asked if it was true there were 1,000 cases of scarlet fever at the Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Pool in Toronto. The information was "absolutely wrong," he said, as there no time should be lost in undertaking, no matter in how modest a way, an art record of the activities of our fight forces," he said.

"Ambitious canvases need not be commissioned immediately, but the raw material in the way of sketches and drawings made on the spot by competent artists should be authorized. Undoubtedly they will be of priceless value in the future."

Mr. Southam said there were a "score or more" leading Canadian artists ready and anxious to do their part in this work.

Proponents of the War Artist Scheme maintain much has already been done by the armed forces of the Dominion and by those employed in war industries that should have been recorded and preserved for posterity.

They draw attention specially to the historic landing of the advance guard of the 1st Canadian Division at the French port of Brest last June and the withdrawal a few days later, experiences of the Canadian troops in Iceland, activities in camps at home and abroad and the arrival of Australian and New Zealand cadets for the Commonwealth Air Training plan.

It has been suggested to the government that a small number of qualified artists, carrying the honorary rank of captain, should be attached to the Canadian forces to operate somewhat along the lines introduced by Lord Beaverbrook during the latter years of the First Great War. Provision would also be made to employ British artists on special commissions.

Alternative plans, however, are known to have been put forward, which would place the undertaking on a civilian basis.

Less Jobless Relief.

Some of the changes in estimated gain in 1939 and 1940 were due in most part to reduced unemployment relief costs, cutting down on the benefit to accrue to the provinces through Dominion assumption of this burden, a Sirois Commission official said to-day.

Other factors in the changes, he said, were variation in the amount of collections under taxes which would be turned over to the Dominion.

For instance, Ontario's drop from the credit to the debit side of the ledger between 1939 and 1940 under the Sirois recommendations would be accounted for largely by the fact that Ontario expected to collect more than $24,000,000 in corporation taxes in 1940, compared with 1939 collections of a little more than $12,000,000. Corporation taxes would be collected by the Dominion under the Sirois plan, and Ontario thus would have lost that additional 1940 revenue.

Cost Of 9 Million.

Estimated cost to the Dominion Government for implementing the report in 1940 was $9,000,000 but on the basis of new figures this would be completely absorbed in 1941.

Under the Sirois plan, Ontario and British Columbia are the only provinces not entitled to a national adjustment grant.

This situation is maintained under the revised financial statistics tabled in the House by Mr. Ilsley. But changes are made in the estimated adjustment grants which should be payable under the scheme to five other provinces.

Quebec, $8,500,000 ($8,000,000); Saskatchewan, $2,300,000 ($1,750,000), with an emergency grant of $2,000,000 being continued; New Brunswick, $1,900,000 ($1,500,000); Nova Scotia, $1,100,000 ($800,000); Prince Edward Island, $800,000 ($750,000).

Manitoba's estimated grant for 1939, $2,100,000 and Alberta's $2,200,000, would remain unchanged on the basis of 1940 estimates.

Q. "Representatives of the United States, Britain and the Netherlands have been holding conferences in Washington to strengthen south sea defences. At what country do they aim?"

A. "Perhaps Japan. If such is the case, no such preparations are necessary because Japan has not taken any action in the Pacific or South Seas calculated to cause any feeling of unrest in the United States or Britain."

Q. "Lord Halifax at Washington told newspaper men Britain is strengthening and expanding armaments in the Far East. Is Britain actually taking such steps?"

A. "Britain seems to be doing so. If Britain propagandizes in such a way as to cry 'wolf, wolf' when there is no wolf, I consider it unnecessary and deplorable. It is most dangerous in international relations for countries to mutually misunderstand, falling into illusions and making preparations for situations not existing. Dispatch of Japanese troops to Indo-China may have been stimulated to some extent, but it was part of the action against the Chungking regime."

(Travellers arriving in Shanghai from Saigon were reported today to have said that Japan's military and political grip on French Indo-China is being strengthened daily and that troops which entered under the cloak of mediation were dictating the colony's internal and external affairs.)

Buttons.

A pin of distinction, having a diameter of seven-eighths of an inch no less, will soon be seen on the clothes of a good percentage—we hope—of P.C.I.'s students. This pin is being awarded to all student who have sold at least eight dollars worth of War Savings Stamps or Certificates during the month that began on January 28. A brown hand giving the well known "Thumbs Up" sign is on a white background. Printed in red letters across the bottom of the button are the words "War Saver." It is also noteworthy that the pin is small enough to be neat on one's clothing, but is also large enough to draw everyone's attention to the fact that you are "doing your bit." Our parents will soon be wearing one of these pins—if they are not already doing so—and we believe that there will be quite a few one hundred per cent War Savings families in Peterborough. Don Metheral announced that the school had received a supply of badges and some students will be receiving them in the near future.

Scene Construction.

We will now give credit to the silent servants—those who labour day and night making scenery and all its component parts. When we go to see a play we admire the scenery but usually have no kind thoughts for the long hours spent by the exasperated staff.

Every piece of scenery—no matter how beautiful it may be has for its humble beginning, a wooden frame. These are built by the boys in the woodworking shop who may console themselves by the thought that their work is the first step towards completion. The frames are then covered with cotton after the manner of ancient airplanes. After a dash of casein paint to tighten up the cotton and to form a base for the intricate colour designs that follow, the road is clear for the layout engineers. The designers ransack several architectural magazines in order to find the best effect. This designing is all on paper and must be adapted full-scale to the frames by the layout engineers. The layout engineers now turn their talents to painting. They are very versatile, you see. One week is now zealously devoted to the actual scene painting. There is always a complete supply of paints of all colors—colors that will paint anything from fireplaces to oak-panelling. At present the frames may be seen here and there throughout the basement of the school. When the scenes have been completed there is always, or usually, a misfortune that causes much gnashing of teeth. This is the rent in the cotton—now gleaming forth in all its glory—caused by someone inadvertently kicking their foot through the covering or by hitting the frame against a protuberance while transporting it from the workshops to the stage. After this has been duly repaired the completed frames are set upon the stage to get the final effect. Almost immediately, however, the stage hands make a concerted rush for the frames in order to see how quickly they may be changed to make room for the next setting. This routine is practised over and over, finally resulting in a close co-operation between the stage hands.

Then comes the first night of the play! The props are changed quickly we know, but how is it done so quietly? One would expect to hear a loud thumping and rumbling backstage that even the orchestra could not blot out. Here's the secret: Everyone wears rubber-soled shoes. This simple remedy enables the boys to walk normally and quietly while the scenery is being changed.

All good things receive their just reward, it is said, but the scenery molds and rots in the storeroom for years to come. All who are helping construct the scenery will have their efforts acknowledge by admittance to the dance held after the play on Friday, March 7.

Orchestra.

We have always been indebted to the school orchestra as a source of good news, and, on the school's behalf, as a source of entertainment.

In order that an orchestra may be entertaining it is necessary for the members thereof to practice consistently. So far, conscientious work has been the aim of all the orchestra members.

At present the period of practice are from four to six p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursday and Fridays.

Since the auditorium is used on Tuesdays and Thursdays for play practice the orchestra members have to carry chairs, music stands, instruments and what not to Miss Weddell's room, where they assemble for a session behind a locked door. The reason for the locked door is plain. If inquisitive pupils were to enter the room to watch the proceedings, a cramped atmosphere would result because the dimensions of the room are limited.

By now, organization is complete, so it is possible for us to tell you who's who. Mr. Maybee conducts the orchestra and plays one of the two pianos—the other being played by Thelma Zavitz. The piano which is at present on the stage will be removed to the orchestra pit for the play.

Teasettes.

"The challenge is accepted!" Such were the words flung to the four winds by Mac Powell of V A Academic. The occasion was a challenge to a paper duel between XII A Academic and V A. Alden Gourley cast down a black glove (used as a gauntlet as of old) in traditional fashion and opened the great contest. Some last minute investigation disclosed the fact that XII A was well ahead in the contest in the first day but perhaps Monday may bring action from the Fifth Formers. It is to be hoped that other forms follow this example.

A curious and disconcerting ticking and clicking has been heard in some rooms during the past week. The teachers in charge are evidently unaware of this disturbance and since the leathal weapons are still in circulation. The innards of old alarm clocks have been converted into a form of plaything indulged in by some infantile fourth formers. The alarm clapper makes a pleasing sound on an inkwell or desk to the operator's ears but certainly not to the hardworking, unwilling audience. Clocks have been used for many ridiculous things but this tops all. Perhaps a private playroom could be found for the culprits.

Hugh Kenner was a direct cause for the stiffening of chins and the steadiness in the rank at bayonet drill on Friday afternoon. A photoflash picture was taken of the company and provided a picture unequaled in school cadet life.

The officers' training course got away to a good start on Thursday afternoon. Many young prospects turned up to make up for the older officers who were absent.

Students of the Middle and Upper schools have a chance of leaving school in an authorized manner at Easter. To accomplish this, the boys must plan to enter a factory producing war materials, to work on a farm, or to enlist for military training. There are several stumbling blocks before one is eligible to leave school however. The pupil must have been in regular attendance throughout the school year, must attain at least 50 per cent in each subject after Easter examinations, and must also stay at his occupation for at least eight weeks. There are many advantges to this plan since the person may earn an appreciable amount of money for his work and may also satisfy himself as to which vocation he is best adapted. Many country students, as well as those living in the city, will probably make good use of this plan.

Tickets for the dramatic club's production, "She Stoops To Conquer," by Oliver Goldsmith, have been issued to the form representatives. A hint of the plot of the play as well as some interesting facts about it were told to the student body by Miss White on Friday morning. The play is but two short weeks away so get your tickets now. There are three prizes to be given for the three students selling the most tickets. These are $3, $2 and $1 respectively. There will be one admission ticket given free for each pupil selling $5 worth of tickets and two free admission tickets for each pupil selling $10 worth. We have read the play and can assure you that it will be very worthwhile as presented by the Dramatic Club. The actors and actresses are giving up a lot of their time for the success of the production and will be in tip-top shape by March 6.

Lindsay bowed in defeat before two more powerful P.C.I. basketball teams. P.C.I. basketeers hit their stride the last two games and won comfortably on Friday night. The juniors won by the score of 27 to 17 and the seniors swamped their opponents by the lopsided tally of 55 to 11. Congrats to both our teams. A short dance was held after the game and lunch was served in the gril's gym.

Atlantic in connection with aid-to-Britain effort. "It is a race between Germany and our British air program."

The Nazi purpose, Simpson said, "is to achieve a negotiated peace with Britain which would consolidate German continental victories.

"Our purpose is to avert just that by providing Britain soon enough and in adequate amount the 'tools,' as Prime Minister Winston Churchill has put it, to finish the job of defeating Germany utterly."

But what concerns all observers, he said, is that once Germany has struck the blow or blows of this year for which she is making ready, "will Britain be too exhausted to carry the war victoriously back at her enemy, even if England itself survives?"

War Orders Load Every Small Machine Shop

OTTAWA, Feb. 22.—(CP).—Munitions Minister Howe says that war orders have provided capacity work for every small machine shop in the Dominion, but that necessity for speed and economy has dictated concentration of many large industries in the central provinces.

This was his answer, given in the House of Commons yesterday, to urgings from Opposition members and Government supporters alike that new industries be more widely distributed, east and west.

Yesterday's short sitting was featured by an outburst of criticism and personalities from J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouta), directed against ministers and officials of the government, which drew a rebuke from Defence Minister Ralston and Opposition Leader Hanson.

The remainder of the sitting was devoted to discussion of the activities of the munitions and supply department with Mr. Howe undergoing a clsoe examination as to details.

Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South), George Cruickshank (Lib. Fraser Valley) and Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminster) protested that British Columbia's productive re-

Even leaders of the Government Party in Bulgaria expressed fear that there would be internal disorders when the Nazis finally crossed the river. In Ruse, likely to be the first Bulgarian city entered, there was a demonstration attributed by the authorities to "Communists."

In Bucharest, Rumania, German motorized equipment filled all the available garages, overflowed into the streets, jammed the public squares and even stood parked on the sidewalks. German mechanics set up portable workshops in the streets to give the tanks a final checkup.

In the Rumanian oil fields all schools were ordered closed by March 3, so they may be used as hospitals. All medical students were ordered mobilized for State services.

Peace Sought In CRU Quarrel

TORONTO, Feb. 22—(CP).—Members of the Canadian Rugby Union will meet here today at the C.R.U.'s annual meeting to consider one of the most important problems with which they ever have been faced—the problem of whether or not eastern and western rugby football officials can come to terms acceptable to both, and thus bring Western Canada back into the C.R.U.

In private session yesterday, members of the C.R.U. executive met with two westerners, Frank Hannibal of Winnipeg and John Thompson of Calgary. Hannibal is president of the Winnipeg Rugby Football Club, Thompson president of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, which broke with the C.R.U. in December over refusal of the C.R.U. to sanction an east-west football final. They were invited to the meeting in an attempt to patch up that rift.

Reason for the break was a section in the C.R.U. constitution ruling that to qualify for playoff competition a team or union must play C.R.U. rules during the playing season. The west, with its own playing code developed over the past five years differing from C.R.U. rules in blocking and forward passing regulations, refused to change its style of play.

Before the annual meeting, a session of the rules committee will be held in private.

Al Hostak K.O's Detroit Negro

Hostak, weighing 160¾ to his opponent's 159½, uncorked a smashing two-handed attack from the first bell, dropping Burnette twice before putting him away for the full count after 1 minute and 50 seconds of the first round. Burnette who had never before been knocked out in three years of battling, did not land a punch.

Gunnard Barlund, veteran trial horse heavyweight from Finland, took a close decision in a ten-round semi-windup bout from Altus Allen, young Chicago negro, Barlund, weighing 196 to his opponent's 187, lost the first three rounds as Allen landed repeatedly with left jabs and straight rights to the face.

But the battle-scarred Finn kept boring in, took the next three rounds with a two-handed attack to the body and face, and then built up a slight edge to the finish of a bout in which neither man scored a knockdown.

ATTEND THE SERVICES IN YOUR CHURCH TO-MORROW

Observance Of Lord's Day Is Vital To Christianity

By REV. E. R. JAMES

I was in the spirit on the Lord's Day.—Rev. 1; 10.

The times were very dark for the Christian Church when these words were written. The writer, St. John, the beloved disciple, is in exile on the Island of Patmos. He is alone, yet not alone for the Lord Jesus is near to him. "I was in the spirit." he reminds us. He was in a state of spiritual exaltation, realizing the Presence of God in his soul and mind. It was the still small voice speaking to him and encouraging him and his brethren to hold up their heads and to stand fast in the day of horror for their redemption draweth nigh.

"On The Lord's Day." Dr. Deissman in his entrancing work, "Light From The Ancient East," gives a helpful and interesting interpretation of the expression, "The Lord's Day." It is a rare Greek word meaning "belonging to the Lord." The day belonged to the Lord and according to most conservative scholars it is very probably our Sunday, the first day of the week. He places great stress upon the fact that the whole expression is saturated with the idea of Christian worship of the Lord and that it commemorates the resurrection of the Lord Jesus from the dead.

Jewish Christians in those early days very probably kept the Sabbath from Friday evening to Saturday evening, in accordance with their very earliest training and devotion. But they were Christians also, and early on the first day of the week they met together for "the breaking of bread." We must not forget that the great mass of Christians of that time were workers and slaves. They rose extra early on the Lord's Day and met together for worship and then returned to their work and labor. The Apostolic Christians felt instinctively that they had the mind of Christ in this observance of the first day of the week, even though they had no direct command. During those early centuries for nearly three hundred years the Church was an illegal society and the men and women who met together in divine worship knew that they did so at the cost of terrible punishment and even death. From those early Christians we learn that on the Lord's Day, the first day of the week, they met together for worship of the Divine Lord Jesus, the Son of God and the Son of man. It was not till 321 A.D. that the first day of the week became a legal holiday.

It may interest you to know that the Christian Emperors dropped using this Greek word for Lord and chose the Greekword "Despotes." Many Christians in those terrible days of persecution went to their deaths because they would not call Caesar "Lord." The preservation of the Christian faith depended in those days of trouble upon the regular weekly worship of the Lord Christ on "The Lord's Day." It was the day belonging to Him.

We also are passing through terrible days. Our leaders in Canada and in the Old Land are warning us that the storm, the most terrible that any nation ever faced, will soon sweep down in all its fury and horror. God in His great love and mercy saved us as a country and Empire by His marvellous miracle at Dunkirk. Some of us know how close to disaster we were last June. Our children will be taught it till more clearly how God delivered us. Perhaps we are apt to be careless and indifferent again.

The value of Christian character depends upon the public worship of Christian people. Do you seriously prepare for the Lord's Day. What about your Saturday night? Remember the Jewish Sabbath began on Friday evening. The Jewish slave stopped his work at sundown. What a contrast to know that the Christian "wage slave" has to work till late Saturday evening so that he or she is too tired to worship on Sunday. It is your duty and your problem to right this. If Christian people in large numbers refuse to shop on Saturday nights or entertain lavishly on the eve of Sunday the situation would soon change. Do you go to bed early on Saturday evening and rise refreshed to worship on the Lord's Day? This is the ideal.

This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it.

The Golden Text

The Pharisee and publican

Nation Need Not Despair If It Seeks God In Prayer

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL.

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for February 23 is Luke 18, the Golden Text being Luke 11:1, "Lord, teach us to pray.")

MEN OUGHT always to pray, said our Lord, and not to faint. The implication is that we need not despair if we will only seek the Lord in prayer.

Then Jesus told a parable about a judge who feared not God nor regarded man. To this man a widow came asking to be avenged of an enemy. The judge refused to give her justice at first, but later, he thought to himself that she would always be bothering him, so not for the righteousness of her appeal, but for his own selfish desire not to be bothered, he gave her her way.

If this wicked judge would avenge the poor woman for his own selfish reasons, surely the Good God will hear His "own elect" when they cry to Him, said the Lord .

Jesus spake this parable to rebuke those who trusted in their own righteousness and despised others. Two men went up to the temple to pray, He said. One was a Pharisee and, getting as near the altar as he could, he began boasting of his goodness. I thank God I am not as other men, he said, even as this publican. I live a good life; I fast twice a week (the law required him to fast but once a week), and I give part of all I possess in tithes.

The publican, who was despired of his fellow men and had many temptations, did not even lift up his eyes, but standing afar off, smote upon his breast, saying, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

This man, conscious of his sin, was the one the Father heard and answered, rather than the self-righteous Pharisee, Jesus said.

Babes Brought to Jesus.

So much did people love Jesus, that mothers brought their babies to Him, that He might just touch them. The disciples may have thought it was beneath Jesus' dignity to receive these babies who were carried in their mothers' arms. But Jesus called them to Him, saying: "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

Then He told His disciples that unless they received these innocent little ones and became like they, they could not enter into the kingdom.

A rich young man, a ruler, came to Jesus, being troubled because his life was incomplete. "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" he asked. Keep the law, Jesus told him. He answered that he had done so all his life. Then the Lord told him to sell all his riches, distribute them to the poor, and to follow Him. But the rich young ruler felt that was more than he could do, and he went sorrowfully away. What riches of the spirit and satisfaction would this charming young man have received if he had given up his wealth and followed his Master. But he loved riches too much.

"How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Riches are not in themselves harmful, but when one is fonder of his wealth than of his soul's well-being, it is indeed hard, almost impossible, for him to achieve eternal life.

Said Peter, "Lo, we have left all, and followed thee." And Jesus answered, "Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting."

Jesus then tried to tell his followers about His coming trial, scourging and death, but they could not seem to understand. He then took the twelve and started toward Jerusalem, and as they were nearing the city a certain blind man, hearing the noise of many people passing, asked what it was. When they told him he cried out in a loud voice, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me." The disciples tried to hush him, but Jesus heard him, and had him brought before Him. When He heard the man's request He said: "Receive thy sight; thy faith hath saved thee." And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God, and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

Lt.-Col. Hoggard To Visit Salvation Army Corps

The visit of Lieut.-Col. Hoggard, principal of the Salvation Army training school in Toronto, to the local Salvation Army Temple, will be a big event of the week-end.

Lieut.-Col. Hoggard will be at the Temple at 8 o'clock Saturday night and at three services on Sunday. On Sunday afternoon with the service commencing at 3 o'clock, he will speak on the subject, "Light and Shadow." T. J. Carley, K.C., will be chairman, and others who will take part are Alderman Robt. Cotton and Rev. C. C. Boyter, president of the Ministerial Association.

The Temple Musical Group will provide music at all services.

W.M.S. Hears Peace Talk

MILLBROOK, Feb. 22—(ENS).—"Finding the Way Through Prayer" was the theme of the devotional study for the February meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church, held on Wednesday at 3 p.m., with Mrs. Edmund Ball extending the hospitality of her home for the gathering. Twenty-five were present, and the executive was in charge of the program, the president, Mrs. A. L. Sisco, taking the chair.

Mrs. F. L. Edworthy read the lesson. Reports were received from the Sunshine Mission Band, given by Mrs. M. McDowell in the absence of the joint leaders, Mary Burnham and Beatrice McDowell; fourteen meetings were held in 1940, with an average attendance of 20; $22 was raised, by means of fees and candy sales; a hike had been enjoyed with a picnic supper, and the meetings had been featured by worship periods, Bible stories, and the chapter from the study book. Members are connected with the three churches of the village, and are thoroughly interested in the work. "Down Trinidad Way" is the new study book for 1941, and a friend of the young folk will supply them with this; Miss E. L. Hetherington having already given "World Friends" as one of the study collection of stories.

Miss Ethel Hatherly reported 21 copies of the Missionary Monthly taken in 1940, and an equal number of subscribers for 1941. Mrs. Maud Hetherington told of mite-boxes used in 1940 bringing in $7.40, and the boxes were on hand for giving out again on Wednesday for the current year. The secretary, Mrs. H. R. Edmunds, reported $15.84 received in fees, envelopes, etc., at the January meeting and Mrs. Ball read the ten points of the W.M.S. Standard for 1941, the verse being: "Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Mrs. J. McKnight gave the article on "Peace," in Mrs. J. Rowland's absence, and Mrs. F. J. Smith the message on Christian Stewardship, after which the offering was received and dedicated. The securing of a speaker for the Easter thankoffering service was left with the president, and two vice-presidents, and members were reminded of the World Day of Prayer on Friday, February 28, for which the Anglican Auxiliary is hostess this year, the service beginning at 3 p.m.

The report of the recent rally for the W.M.S. of Peterborough Presbyterial was given by Miss Estella Hetherington; Mrs. H. W. Johnston singing, "Come Near Me, O My Saviour," during the In Memoriam section of the interesting story. Three statements were left fresh in mind as the speaker closed; these being based on "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it": 1, Am I willing? 2. The world for Christ; 3, Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

A hearty invitation was extended to all to attend the weekly meeting for Bible study and prayer, held usually at the home of Miss Hetherington, but this week at Miss Libby Russell's, at 7.45 p.m. The hostess served candy during the social hour after the closing hymn and the watchword.

Belgians Rally

CORNWALL, Ont., Feb. 21—(CP)—Recruits for the exiled Belgian government's army will begin to arrive at the central training base here next Tuesday, it was learned today.

Commandant Ganshof Vander Meersch, veteran of the Nazi drive through the Low Countries, is in charge of the camp. He said the exact number to train here is not known yet, but 200 Belgian citizens from many parts of Canada and the United States have already passed their medical tests.

Jesus Calls to Prayer — Scripture—Luke 18. — By Alfred J. Buescher

There was a judge who feared not God, nor regarded man, and to him came a widow who asked to be avenged of an enemy. At first the judge would not listen, but afraid that she might be troublesome, he granted her request.

Mothers brought their babes to Jesus that He might touch them, but were rebuked by the disciples. Jesus called them to Him and said: "Suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

A ruler asked the Master what he should do to inherit eternal life. Jesus told him to keep the laws. He always had, he said. Told to sell all he had, give to the poor and follow Jesus, the man went sorrowing away.

As Jesus and His disciples started toward Jerusalem, a blind man called out to him. "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on on me." Jesus restored his sight, and he glorified God.

"I Had Been Told"

There was one remark made by Hon. R. B. Hanson, leader of the Opposition, which may explain much. It was during an exchange of words with Hon. C. D. Howe. Mr. Hanson had been speaking of the promises which had been made to get various military objectives under way, and Mr. Howe, who probably had access to better sources of information, had informed Mr. Hanson that some of his remarks were not according to fact, or words to that effect.

It was then that Mr. Hanson made use of these few words: "I said I had been told."

It is quite possible those few words could well pass unnoticed, but we regard them as important. Mr. Hanson had been looking for information, and his position appears to be one which it is expected that attacks against the Government and against Government policy should be launched. That has always been the business of the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Hanson can flounder around with the best of them at times, and he would do much better with the assistance of a secretary or two who knew how to secure information and how to put it through the seive and prepare it for presentation.

But this country is at war. In it right up to the neck. In it to the point where the Minister of Finance can hardly tell for certain what extent of our national income he is going to require. In it to the point where people are pledging their money to the Government as they have never done before.

And yet the leader of the Opposition is working just about the same as he might be doing in times when there was no war. He is having recourse, when challenged, to that statement: "I said I had been told."

Told by whom? Mr. Hanson did not say. He might have been repeating the words of a man who knew, or he might have been passing on nothing better than a rumor.

There are two things plainly wrong here.

The first is Mr. Hanson's habit of using information which he has gathered here or there and making public presentation of it on the floor of the House.

The second is that the leader of the Opposition is being denied opportunity to have access to all the information he needs and ought to have. Both Mr. Hanson and the members of the Conservative party and the leaders and members of other groups in the House are as much interested in the outcome of this war as the Prime Minister or members of the Government. The people they represent have just as much at stake as those represented by the Liberals.

That is why we ought to have a drastic change in the way of doing things at Ottawa. The plans which seemed all right in other days are all wrong now. We do not like the picture of a leader of the Opposition party going around seeking information and then seeking to piece it together bit by bit on what "I had been told."

This is not the war of the Canadian Government. It is the war of the Canadian people. It is not a Liberal war, but it is a war of the Liberals, Conservatives, C.C.F., Social Credit advocates or any other party whose representative may have been returned to Ottawa.

Those few words: "I had been told" stand up like a sore thumb indicating something is wrong; indicating that the method of government today is pretty much the same as in days of peace; indicating there is a gulf fixed between Government and Opposition, and indicating that no bridge has yet been thrown across.

We do not suggest that Mr. Hanson or any of his followers should be given preferred treatment in order to bring about their silence. Far from it, but we do contend that the actual situation in the carrying on of this war should be made clear to elected members of Parliament. And we do believe it should be made clear to the leaders at Ottawa that the people of Canada today do not give a damn for politics or political considerations. We are either going to sink or swim. And if we sink the Liberals will go down just as deep as the Conservatives, and the C.C.F. and the Social Credit people will go down to the same depth.

They Asked For It

The German wireless system has announced it will take no more messages from United States after Sunday. It made the offer a week ago to accept on the collect basis messages from people in United States telling what sort of radio program they preferred to hear.

The newspapers were quick to see the opening, and quick also to notice that the Germans had asked for it. So why not let them have it at their own expense. As the New York Herald Tribune stated: "Step up; It's free."

And they stepped up and they sent messages; they dumped them in and poured them in. We learn that many of them were slightly insulting; more of them were decidedly so. They said they would prefer to hear the funeral service of Hitler; would gladly listen to the crack of the gun which killed Goering.

In the reports from Berlin we read that the messages were considered very funny. They asked for it and now they know what people in United States are thinking.

* *

He Wrote a Letter!

Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire advised the Dail (or parliament) at Dublin that he had billed Germany for four ships which had been attacked and sunk.

There were certain rights to which he was entitled under international law and the Prime Minister was going to stand firmly on them possibly with both feet.

We wonder if that deluded individual believes that Germany has any regard for international law?

Or that Hitler will ever pay one red cent to Eire.

Eamon de Valera acts much like a man who is walking around in a haze; like one who is refusing to see things which have been taking place right while he is looking on.

He has seen the little nations of Europe going down like the pins in a bowling alley, and yet he has persisted in his determination to stand by himself. He will have nothing to do with making naval bases available to Britain, from which the submarine warfare of Germany could be attacked.

He persists in leaving his land in an exposed position where German troops could force a landing and have a jumping-off place on the way to an invasion of Britain.

He prefers to write letters and send bills to Hitler asking that he be paid for vessels sunk by German warfare. Our own belief is that he is not only remarkable but remarkably stupid.

* *

He Blames Hitler

Sir Gerald Campbell, British Minister to United States, told a press conference at Washington that it was Hitler who was at the bottom of the disasters which have been heaped upon the Italian army, air force and navy.

According to his version of the arrangement, Hitler was to make an attempt to invade Britain at the same time that the Italian forces started their drive toward Alexandria and the Suez Canal.

It was agreed that in this way Britain would not be able to split her defensive forces, and that one or the other of those campaigns directed against her would succeed.

Graziani waited for Hitler to move, and while the waiting program was on, Wavell's army of the Nile struck, and it was a reinforced army. There was no move on Hitler's part to attack Britain on a scale which would have made the sending out of troops to Africa impossible. It may be that Sir Gerald Campbell is close to the truth. If Hitler let Mussolini down it is a fact he let him a long way down and has done nothing yet to pull him up.

U.S. Versus Germany

Writing in the American Mercury, Fritz Sternberg gives the results of a careful survey of "American Versus German War Potential." The writer claims that warfare of today being so highly mechanized, can be considered in terms of the national capacity for producing those things which are used to carry on war, and he places them on the basis of steel, coal and oil.

Due allowance is made for the moral factors, such as the ability of the British to stand up against punishment, but in the end producing ability is held to be the determining factor.

We learn that the "war potential of United States exceeds that of Germany, even if Hitler should command the entire European continent." The one force with which a reckoning must be made is that Germany had a tremendous head start.

United States leads in steel with a capacity for 85,000,000 tons per year, and there is no basic reason why that could not be stepped up to 100,000,000 tons. Working to the limit of capacity Germany has never produced more than 25,000,000 tons a year. Adding conquered Luxemburg, Belgium and the Netherlands there could be an increase of 17,000,000 tons, making in all 42,000,000. That would leave United States in the lead 85 to 42.

In the supply of coal there is a favorable balance in United States. Germany went into the war with an annual output of 186,000,000 tons. Hitler has conquered nations which are rich in coal and taking the production of all these it would bring the total up to 327,000,000 under Hitler's command, while United States' production is 615,000,000, or approximately two to one.

The ratio of oil is more startling because it is about 20 to 1. United States can produce 200,000,000 tons per year, while Germany has a bare 4,000,000 tons, including synthetic manufacture. If Germany gets all Rumania's oil that would add 6,000,000 tons, so Germany has in sight 10,000,000 tons against the annual production of 200,000,000 in United States.

The one place where Germany is admitted in the lead is in the number of airplanes, the exact figures for which are not known. Germany's advantage is that with France conquered it is possible to make short flights over Britain with the expenditure of comparitively small amounts of fuel. The conclusion of the writer is that in case of war between Germany and United States the advantage would be with the American republic on account of the large amount of fuel oil which would be required to move warships.

GOSSIP

¶ They don't get on so well I heard, 'twas not a very pleasant word, plain scandal so I thought; 'twas passed around by Mr. J., that's what he heard some person say, the gossip that he got.

¶ The talk concerned our Neighbor D, as fine a chap as one could see, he led a humble life; but people started then to talk, it went clean up and down the block, had trouble with his wife.

¶ The next verse in this hymn of hate, said they were going to separate, for there had been a row; they'd tried to patch it up last spring, that really didn't mend a thing, and it was much worse now.

¶ And then I heard the break had come, it was a clean and final one, his wife had left for home; and Neighbor D just moped around, no joy or happiness he found, and he was there alone.

¶ Met up with D the other day, when he was going along my way, his step was smart and quick; his wife was coming home that night, she'd gone through quite a sudden fright, her mother was so sick.

¶ And folk had swallowed all that stuff, and they had used D rather rough, he'd gone through quite a drag; because an idle tale began, and on its way it ran and ran—so silly tongues could wag.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

DURING the past month Canada has been visited by the Ballet Russe, the most important organization of its kind in the world. It is too bad that it is only profitable for companies such as this to be seen in Montreal and Toronto; both those cities have shown an enthusiasm for ballet which would undoubtedly be duplicated in small centres, but is not economically possible to take a company of 125, an orchestra, and several tons of scenery to any town for less than a week. But the stir which this recent visit of the Ballet to our two theatrical centres has caused leads me to believe that some readers of this column might like to hear about it.

C & B

Ballet, as we know it, began in 1661 in France, when Louis XIV, who was himself an enthusiastic dancer, founded the Royal Academy of Dancing. It immediately became very popular in Italy, as an adjunct to opera, but it never reached any remarkable development there. It was in Russia during the last century that ballet was raised to the level of a special and exacting art. Although the Imperial regime in Russia was a time of dreadful tyranny and stupidity it had some advantages; the Czars set an example of art patronage which was eagerly followed by the ruling class of extremely wealthy noblemen and merchants, and it was to this state of affairs that we owe most of what is good in Russian music and literature. The Imperial theatres were heavily endowed and were able to monopolize the services of the best actors, singers and dancers, and as the arts were the fashionable hobby of the rich the theatre arts were able to depend on the support of a large cultivated public. This state of affairs may be shocking to the Marxist, but art is likely to flourish in very strange soil, if only it is rich.

C & B

CONNECTED with the Russian Imperial Ballet, which was under the direct patronage of the Czar, were schools for the training of dancers. The children were taken very young, and were trained and educated at the expense of the state; in time they graduated into the Imperial Ballet, and when their days there were over they either retired on a pension or became teachers in the ballet schools. By this expensive but excellent system the best ballet in the world was formed. But Russian ballet was unknown to the rest of the world until 1909, when the Russian impresario, Serge Diaghileff, obtained permission to take a company to Paris, where it created a sensation. This strange man had a genius for making other people work and, although he was not a dancer himself, he was undoubtedly the strongest influence on ballet of our time; when he died in Venice in 1929 it was assumed by many people that ballet had died with him. They were wrong; no art is ever really dead, and in 1932 a Cossack officer, Col. W. de Basil, reformed the Russian Ballet, and it is he who manages it to this day. His company are refugees, of course, for modern Russia is not interested in classical ballet. Some of the modern dancers are English, and two of the present company are Canadians; but it is still the Russian Ballet, for the tradition is still that of the Imperial schools.

C & B

You may say at this point: Why all this fuss about dancing? Is it so important? Most people find the answers to these questions the first time they see the Russian Ballet. I have never met anyone who liked it and I have known scores of people who are more enthusiastic about it than about anything else. Ballet supplies so many wants. It is the ideal entertainment, for it requires a minimum of effort on the part of the spectator. It gives a lot for one's money, for it combines music, dancing and acting. It is exciting and refreshing, and it is a superb display of skill. It has, in fact, got everything.

C & B

Personally, I find one of the greatest pleasures of going to the ballet the fact that there one can see one hundred young men and women in the perfection of health and physical beauty. To dance as they do requires a remarkable physical development and great beauty of proportion. Health is always attractive, and when it is blended with beauty the combination is irresistible.

C & B

In Toronto and Montreal the Russian Ballet played to packed houses. In a way this was remarkable at a time when the government is appealing to us for every penny we can spare to further Canada's war work. I doubt if any other attraction than the ballet could have done it. Ballet, more than any other form of entertainment, has the capacity to make us forget, and even the most serious-minded of us must want to escape from the contemplation of war sometimes. Nowhere could forgetfulness be wooed more aptly than in a theatre where the Oriental fantasy "Scheherazade" is being danced, or the Russian allegory "Petrouchka." These, and a dozen or so others, aroused an enthusiasm which seemed strange in normally undemonstrative Canadians. It provoked the reflection that possibly a resemblance in climate brought about a resemblance of taste between Canadians and Russians, and that the ballet, now exiled from its own land, had found especially responsive audience in us.

THE U-BOAT THAT GOT AWAY

—London Illustrated.

• Not the Year for Spending

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir,—Can you tell me what became of our good aldermen that were supposed to run the city's business and look after the electors' interests?

We are not surprised at the Board of Education asking for a larger grant, they always have a high handed manner of their own, but the council doesn't need to give them or any one else what they ask for. I notice the School Board expect expect 300 new families with of course some children to go to school. But the people who come here to work prefer to live in some small village even to 40 or 50 miles away where it is cheaper. All they want is what they can take out of Peterborough. And who benefits by your trade school? The factories. Those little boys go in to work at half the wages of a man and once they are 21 when they can command a man's wages they are told they are too old.

You will notice in Toronto the council cut the estimates of the Board of Education and no argument—take it or leave it. Also civic salaries $10,000 and looked after the little surplus in every department, as one alderman remarked he didn't like to see two or three thousand dollars lying around for any one to play with.

But our council doesn't know what to do with the money this year, spending right and left. I would like to know what axe Alderman Cotton has to grind that he is so generous with other people's money. Who pays this money and all this heedless waste? The little taxpayer, the individual home owner. And what happens to him if he can't pay? Why the city has conveniently provided a man to call and dun you every month and if he can't get it they seize your property and sell it.

If the civic employees are not satisfied with their present salaries let them resign and see how quickly their places will be filled with competent men who will be glad to do the work without two or three assistants.

Your premier has told us to be very careful in all our expenditures as we don't know what day we will be called on for more if we are to win this war. Every one is trying to give all they can and do their best and there isn't any one who would want to bother the government at a time like this with a petition for an investigation, but there is a limit to all things and every one should be doing all they can for the common good of the country.

SUCH THINGS TO SAY!

MUSSOLINI has about as much conscience as a hog at the swill-trough, which always is anxious to get as much of the swill as possible, and to get it tries to shove the other hogs away from the trough.

Mussolini did not know how to let well-enough alone. Greedy, like a hog, his greed has been the means of his undoing.

It becomes more and more clear that Mussolini is one of the most ridiculous of contemporary figures, and that his apparent success in the past has been nothing but the achievement of bluff. Now that his bluff has been called by England, he is seen to hold very poor hands.

Mussolini will make merely a footnote to history. His name will not go thundering down the ages as a modern Caesar. He will be remembered, so far as he is remembered, merely as an ass who wore for a time a lion's skin, and gave a very fair imitation of a lion's roar.—San Francisco Argonaut.

POOR STUFF

THESE Jehovah's Witness people are brave fellows, moving from place to place under cover of darkness to distribute their subversive pamphlets on door-steps and, as it has been revealed in one Western Ontario city, employing an eight-year-old boy to do their dirty work for them.

The joke of it all is that no person pays any attention to the literature after they have gone to so much trouble to distribute it. The patent medicine almanacs are much more readable and popular.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

A Bit of Nonsense

A Pot Shot

A man on holiday had been told he would find splendid sport on the lower reaches of the creek and along the lagoons bordering the river.

Gun in hand, he wandered for miles without getting a shot, and was crossing a bridge on the way back to the hotel in the late afternoon when he met a small freckled boy.

"Is there anything to shoot about here?" he asked.

The boy scowled thoughtfully and shook his head. Then his face brightened up.

"Here's the schoolmaster coming across the bridge now!" he exclaimed.

Now We Know

"A clerk is a man who knows a great deal about very little, and who goes on knowing more and more about less and less, until finally he knows everything about practically nothing.

"A manager is a man who knows very little about a great deal and who goes on knowing less and less about more and more until finally he knows nothing about practically everything."

To Celebrate Diamond Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huycke (SEATED) of Hastings, who are on Sunday celebrating their diamond wedding. Mr. Huycke comes of United Empire Loyalist descendants who first settled in Prince Edward county, and Mrs. Huycke was born in Millbrook. They are shown ABOVE with their minister and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Glover.

Pioneer Hastings Couple Celebrate Diamond Anniversary On Sunday

Mr. Huycke was born in Percy township 86 years ago, a descendant of United Empire Loyalists, and a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Huycke.

In 1667 three brothers, including Mr. Huycke's great grandfather, sailed from Holland and settled in the New England States. After the war of 1812 Mr. Huycke's grandfather, the father of 13 children, 7 girls and 6 boys, refused to live under any flag other than the Union Jack, and like many more, was forced to seek a new home in Canada. These thousands of people became known in history by the honourable name as the United Empire Loyalists. His grandfather first settled in Hillier township, Prince Edward county, between Lake Ontario and Weller's Bay. Here, trees had to be felled and the ground cleared, first for the building of the log shanty, then for the seeding. Wolves, too, were numerous.

Pancakes and Fish.

Mr. Huycke recalls his father telling how the grandparents lived on buckwheat pancakes and fish, and how the grandfather rowed a family across Lake Ontario from United States to Canada and how he rowed a boat load of pork all the way from Kingston to Toronto.

When Mr. Huycke's father was married he desired a home of his own and settled on the farm now owned by William McGee of Percy township. Wanting to live nearer the water he later moved near Trent River on the farm where Mr. Huycke was born 86 years ago.

Never seriously ill during his life, Mr. Huycke enjoys the best of health, and despite his advanced age, is wonderfully active and exceptionally young looking. He attributes his longevity to his regular habits, and is proud to belong to a family who have lived to ripe old ages. His mother lived to be 96, his father 85 and grandfather 80. Of a family of five only one brother remains, Taylor Huycke of Hastings.

Born In Millbrook.

Mrs. Huycke was formerly Jane Elizabeth Berry, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Luke Berry, and was born in Cavan in the village of Millbrook on Sept. 22nd, 1856.

At the age of 16 years she moved with her parents to the Oak Hills line, near Warkworth. All the members of her family have passed on, the last one, Dr. J. D. Berry, of Willowdale, died in May, 1940. Mrs. Huycke is the centre of a large number of friends, and is a person of a very sweet and charming personality and a conventionalist of the refreshing type. When the Examiner correspondent called at her home, although not in the best of health, she was busy knitting socks for the soldiers and proudly remarked that she had recently finished making buttonholes on Red Cross garments.

Married in Bride's Home.

Their wedding of 60 years ago took place at the home of the bride's parents near Warkworth, where 20 guests assembled to participate in the event. Rev. Mr. Cragg officiated. Their attendants were the bride's sister, Miss Margaret Berry (the late Mrs. A. C. Mallery) and the groom's brother, W. W. Huycke. Only two of the guests who were present at the wedding of 60 years ago, remain, Mrs. Manley Scott, of Picton, a cousin of Mr. Huycke, and J. D. Armstrong, of Millbrook, a cousin of Mr. Huycke.

As a birde, Jane Elizabeth Berry was dressed in a brown walking-length gown made with a tight waist and trimmed with velvet.

Excepting for the past two years, which were spent in the village of Hastings, they lived all their married life on the Huycke homestead overlooking the Trent river.

Mr. Huycke's prized possessions are pictures of the old homestead, including one of the old frame dwelling where he was born, and a later one of the picturesque modern home built in 1914, surrounded by beautiful trees and shrubbery, located near the Trent, and which is known to many tourists as "Sunny Brae."

Mrs. Huycke has relics of bygone days and has in her possession crystal candle-holders belonging to her grandmother and a plate bearing the inscription, "A good mother makes a happy home," received as a wedding gift 60 years ago.

Mr. Huycke is able to look back with pleasant memories to his school days spent in Fleming's school. Among some of his school mates who are still living are Mrs. James Johnston, who recently celebrated her 85th birthday, and three brothers, Dr. John Brown of Missouri, William Brown and Fred Brown of Seymour.

He can well remember when the farms were not equipped with modern machinery and when grain was cut with a cradle, raked by hand and bound by hand; when Hastings was known as 'Crook's Rapids'; Campbellford as 'The Bridge,' and when Meyersburg was more thriving than Campbellford.

To their union were born five children, four of whom are living: Mae at home, Violet, Mrs. P. C. Watt of Winnipeg, Lois, Mrs. L. A. Gould, of Stayner, and Cecil at home; also five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

MILLBROOK

Grace LA Holds Knitting Bee

MILLBROOK, Feb. 22—(ENS).—Mrs. A. Coyte entertained a number of the ladies from Grace Presbyterian Ladies' Aid at her home, north of the village, on Tuesday at the noon hour, the substantial meal being followed with a social time during the afternoon, knitting for the soldiers keeping fingers busy for the enjoyable occasion.

Guests included: Mrs. F. W. Johnson, Mrs. Suttie Pritchard, Mrs. J. R. Thompson, Miss Mina Gibson, Mrs. S. E. Eakins, Mrs. I. W. Larmer, Mrs. J. Burns and Mrs. George Bothwell.

Pot luck suppers have been popular with various societies and groups in the community lately, the one on Monday evening in the basement of St. Andrew's church, sponsored by the Young Peoples' Union, Gordon Might, president, proving well attended and enjoyable.

It was followed by games and a social time, the recreational convener, Margaret Armstrong, looking after the former. Membership is drawn from the three churches of the community, and the young people are carrying on with success and helpfulness this season.

Grace W.M.S. Meets

Mrs. A. R. Gibson took the chair for the February meeting of Grace Presbyterian W.M.S., held on Wednesday, at 3 p.m., at the home of Mrs. S. E. Eakins, Anne street.

The daily prayers from the Glad Tidings were read by the members, in turn, after the call to worship had been given by the leader, who closed the period with prayer. An In Memoriam service was led by Mrs. Gibson, in memory of a faithful member, the late Mrs. E. Syer, Mrs. J. R. Thompson singing an appropriate solo, after all had remained standing for one minute's silent tribute to the deceased.

The roll was answered with facts about Bible characters, and discussion of the contents for the annual bale took up some time, Mrs. Coyte announcing that an outfit for an eight-year old girl is the requirement this year. The items of the treasurer's report were given by Miss Agnes Johnston, and proved satisfactory, Mrs Gibson following with an outline of the work for the current year, the programs, and the places where meetings are to be held.

Mrs. Thompson gave an article on "Home Helpers," which proved very interesting and informative, reader adding practical suggestions by way of comment on the material presented. A hymn and the Lord's Prayer closed the meeting, after which Mrs. Eakins and her daughter, Miss Mary, served homemade candy, and a social hour was enjoyed.

Percy W.I. Holds Pot Luck Dinner

WARKWORTH, Feb. 22.—(ENS) —Owing to road and weather conditions there was just a fair attendance at pot-luck dinner held in the Council Chamber for the Percy Women's Institute on Wednesday afternoon. During the afternoon in addition to the regular business meeting presided over by the president, Mrs. Lorne Hutchison, two quilts were completed. One was donated to a family recently burned out, the other one will be given to the Red Cross.

The paper on the motto "A Parent's Life is a Child's Copy Book," presented by Mrs. Fred Denike, was much enjoyed. Parents, said the speaker, should aim first of all to build a noble character.

The roll call was answered by a home remedy and several good hints were given.

The members paid tribute of respect to the memory of Mrs. H. Nelson who died recently by two minutes' silence and singing the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds." The members were asked to remember Mrs. Joseph Greenly, who is in Belleville Hospital, with cards and letters.

The sum of $15.00 has been raised to help equip a room in a hospital in England. A letter of appreciation from H. Nelson and family was read.

A program of community singing and a vocal solo by Miss Helen Black brought to a close a very interesting meeting.

Coveted Goods

Shanghai, Feb. 22 (AP)

REPORTS from Hanoi, French Indo-China, last night said Japanese demands for $10,000,000 worth of United States and Chinese-owned goods stored in Haiphong warehouses had caused a serious dispute between Japanese and Indo-China authorities.

Japanese military authorities were said to want the French to requisition the goods, which included American trucks, tires and other materials intended for the Chinese, and then turn them over the Japanese. Indo-China authorities refused.

In retaliation, the reports said, Japanese guards around the warehouses were strengthened so as to prevent removal of any supplies, even those requisitioned by Indo-China.

Hanoi observers said the Japanese appeared to be keeping a close grip on the goods so they could seize them quickly in the event of war in the Pacific.

5-Point Anti-T.B. Program Urged

TORONTO, Feb. 22 — (CP). — An anti-tuberculosis program, emphasizing five points, was suggested to the Ontario Legislature yesterday by Dr. A. C. Trottier (Lib., Essex North).

Dr. Trottier urged:—

More frequent tuberculin tests of children, to be followed, if possible, by X-rays.

(During 1940 Provincial clinics operated from Toronto, Ottawa, Belleville, Timmins, and North Bay, visiting 34 centres. They made 23-105 X-ray examinations, 1,775 chest examinations, and found 197 active cases of tuberculosis. Another 1,044 cases were listed for further study.)

Slip In Figures

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 (CP).—Canada's cost-of-living index, compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, advanced to 108.3 in January compared with 108 in December, 1940, and, the bureau said today, the January level represents a rise in prices of 7.4 per cent since August, 1939.

In a story on the cost-of-living index yesterday The Canadian Press erroneously reported the price rise since last August as 17.3 per cent.

Havelock Group Hold Quiltings

HAVELOCK, Feb. 22—(ENS). — Group meetings of the United church were held this week on Wednesday afternoon. The west end group, with Miss Etta Crawford as leader, met at the home of Mrs. McLauchlin; the centre group, with Mrs. Charles Roberts as leader, at the home of Mrs. Joseph Little, and the east end group, Miss Mary Seeney as their leader, met at the home of Mrs. Gardener. All three meetings were well attended, and quilting was the work of the afternoon. Refreshments were served at each home, by a committee in charge of the lunch.

The meetings proved to be a great success. The groups meet every two weeks at the different homes.

The Parish Guild of St. John's Anglican church held a Pot Luck supper, after their meeting, on Thursday afternoon, each member inviting friends.

The afternoon was spent in making quilt blocks, to make gifts for the British refugees. The pot luck supper was served at 5 o'clock, with a charge of 15 cents. The proceeds amounted to $5.00. It was suggested that the Guild sponsor a pot luck supper once a month.

Boys Appreciate NewsFromHome

The fact that Peterborough news is appreciated among the boys serving in England is again displayed in a letter the Examiner has received from L.-Sergt. Shaw of C Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

"My sister sends the papers quite regularly," the soldier writes, "and although they are sometimes from three weeks to a month old when I get them, we appreciate them, and without them we would not know what is going on in our home town, Peterborough."

The letter proceeds and tells how the papers are passed on from one hand to another, all interested readers.

The Y.M.C.A. is doing such fine work overseas that Sergt. Shaw stresses it particularly in his letter, the soldiers are not the only ones to benefit, the civilian population is also helped.

The tea, biscuits and cigarettes supplied by the Y.M.C.A. for the soldiers never cease to be appreciated, and they are mentioned again in this letter.

P. C. I. BASKETBALL TEAMS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM LINDSAY BOYS

Seniors Swamp Visitors By Score 55-11

Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School's two boy basketball teams won a double-header from the junior and senior fives representing Lindsay Collegiate here last night.

The Senior P.C.V.S. squad swamped the visitors 55 to 11, while the Juniors won handily by 27 to 17.

In the senior argument, Peterborough team was too strong in all departments for the Lindsay students, although the latter never stopped trying. Coach Bamforth's squad handled the ball smartly, broke fast and made the best possible use of their scoring opportunities. The result was that the Lindsay team was never in the picture. P.C.I. pressed from the start and with Eric Taylor leading the attack by looping in five baskets from the field piled up a lead of 29 to 7 at the half. P.C.V.S. continued to roll through the second half, adding another 26 points to their total, while Lindsay were held to four points, baskets by Magee and Callaghan saving them from a shutout. It was the third win of the current campaign for the Peterborough team.

Taylor with eighteen points led the scoring for the winners. Chum Gillespie dropped in six baskets to give him a 12 point total, Hall had five field baskets, and a successful foul shot for 1, and Ferguson contributed four baskets to the total. Graham headed the Lindsay scoring with three points. A feature of the game was that only one free shot on each side was converted into a point.

The teams:

Peterborough C.V.S. 55—Hall 11, Taylor 18, Gillespie 12, Ferguson 8, Amys, Kay, Moore, Matthews 6.

The Lindsay-Peterborough junior game was a much more even battle. P.C.V.S. had a considerable edge in the first half when they outscored Lindsay 18 to 10, but the visitors came back with plenty of fight in the second half, and only a margin of one basket separated the two teams' scoring efforts in that session, the Peterborough team ringing up 9 as against 7 by the visitors to leave the final score 27 to 17. Gardner led the attack for the winners, tossing in four baskets and adding another basket from the field in the second half to make him top scorer of the game with 11 points. Saunders with six was second high for the Peterborough C.V.S., while Stewart supplied the most of Lindsay's scoring power. He shot three through the hoop in the first half and came back with another pair in the second session to give him 10 points.

The teams:

Peterborough C.V.S. 27 — Richardson 3, Gardner 11, McTavish 2, Saunders 6, Dinsdale 3, Newton 2, Lillico, Routley.

Lindsay Collegiate 17—Hamilton 2, Goodyear 4, Ellis, Anderson, McConnell, Mackay, Stewart 10, Kirlef, K. Anderson 1, Moore.

St. John's Win Surprise For Westclox

In the only game played in the Ladies Basketball League in the Y.W.C.A. gym last night, St. John's threw a bomb into the camp of the Westclox team by defeating the league leaders 20 to 16 in an exciting battle. The church team won the decision on the strength of their first period 8 to 4 margin over the clockmakers, as the teams broke even in the matter of scoring in the second half.

The first game, scheduled for last night between Quaker Cubs and 'Y' Cadets was defaulted by the Cadets who could not field a team.

St. John's had only five players in uniform in their battle with Westclox but it was enough to win for them, the church team playing some of its best basketball of the season. Agnes Bowler, who tossed in six baskets and converted a free throw was the sparkplug of the winners' attack and her accurate shooting was the big factor in the defeat of the Westclockers.

The scoring aces of the losers were held more closely in check than usual and none of them wash able to run up a score.

St. John's started fast and by half time had doubled the score. Agnes Bowler scored two baskets from the field and a free throw, Doreen Groombridge contributed a basket and U. Chivas a foul shot score for eight points altogether, while the best the Westclox team could produce was two baskets, J. C. Crowe and D. Gibbs hitting the hoop.

In the final half both teams speeded up their attack and both were successful in picking up twelve points, Agnes Bowler again setting the pace for her team with four baskets.

St. John's (20)—E. Harte-Maxwell, U. Chivas 3, Agnes Bowler 13, T. Law, D. Groombridge 4.

Westclox (16)—B. Saunders 2, J. Crowe 2, A. Flynn 1, F. Bestard 2, E. Craig 4, H. Tighe 1, E. Bestard, D. Gibbs 4, J. Carter.

Baseball Magnates Ask No Preference

NEW YORK, Feb. 22—(AP). — Baseball still is dead set against asking favors from the army draft.

A report that Hank Greenberg of Detroit Tigers was seeking occupational deferment has been declared unfounded and executives of Detroit and other clubs in the big leagues reiterated today their policy of letting the axe of selective service fall where it may.

Connie Mack, pilot of the Philadelphia Athletics, exemplified the attitude of the major league magnates when he told The Associated Press:

"Under no circumstances would we ask for a deferment. If we lose a man we lose him, that's all."

Jack Zeller, general manager of the Tigers, said he had been instructed long ago by President Walter O. Briggs that the Detroit club was to "let the draft problem take its course without any suggestion from us."

The Petes will now have to do it the hard way. After getting the edge on the group playoff series by beating the Combines in Kingston Wednesday night the local squad tossed away that advantage by losing here 6 to 4 in the second game of the round last night and now they are faced with the necessity of winning another game in Kingston. The third game will be played in the Limestone City on Monday night and the fourth back here on Wednesday. All season it has been the Petes who flashed through with the scoring punch in the final period. Last night, however, it was the Combines who had the extra zip in the dying stages. With ten minutes to go the home talent were in front 3 to 2. Then came a Kingston surge in the final ten minutes that saw them slap in four goals as against one by the homesters, and a game that would have meant a lot to the Petes slipped out of their clutches.

* * * * * *

There were several factors in this reverse. The Petes lay the blame on the fact that the ice softened quickly and was very heavy in the last period. Light, fast and clever stickhandlers, the Petes forwards are handicapped when the going is bad and that was undoubtedly the case last night. In addition to that Coach Wallie Elmer, cagey veteran of the ice wars, pulled some effective strategy by using four and sometimes five forwards and re-shifting his lineup so that eventually he moved Mel Williamson back to the defence and sent Bobby Neilson to centre. It is an unsual move to take your scoring ace off the attacking division but Elmer did it and won so he's entitled to the credit. His tactics gave Kingston plenty of speed and it counted in the run down the stretch and on top of that the Kingston attackers were smart on their scoring opportunities and finished off their plays smoothly.

* * * * * *

Although a little bit disgusted at dropping the advantage gained by their 2 to 1 win in Kingston, the Petes are not down-hearted. They are going back to Kingston Monday determined to regain the lost ground by another victory right in front of the Kingston fans and then settle the argument here Wednesday night. Giving the Combines credit for cashing in on their opportunities last night the Peterborough squad declare that they can play more consistently good hockey than they dished out last night and that they will demonstrate that fact next week. They are working under a handicap of course with the loss of Joe Blewett one of their fastest skaters and always a good money player. But rookie Doug Mortimer has broken into the limelight with some accurate sniping that has given three goals in the two playoff games and Jack Jopling is hitting his stride in great style. The Petes have plenty of fight left and there will be a lot of hectic hockey before the championship of the group is finally decided. It may take five games but the home talent claim they will turn the trick eventually.

* * * * * *

The third game in the group playoffs between Oshawa Bees and Peterborough Colts, scheduled first for last night, has been set for Monday night in Oshawa and Archie Weir's battling young team are going to make a mighty effort to register another win over the team tutored by Frank Black. If they succeed in turning the trick the series will be over and the young Petes can get ready for some new opposition in the provincial playdowns. On the other hand if Oshawa come through with a victory a fourth game will be needed and it will be played here later in the week. The Colts look to have the measure of the Oshawa team having beaten them the last three times out. The scores have been close but the Petes have always had the punch in reserve to take them through these tough games and that is a mighty handy thing for any hockey club to have on tap.

* * * * * *

Bill Walshe in his comment on Wednesday's Kingston-Peterborough clash saw the result thusly: "Call it the break of the play if you wish, but credit the winners, who picked up all the marbles in the opening of the O.H.A. Senior B eastern group finals Wednesday night at the Jock Harty Arena. Famed for their last period push, the Petes clicked for the deciding score in a close puck battle and beat the Kingston Combines by a 2 to 1 score. It was any team's game, with the Petes lucky enough to cash in on a break but the team had to be good to get that break. Peterborough, playing the same system that suits its own home rink, made the most of a sticky ice surface, just checked, checked and checked a little bit more and when Kingston committed its slightest errors of defence, put on the rush for goals. The breaks were few and far between but when Peterborough got them they counted, while the Combines missed. It was a tense test between two well matched teams and Peterborough, on its pestering type of play, managed to squeeze out the skinny edge. Had Kingston been lucky on an odd shot, flipped a puck instead of shooting hard, or just got a casual break for a goal victory might have turned the other way. A good team makes the breaks, they say, and that is exactly what Peterborough did in the third period to get the winning goal."

* * * * * *

Here is what the Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer says: "Jimmy Ellis, in charge of the Petes handled his team well and jockeyed his lines to catch Elmer napping. Ellis started his second string against the Combines first line and the move worked perfectly. Towards the end Wally Elmer was forced to work his front line twice to catch up and this proved to be a back fire because Ellis fired his fresh troops into the fray. Kingdon and Heal combined for the first score, while young Mortimer finished a beautiful play set up by Jopling and Burton. The whole Peterborough club played as a unit, followed instructions perfectly and their close checking really had the Kingston squad out on the limb, with the limb cut off. Kingston scored their only goal near the end of the first period, when White soloed after Petes were a man short. It looked as if the defence were lax on the play but they made amends in the latter stages by giving Harding marvellous protection, who played a smart game all through the piece. It was a happy throng of Petes who trouped out of the rink and the consensus of opinion was they probably could take the Combines in three straight."

* * * * * *

James T. Sutherland, life member of the O.H.A. and "grand old man" of hockey in the Kingston district accompanied the Combines to Peterborough last night and was just as enthusiastic about Canada's winter pastime as he used to be thirty years ago when he led his famous Frontenac juniors into Brock St. Rink and generally went home with the shirts of the local outfit. While it has never been charged against the veteran executive that he ever gave a decision that would hurt any team from his own home town Jim Sutherland has done a great deal for hockey in Eastern Ontario and generally and older fans were glad to see him here and to note his good health and continued interest in hockey.

* * * * * *

Gazing around the Brock St. Rink from the balcony before last night's game got under way the veteran recalled that he had refereed games here thirty-five years ago. "I would love to see this rink replaced by an artificial ice arena with seating accommodation for 3,500 or 4,000," he remarked. "If you had that kind of a rink we could have a great senior group down this way with Oshawa, Peterborough, Belleville, Kingston and perhaps Brockville all lined up. As it is now folks in Toronto do not know anything about the hockey we play in this part of the province. They give no recognition to Eastern Ontario Senior B stuff at all."

Police Game Is Scheduled For Tuesday Night

The hockey battle next Tuesday night between the Cobourg and Peterborough Police looms up as an event extraordinary of the current season. The affair is attracting the attention of everybody from N. H. L. scouts down and judging from the way tickets for the struggle are going there should be a capacity audience when the rival bluecoats tangle in the tussle of the century.

That, of course, is all to the good, for the proceeds of the game are to be turned over to the British War Victims Fund.

The Peterborough Police who managed to eke out a one-goal lead in the first game at Cobourg are working out in open-air rinks these days to polish off their condition, and they expect to be hitting on all eight by the time Tuesday night rolls round.

Meanwhile the Brock Street Rink staff is also busy shoring up the fences to have them ready for the series of crashes that are expected when the rival coppers start tossing body checks at each other.

The St. John Ambulance Association will have extra men on the job, doctors, nurses and ambulance drivers have been notified to stand by and a demolition squad is being organized just in case.

The referee has not yet been announced, but it is understood that he will be expected to supply his own crash helmet and bullet-proof vest.

Lining up with the Peterborough Police will be Provincial Constable McBrien and Provincial Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton of Lindsay, Constable Reeves also of Lindsay, and Chiefs Baker of Norwood, Pitts of Omemee, and Hendren of Lakefield, while Traffic Officer Lloyd McClure will do his imitation of Turk Broda in the nets.

Cobourg have drafted Chief Hardy of Campbellford and Provincial Constable Don Carruthers of the same town, and their lineup will also include Constables Lockwood and Morris of the R.C.M.P. As the Mounties' slogan is "We always get our man," that sounds a little bad for the Peterborough peelers.

There will be door prizes for some of the lucky folk who attend the game, and altogether it looks like a big night all round for a great cause.

Moving Amerks To Brooklyn Again Rumored

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The assertion often has been made that Red Dutton's New York Americans belong in Brooklyn, and the most recent rumor of developments along that line — a report from New York last night — brings to mind a unique agreement once reached among Dutton, a prominent football official, and an equally well-known sportswriter.

The occasion was a smoking-room conversation on a Prairie passenger train a few years ago. Red's hockey-talk was all pessimism—Americans had no money, no rink. But a great light rose in his eyes as he told how he would like to have a rink in Brooklyn.

Neither Mr Football Official nor Mr. Columnist could bear to see Red suffer so. They told him their circumstances, and how they didn't have the amount of money he needed. But to cheer him up they told him that if they ever did have money enough to set him up in Brooklyn, they would. Before they parted that night Red had accepted a verbal affidavit from each that the money would be his to use—as soon as the sportswriter saved up $2,000,000 and the football official $3,000,000.

So you can see why Red Dutton isn't daunted by a little matter of Americans being in last place, as they are now. He is the doggedest man you ever could hope to meet. When his team plays Boston Bruins in Boston on Sunday night, Red will know for sure—he'll tell people it's for sure—that Amerks will break Boston's string of 22 unbeaten games. Meanwhile, his friends hope this new rumor of a rink for the Americans in Brooklyn has more chance of fulfillment than the deal he swung on that Prairie trip.

In to-night's two N.H.L. games Toronto Maple Leafs will entertain Detroit Red Wings while Chicago meets Canadiens in Montreal. In addition to the Boston-Amerk clash on Sunday, Leafs travel to Detroit and Chicago to New York to meet the Rangers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—At the present rate of exchange of civilian suits for soldier suits, baseball may lose around 240 players to the United States Army before the 1941 season is over.

That is a rough guess. The following provides a foundation in estimating the inroads of the army draft on organized ball:

The Brooklyn Dodger organization includes twelve clubs, and to stymie the possibility of being caught unprepared by an abrupt departure of numerous players simultaneously, the local draft boads of the members of the various teams were checked to get an idea as to the approximate time the Government might beckon to the different individuals.

The check revealed that an even dozen players could expect to finish the coming season in the army, if they can pass the physical examinations which are uncovering dental cripples and flat-foot floogies in the most unexpected places.

The fact that twelve clubs stand to lose a total of twelve players might, for want of a better yardstick, be taken as the general situation over the baseball field. That figures one man to a club.

There are approximately forty minor leagues, and as a conservative estimate of an average of six clubs to a league, that would be about 240 clubs. On the basis of one draftee to a club, that's 240 draftees, not counting the major eligibles.

Those are the boys who in many cases have just reached draft age and who are unmarried. When a player reaches the affluent state which follows his advancement to Class "AA" or the majors, he usually takes his first pay cheque and the little woman by the arm and goes to the nearest church. The players in the Class "D" leagues mostly are youngsters not yet of voting age.

It will be more than an ordinary hardship for a player who is drafted during the season. He loses practically two years' work, figuring that baseball is his major occupation, and also that it is work.

A player drafted on June 1, for example, would have most of his 1941 season taken away from him, and when he returned on June 1, 1942, he couldn't expect to be taken on by a club which had gone through spring training and was well organized.

That season would be entirely lost to him, and, if some past instances of players remaining away from the game for a season are any gauge, he might be a loss in future seasons. Sometimes it's hard to regain the touch after a long absence.

Marlboros Trim Oshawa 3 to 1

OSHAWA, Feb. 22. — Toronto Marlboros continued the dogged winning style of hockey that has marked their play all season as they defeated Oshawa G-Men 3 to 1 here on Friday night.

The victor gave the Dukes the edge in a two of three O.H.A. Senior A semi-final series. The second game will be played in Toronto on Monday night.

The manner in which the Dukes forged victory last night was not unlike their successful efforts at eliminating Niagara Falls. Paying strict attention to their checks and courting every smile from Lady Luck, Marlboros proved good enough to gain victory, although outplayed over most of the route.

Brilliant puck-fending by Baz Bastion and airtight defensive work featured by the blocking of Bobby Copp, carried Marlboros through against a much faster foe. Although on the defensive throughout the first period, Marlboros opened the scoring at the midway mark in the second period. It was a spectacular effort by young Paul McNamara. He broke from an Oshawa attack while each team was shy a player, shook off George Ritchie in a dynamic dash for the Oshawa goal, and deposited the disc very calmly behind McQueston.

Oshawa's determined power play brought the equalizer after two minutes of the third period. Ab Barnes shot from just inside the blue line and the puck glanced in off Drummond's skate.

Johny Inglis batted in the winning goal on a shot by Eddie Shamlock at the 15:37 mark. Inglis was parked near the crease and just got his stick to the puck. Alex. Davidson clinched victory for the Dukes when he broke clear, in the last minute, and scored easily.

Casualty List Has Hit Hard Dutton's Team

By ALLAN NICKELSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 — (CP). — Mervyn (Red) Dutton, who once wrote a learned book on hockey, didn't include a chapter on casualty lists. He could write that chapter now, and tell all about his battered New York Americans.

The Old Men of Manhattan present can dress only 13 players, including two who should be resting gashed legs, and Dutton sees no immediate prospect of adding to the roster.

In last place, but still hopeful of nipping the sixth-place Montreal Canadiens for the last playoff slot, the Amerks have only 10 games remaining and are five points behind the Canadiens. Five of the games are against Boston, Toronto and New York Rangers, three of the toughest teams in the circuit.

Terrible Against Hawks

Red was "fit to be tied" when the Amerks booted a 2-1 lead over Chicago Black Hawks here Thursday and lost 4-2. He estimated the defeat "shot 33 per cent of our chances of making the playoffs."

"We looked terrible against the Hawks," he said. "A couple of guys make dumb plays and we blow the lead. We haven't anyone else to put in there."

Dutton said that Chapman, who retired from the game last year to take over the coaching job, "wanted to play the other night, but I talked him out of it."

It's discouraging to Red, for 16 years a great defenceman, his team has won only two games and drawn three since the start of his year.

Talton Wins Seiberling Cup

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—(CP)—J. Ross Tarlton's Hamilton Thistle rink today will have a chance to improve on an already formidable record in the annual bonspiel of the Ontario Curling Association here, but before he can add the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy to the Seiberling and grand aggregate events already won he must defeat one of the steadiest rinks in Ontario—the Torontos quartet skipped by Col. W. O. Morris.

Tarlton's rink will meet that piloted by Col. Morris in one of today's two finals as the bonspiel ends. In the other finals, F. E. Willcox's Fort William four will meet a Toronto Royals rink skipped by Bert Kennedy for possession of the Royal York trophy, the 'spiel's major prize.

An 11-6 victory over J. M. Rothschild's Toronto in the Seiberling final last night also gave Talton the grand aggregate with 11 wins and one loss. The result left Rothschild with nine wins and three defeats.

In other finals last night, Dan Kelly's Toronto Granites won the O'Keefe trophy, Dr. O. G. Plaxton's Toronto the Seagram, and Charlie Redfern's Toronto the North American Life event.

KINGSTON COMBINES DEFEAT PETES 6 TO 4 TO TIE UP THE SERIES

Petes Outscored Five To Two In Third Period

Kingston Combines evened up the Eastern Ontario Senior B group playoff series here last night when they came from behind to win 6 to 4 on the strength of a scoring splurge in the final ten minutes. For once the ability of the Petes to pull away coming down the stretch failed them and it was the visitors who set the pace in the last period.

It was 1-1 at the end of the first session and the Petes got the only goal of the second stanza. Going into the last period leading 2 to 1, they saw that slender margin wiped out quickly, struck back hard to pull in front again and finally went down beneath a Kingston wave as the visitors scored three times in rapid succession to put the game in the bag.

The ice, fast at first, soon softened and it was very bady in the last period. The Petes have never been a good club in heavy going and that was demonstrated once again in the final twenty minutes.

Coach Wallie Elmer of the Combines did a lot of master-minding to give his team a winning drive and he finally found the solution in the last session when adopted the unusual stunt of shifting Mel Williamson, his high-scoring centre, back to the defence, moved Bobby Neilson from the wing to centre and using four and sometimes five forwards carried the pressure to the Petes. Williamson did not figure at all in the five goals scored by the Combines in that last session, but White, Lane, Neilson and Gerow came through with smart plays to give the visitors the victory. White, the tall defenceman came close to being the best of the visitors. He had speed to burn and was hard to stop when he cut loose, getting one pretty goal and setting up the play for another. Bobby Neilson was always dangerous and Walt Gerow made no mistake on two good scoring schances. Mel Williamson got the first goal of the game but was never very prominent after that.

Cashed In On Chance

The Kingston crew handled their scoring opportunities in smart style and cashed in cleverly when they got a break and that won for them. They had a distinct edge in the play in the first period, although it was 1-1 at the end of the session and although outplayed in the second twenty minutss and looking like a beaten team they came back strong in the final canto to win the ball game and sew up the series.

The Petes battled hard but for about the first time this season they bogged down a bit in the final period and were overhauled just when the fans were looking forward to seeing them cut loose with an eleventh-hour spurt and an extra goal or two to put the contest in the bag.

One of the Petes' heroes was Doug Mortimer who banged in the winning goals at Kingston the other night and came back with another pair last of markers last night. The youngster travelled fast all night and earned his two goals. Jack Jopling who assisted on both the Mortimer counters was another very useful member of the cast, playing some of his best hockey of the season. The Kingdon-Tompkins-Heal line figured in two goals but it was not one of their most finished exhibitions of the campaign. Harding hadn't much chance on the goals that beat him and he robbed Kingston attackers on a number of occasions when his defence was beaten.

Tied In First

Early in the first period Kingston had two real openings but could not fool Harding. White was through first but Harding dived into the shot and shortly after he kicked out another drive that looked like a sure goal when Lane tore in back of the defence. The Petes had a few shots at Burrows too but he handled them smartly. Finally the Combines opened the scoring. Bobby Neilson passed out from left wing to Mel Williamson, left unchecked near the blue line and he had a clear run to the goal. He finished the play smartly by pulling Harding out of the net and sliding the rubber into the empty cage.

A goal down the Petes kept battling for the equalizer but the period was nearly over before they got it. Jack Jopling passed out of the corner to Doug Mortimer whose lightning fast shot into the top corner of the net was past Burrows before he could blink. It came at the 18-minute mark.

Petes Take Lead

Early in the second period the Petes went in front. Kingdon and Tompkins combined to beat the Kingston defence and the former completed the play by pushing the rubber past Burrows. It was the only goal of the session. The Petes did most of the attacking during the period and Burrows had some anxious moments but they could not beat him again.

The Combines tied it up before the third period got under way but the goal should not have been counted. It came when Lane cut loose a shot that was deflected almost into the balcony where a fan batted it down in front of the Peterborough net and Gerow was on the spot to slip the rubber between the posts. Referee McCaffery missed the incident. However the Petes took the lead again a minute after when from a faceoff at the side of the Kingston cage Jack Jopling passed to Mortimer and the right-winger's quick shot found the target. The Petes remained in front until the period was half over and then White sewed up the game with a speedy rush straight down the centre. He fell in trying to round the defence but shot as he dropped and his quick drive whistled past Harding.

Combines Come Through

Thirty seconds later the Combines went ahead when Burton was slow in clearing a lose puck near the blue line and was checked by Bobby Neilson who waltzed in, drew Harding out and scored smartly. That made it 4 to 3. Hepburn drew a penalty for tripping and the Petes pressed for the tying goal. Their drive misfired when White got a breakaway, carried the rubber down and passed to Lane in front of the net for a well-earned countre. Before Hepburn returned the Petes got that back when Kingdon slapped in a rebound from Gardner's shot and only a goal separated the two tems. The home talent battled to get back on even terms but a goal by Gerow with only a minute to go after Hood had carried the puck in and passed nicely from the corner cinched the game for the visitors.

Omemee Defeats Sutton 3-2 But Lost Round

OMEMEE, Feb. 22 (Special). — The Omemee Black Hawks faded out of the O.H.A. picture here last night, but they threw a bad scare into the Sutton camp before they finally bowed out for the season.

Omemee won last night's game 3 to 2, but Sutton, conquerors of Campbellford, took the round 8 to 5 by virtue of their 6-2 win on their own ice in the first game of the series.

Going into the third period the Black Hawks were leading 3 to 0, only a goal down on the round, and the prospects of overcoming the Sutton lead were rosy but the invaders finished strong, bagged the only two goals of the last period and are now ready for another opponent in the O.H.A. Intermediate "B" race.

Nels Foster and Sid Craig, graduates from last year's Peterborough Junior "B" squad, were responsible for Omemee leading 2 to 0 at the end of the first period. Craig scored the first goal of the game with Foster assisting at the 7.40 mark, and then Foster came back with a solo effort to make it 2 to 0.

With the home team leading 3 to 0 as the third period opened, Omemee fans had high hopes of winning the round, but they faded a bit when Culvedwell got Sutton's first goal after a little over nine minutes play. Carpentier made it 3 to 2 by registering the second Sutton counter with less than two minutes to go. The teams and summary:

Referee—Army Armstrong, Oshawa.

First Period:

1—Omemee, Craig (Foster)... 7.40
2—Omemee, Foster 12.10
Penalties—T. Parsons, Gardiner.

Second Period:

3—Omemee, Williamson (G. Dart) 8.00
Penalties—Foster 2, Craig, Pringle, Shepstone.

Third Period:

4—Sutton, Culverwell 9.05
5—Sutton, Carpentier 18.10
Penalties — Parsons, Burkholder.

Maxie Berger Whips Ferrara

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 — (CP). — Maxie Berger, Montreal's contender for the welterweight championship, easily outpointed rugged Tony Ferrara of Mount Vernon, N.Y., in an eight-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night before a crowd of about 6,000 fans. Berger weighed 144¼; Ferrara 146¼.

After flooring Tony for a count of nine in the opening round with a stinging right-hand punch that landed on the eye, Maxie piled up a wide margin in the last seven rounds to take a unanimous decision.

The third meeting between the fighters was the most one-sided victory for Berger. Last Spring he took two easy eight-round decisions from Tony. Last night Berger won seven rounds, mostly by wide margins, losing only the third by a shade.

Berger, making his second start in the Garden since March 1937, when he outpointed Phil Baker in eight rounds, never was in trouble, although in the third round Ferrara made him hold after a fast flurry.

Saints Defeat Hamilton 7-4

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 22.—St. Catharines Saints and Hamilton Dofascos are all square again in their O.H.A. Senior; semi-finals fight. The blue shirted Garden City troopers took the fourth game of the series by 7 to 4 last night, thus assuring St. Catharines fans of another home game on Wednesday.

The game last night produced the fastest and most sustained action seen here this season and a capacity arena of about 4,000 fans were in frantic roars of cheers. While the contest was decidedly brisk, with plenty of high sticks flying, elbows up and the bitterest bumping, only five penalties were meted out.

The brilliant "Miner Line" of Roy Heximer, Rosy Rossini and George Hastie set the pace in the spectacular St. Catharines victory. Rossini was the individual star with a grand total of four goals and two assists. All told, the trio collected fifteen scoring points, including six of the seven Saint tallies.

$870 Cash Shift Tangles One Whole Bank

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 — (AP). — Window Cleaner John Pasternack and his wife, Mary, explained to a bank clerk yesterday they wanted to close out John's $150 personal account, take $400 from Mary's $720 account and thereby establish a joint account.

That done, the couple withdrew $400 from the new account and discovered, upon getting their new book, that there was a balance of $150.

To the Pasternacks, however, that seemed hardly enough. The clerk explained $400 and $150 made $550 and that $400 from that left $150, etc., etc.

Still, Pasternack, who speaks Russian, Polish and English, wasn't convinced and as the clerk began a third explanation Pasternack brought his entire linguistic talents into play.

Whereupon a bank guard joined the group and offered his explanation, and then came the bank's manager, followed by twenty-five or thirty other bank customers — all seeking to explain.

As the transaction became more complicated it became louder. Finally, some 150 passerbys stopped outside the bank and then came the police, a squad car of detectives, a radio patrol car and four additional patrolmen.

At long last, an anonymous genius suggested a workable plan and the Pasternacks closed all accounts, counted the money and found that it totalled $870, which was what they figured it should be.

That done, the crowd dispersed, the Pasternacks went to another bank, deposited all the money, withdrew $400, saw a written balance of $470, and everybody was happy.

Feed Grain Plan Made Effective

TORONTO, Feb. 22—(CP).—Agricultural Minister P. M. Dewan announced yesterday that effective Thursday feed grain, with the exception of corn, will be shipped to Ontario points from Port Arthur or Fort William under the Dominion and Provincial freight assistance policy. Under the plan Ontario is entitled to bring in 3,200,000 bushels and the arrangement will remain in effect until this quota is reacher but not later than July 15.

Each government will share equally in paying the entire freight costs which will apply to carload lots only

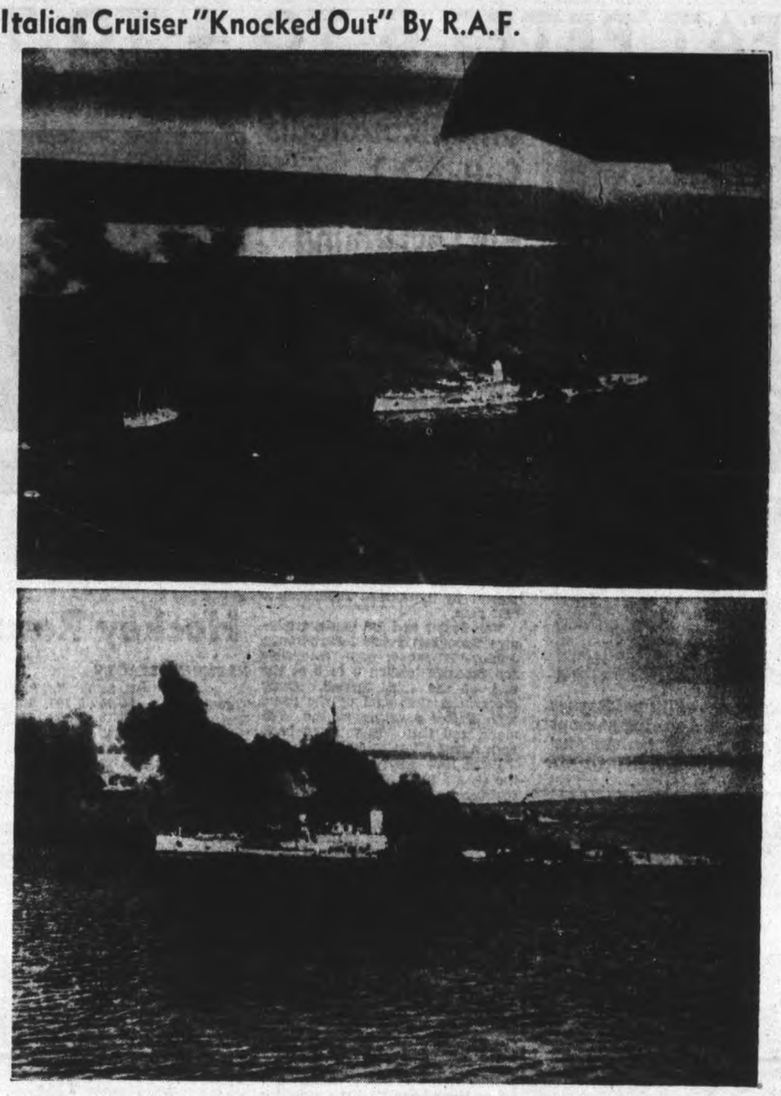
Mr. Dewan salad the regulations have been designed to interfere as little as possible with the ordinary channels of trade.

Farmers desirous of purchasing feed grain will be required to sign an order from which may be obtained from their dealer or regular farmers' club secretary. The forms are procurable from the local county agricultural representatives.

When a dealer can show sufficient orders to an agricultural representative for a car of feed grain, he will be issued a permit. Farmers are urged to purchase through authorized dealers or handlers. If a car is purchased from points further west, the regular freight only will be allowed from Port Arthur or Fort William.

Purchasers must accept delivery off the car; none of the grain may enter warehouses as otherwise its identity may be lost.

Italian Cruiser "Knocked Out" By R.A.F.



These two views shows the destruction and burning of the Italian warship San Giorgio, in the harbor of Tobruk following a deadly bombing raid by British Royal Air Force planes on units of Italy's fleet along the coast of Libya. The disastrous raid during which the San Giorgio was "knocked-out" occurred while Britain's victorious land forces swept into Libya driving the Italians from one stronghold after another.

Alaska Highway Bill Introduced In Washington

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(AP).—A Bill to provide $25,000,000 for construction of an international highway, which, with the consent of Canada, would connect the United States and Alaska through Canadian territory, has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Anthony Dimond of Alaska. It has been referred to the House Committee on Roads.

Dimond said to-day his Bill does not have the support of the administration, but he hopes it will receive official backing as a national defence project.

The Bill would authorize $25,000,000 to be spent on the 1,000-mile road providing the Canadian Government gave consent for its construction.

It stipulates no route, Dimond suggesting that it is a consideration for negotiations between Canada and the United States, but his personal preference is from White Horse to Nabesna, Alaska, by way to Kluane Lake.

The Alaskan International Highway Commission, representing the United States, seems to favor a route from Seattle, through British Columbia to Hazleton, B.C. The British-Columbia - Yukon - Alaska Highway Commission, representing Canada, has been reported here as favoring a more easterly route, via the Sifton Pass, entering Alaska at Glacier Creek.

A third route has been suggested by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer. It would run from Chicago, through the Prairie Provinces and down the Mackenzie Valley. He says it would open up the Norman oil fields to commercial use, and, in his judgment, be the cheapest highway to build.

Bancroft News

Mr. Ross Viscoff replaced Arnold Farthing on Thursday as driver of the Peterborough-Bancroft bus, operated by Mr. Walter Ferguson of Keene. Mr. Arnold Farthing, it is understood, will take up his new duties as an employee of the Canadian General Electric Plant in Peterborough.

Word reached Bancroft village Saturday of the death of Dr. Frank Jarman of Toronto, who suffered a fatal heart attack at his office early Saturday morning. The late Dr. F. Jarman was a son of the late Magistrate G. L. Jarman and Mrs. Jarman of Toronto, having established his dental practice in Bancroft prior to moving to Toronto. The funeral took place in Toronto Monday afternoon.

Deal Destroyers Now In Service

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(CP Cable)—All the destroyers Britain obtained from the United States are now in United Kingdom waters and "mostly have been concerned with anti-submarine operations," it was learned authoritatively today.

In all 50 destroyers were obtained but seven of them went to the Canadian navy.

The spokesman revealed that Britain's naval building program is "now at a rate of higher tonnage than the peak period of the last war."

He added that if an admiral could collect all the warships turned out since the start of the war he would be sailing "a nice sizable fleet."

Merchant shipping construction also is better than in the last war but more ships of all sorts are needed.

The source said that what really saved the situation in 1917-18 was the delivery of 7,000,000 tons of shipping built outside Britain and that it was hoped a similar amount could be obtained in this war from the United States and the Dominions.

Sees Fast Time General For Next Winter

OTTAWA, Feb. 22—(CP). — Present indications are that to conserve power for war industries Daylight Saving Time will have to be generally adopted throughout Ontario and Quebec "and possibly for all Canada," Munitions Minister Howe said in a statement yesterday.

When Daylight Saving Time was extended last fall, it embraced only those municipalities in Ontario and Quebec which had adopted it for the summer months.

At that time it was estimated that 189,000 horsepower of electrical energy would be released for industrial use by reducing consumption of power for lighting purposes.

Mr. Howe's statement said:

"By various means there is assured an additional supply of many hundreds of thousands of additional horsepower to meet next year's peak load but nevertheless next winter it may be necessary to employ further measures restricting power consumption in order to have abundant energy for the war industries.

"At present it appears that next winter Daylight Saving Time will have to be generally adopted throughout the provinces of Quebec and Ontario and possibly for all Canada."

The start of operations at various new war plants has necessitated negotiations with the power companies over the terms and price of power for those industries, he added. These have been, and are being settled satisfactorily by negotiation between the power controller and the power companies.

"The many important and intricate matters arising in a control of this kind have been carried through with the co-operation of the power industry, which has extended itself and made every effort to meet wartime needs; it is a tribute to the industry that the controller has not been called upon to issue any orders," the Minister's statement said.

Some Closeup Shots Of Capital Doings

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 — (CP). — Trade Minister MacKinnon probably will resume his interrupted trade mission to South America some time in April or early May, it was suggested to-day in Government circles.

When illness forced Mr. MacKinnon to return from Balboa, Canal Zone, late last year, it was said the tour of South America probably would start late in March, but this now is considered impossible.

The minister is applying all his energies at present to the wheat problem. Extended debate of the policies he proposes is expected in the House of Commons and officials said trade mission plans are in abeyance.

On the other hand weather conditions in the tropics make it advisable for the mission to be out of South America by late June or early July. The prospective itinerary calls for about a month in South America, and it was suggested the minister might leave even before Parliament ends its current sitting.

The mission's principal purpose, officials said, would be to extend Canada's exports, but it was taken for granted it would also be looking for new sources of material for Canadian war industries.

For instance, most of Canada's rubber now comes from the Malay States, and Brazil might be a valuable alternative source of supply if Malayan production were disrupted by developments in the tense Far Eastern situation.

In the Commons.

When Parliament resumed after 10 weeks' recess it was the same as after an overnight adjournment... ..the Governor-General only attends when a session begins or ends —dignitaries were notable for their absence.

But there was a bowl of red roses on the desk of Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, Clerk of the House....And the accumulation of documents tabled in the first day was bigger than Louis Boulet, in charge of parliamentary papers, has seen in years.

Conservative House Leader Hanson assailed the Government's war effort pretty bitterly this week.... Fifteen minutes later Prime Minister Mackenzie King walked across the Chamber and sat down beside him....They had a good-natured conversation with plenty of smiles on both sides....The "P.M." drummed out a neat little rat-a-tat with his finger on a brief case....Mr. Hanson had a big yellow pencil balanced behind his ear as they talked.

Fraser As Auctioneer.

Auction scene reported by Hansard as G. K. Fraser (Con. Peterborough West) spoke of the salvage campaign:

Mr. Fraser—"I know one society was offered $5 a ton for scrap paper, another $5.50, another $6, another $6.50, another $7, and another $7.50."

H. B. McCulloch (Lib. Pictou) — "Who will give me $8."

Mr. Fraser—"Well, $8 would be nearer the mark. Sold."

Jesse Tripp, Liberal from Saskatchewan's Assiniboia riding, plays golf and curls now . . . he used to be a professional baseballer . . . Jobs were scarce after he graduated from U. of T. where he played as an amateur so he spent a summer as a semi-pro at Ingersoll, Ont., then went west for a pro season with Winnipeg and Killarney, Man. . . . It was "just a fill-in" until he got settled as a druggist.

To whom it may concern. The brass plate on the Senate gallery door says "Tribune du Senat" instead of "tribune."

Blame It On War

There's a story behind the electric clock in the Press Censors' office . . . Before the war the quarters were the German consulate which kept Germany informed on Canadian affairs . . . The press censors are there for the opposite purpose . . . And the flock, facing the doorway, covers the spot where a picture of Hitler used to be.

Afternoon tea is the latest rage in government offices . . . influx of Britons on wartime missions probably was partly responsible . . . Canadian army men back from England brought the habit with them, too . . . It's not unusual for a newspaperman to be offered a cup of tea around 4:30.

Asks Tight Check On Waste Basket

A letter from him to 12,500 industries in Canada, declared there should be economy in use of paper and cardboard. Wastepaper and cardboard should be collected for return to mills through waste paper merchants or local salvage committees.

Rags and fibres were in demand, Mr. Gardiner said, and he advised industries to consider the economy possibly by de-oiling oily rags. Special attention to salvaging old metal was recommended along with reclamation of oil.

Waste food from canteens was valuable. Bones were required for glycerine for explosives, and glue and bone meal. Other waste food should be disposed of to pig feeders and farmers.

The statement said larger firms might have an official supervise salvage work to obtain the largest recovery of material. With prices at present levels, time devoted to such work should prove remunerative.

Cottesloe Society Has Fine Session

The president had charge of the opening worship service. The Scripture was read by David Forsyth and Helen Tedford, assisted by Mrs. J. S. Kidd and Laura Nelson gave a most inspiring topic, including both missions and culture.

The latter outlined the life of Tom Thomson, grandfather of our famous Canadian painter. The former told of missions in Korea.

Readings were given by Mima Moore and Madeline Toms. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kidd.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

WON AFGHAN

The afghan and cushion made by the pupils of the Immaculate Conception School and drawn for at Community Hall on Friday night was won by W. Hubbard of 710 George St., city.

JUNIOR SKIIERS.

OFFICE IS OPENED

Peterborough War Services and Community Fund have established headquarters in the Mayor's Office, City Buildings. All subscriptions should be paid at this office in the future.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Motorists who park their cars on the city streets close to the ruts are inviting damage to car fenders. The ruts are getting so deep that motorists have trouble turning out of them and often a parked car forces the motorists to steer out of the ruts. When this is attempted the cars often jump cross ways and it is difficult to avoid striking the parked cars.

A BREATH OF SPRING

Spring is just around the corner, and the advance showings of millinery prove this statement. On Friday a smartly dressed young woman was seen walking out of the Elite cafe. She had a grey fur coat but the part of her costume that caught the eye was her hat, it was a scarlet sailor, trimmed with a tall grey quill. Her gloves and lipstick matched the hat perfectly.

ILLEGAL CONSUMPTION

Two local men who pleaded guilty in police court this morning to illegal consumption of liquor in North Monaghan township were each fined $10 and $5.50 costs by Magistrate Langley.

CAR STOLEN AGAIN

For the second time in a week an automobile belonging to Leo Cleary has been stolen. The first time the car was taken it was recovered in a ditch near Springville. Now it's gone again.

TICKETS GOING FAST

Tickets for the police hockey game Tuesday night are selling fast. Several members of the local department have already disposed of around 100 pasteboards for the big battle. The proceeds are to be turned over to the British War Victims Fund.

ANTI-TANK QUALIFICATION.

The following members of the 4th Anti-Tank Battery have qualified as tradesmen: Gnrs. E. Sandiland, N. E. Barber and T. W. Drummond, as motor mechanics, T. J. Weaver, R. L. McFadden, M G. Kimball, F. T. Parsons and C. A. Wilson as driver mechanics.

TOUGH LUCK, JIMMY

Jimmy Monahan, 13-year-old son of Mrs. Ann Monahan, Elias avenue may be at home today, but his thoughts are with the skiers at Bethany. Jimmy was a triple winner in the junior competitions staged by the Peterborough Ski Club at Bethany last winter, but this year his plans were knocked sky high when old man pneumonia moved in. Jimmy has had a tough seige of it, but is making steady progress now. He also plays hockey for one of the junior teams at St. Peter's.

Public Schools Do Their Part In War Stamps

Pupils in the public schools of the city have established what may be a record for primary schools throughout the province in the matter of buying War Savings Stamps. Like their older brothers and sisters in the Collegiate, the juniors are organized in every school throughout the city, and figures obtained from K. S. Wightman, school inspector reveal that they are buying upwards of $400 worth of the stamps every week.

A survey of the Separate Schools in the city indicates that they too, are doing their share, not purchasing through the teachers but most of the pupils have been encouraged by their teachers who have distributed stamp forms to purchase a stamp a week and affix the stamp in the folders.

Back in May of 1940 when the War Savings Stamp plan was first introduced the Board of Education tion set aside a small sum to finance the purchase of stamps. This was given Mr. Wightman and repaid at the end of the term. Since that time principals in the various schools have financed the work.

In June of 1940 the sum of $261.00 was spent by pupils for stamps. When school re-opened in the fall the stamp buying plan gained momentum and each school became better organized as teachers and parents alike realizing the two-fold value of the drive, encouraged the children to put their spending money into stamps, and even to use the money that would ordinarily be placed in the Penny Bank accounts. The total sales up to January 1st amounted to slightly over $900.

In 1941 as the demand for more money became more insistent the sale of stamps continued to increase so that at the end of the third week, the sale of stamps was averaging $200 a week. It is even high now running close to the $400 figure, and thus is a close second to sales at the local Collegiate.

Plan Differs

The plan in the public schools differs from that in force at the Collegiate in that the pupils are not encouraged to buy stamps for re-sale to others, but are buying them to build up their own certificates.

Aside from the patriotic angle to the whole scheme, it is obvious that the purchase of stamps by school children will perhaps prove more beneficial than it will to any other age group. A child now in the age group between 8 and 12 will need money for clothes, books and perhaps for college use in seven and a half years and parents who take a long range view of the war stamp idea will certainly see to it, that their children purchase as many stamps as is possible.

Teachers in the schools, both public and separate are being commended for the consistent missionary work they are doing for this financing plan. The children get a greater appreciation of the war, are taught compulsory saving, and the need for sacrifice to preserve the institutions they now enjoy. Some of the teachers go so far as to tell the pupils they will purchase an amount of stamps equal to that purchased weekly by the pupils in their class.

Queen Mary Leads

So far as can be learned it appears that Queen Mary School in the west end of the city is setting the pace among the public schools. Here O. M. Steer, the principal has deputized Jack Telford to handle the campaign in cooperation with the staff. As a stimulant to the sale of stamps, there is inter-class competition, and totals are recorded weekly to show where each class stands. They have a large mountain pictured on a portable easel, and a man is climbing the mountain. At the top of the mountain is printed $1,000 which is the objective set for Easter. As the total increases the man is moved further up the slope of the mountain, which is marked off in hundred dollar totals. Mr. Telford reported today that at the rate they are going now, the $1,000 objective will be reached next week. This week the pupils bought $123.00 worth of stamps, a new high in the school.

This plan is typical of others in use throughout the other schools, and as an indication of the progress being made, Prince of Wales School reports $340.00 worth of stamps sold during the last six weeks.

Nazi Firing Squads "Pacify" Poles

How Hitler is carrying out his boast to exterminate the Poles is graphically shown in these pictures taken from the pocket of a German airman shot down over England. Polish civilians are shown ABOVE lying on the ground where they fell after facing a hail of bullets from a Nazi firing squad. Compatriots were forced to dig their graves under the direction of Nazi soldiers. After the grave was completed, they, too, probably faced a firing squad.

German troopers, with bared bayonets, are shown rounding up hapless Polish males preparatory to marching them off for execution, or worse, a living death in the hell of a Nazi concentration camp.

War Certificate Bank Sales Total $25,000

One of the remarkable features of the War Savings Certificates in Peterborough so far is the fact that in February certificates to the value of $25,000 have been purchased from the six banks in the city, and more than $6,000 worth of stamps have been purchased from the local post office.

These purchases were unsolicited and are in addition to the pledged purchasers, which indicates beyond all doubt that the citizens of Peterborough are solidly backing the government's appeal to obtain money for financing the war.

By Tuesday the division majors and captains in the women's division will have made up to date returns and it is expected that the interim progress report will be given on Tuesday morning. Women canvassers are working steadily in every district and the work should be finished in record time.

There is a feeling in the city that if employees of factories bring home a pledge card and display it in their window, it is not necessary for the woman of the house to answer questions. This is the wrong impression, the mere fact that a person or a family is pledged does not give a woman canvasser the right to pass the house by. She must complete her canvass.

Another condition that seems to be giving trouble too has all the earmarks of a malicious rumor. It was reported that canvassers were seeking to learn how much each member of the household was earning. They have no right to ask for this information, nor is it sought. What the canvasser does want to know is "how much can you lend the government in War Savings.

J. H. Vernor says the committee at the shop working on the canvass for pledges is doing a great job, and he expressed great satisfaction with the progress being made. The report has not gone into the committee rooms as yet, but so far over 98 per cent of the employees have pledged and it is interesting to learn that the average pledge exceeds five per cent of the salaries. This is another case wheee a good American can also be a patriotic Canadian, as J. H. Vernor is certainly throwing his weight into the campaign, and has aroused high enthusiasm among the employees.

During the Community Chest Drive, citizens noted that Fashion Craft window had several paid up War Savings Certificates on display and enquiry today revealed that the three people in the store have been regular purchasers since last June, the month following the start of War Savings Certificates sales. The ones who start early are the ones who will have their Certificates maturing first.

At eleven o'clock this morning the thermometer had started its upward climb again, and when R. E. Layfield had finished his painting the total stood at 5,600, a jump of 600 from the total on Friday.

Millbrook W.I. Contributes To War Fund

Millbrook Branch of the Women's Institute came into the picture today with a nice effort for the Peterborough District British War Victims Fund. They held a dance and the proceeds amounting to $15.10 was delivered today to the treasurer, F. G. Mann.

Another district organization, the Lakevale Presbyterian Church Sunday School made a straight contributon of $15 apparently from their general fund, and the rural contributors gained in numbers when Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton of Cavan sent along $5.75 the proceeds from a potluck supper. From Westwood down in Asphodel township Mrs. E. M. Renwick sent in $25, one of the largest single donations received since the fund was started.

No group of employees or individuals in the city or district have been as consistent supporters of this Fund as the employees of the Peterborough Brinton Carpet Company. Today they sent in $11, which is their 11th contribution and gives them a grand total to date of $153.50.

Two more class rooms of pupils were added to the list today room 12 of Queen Mary School sent in $1 through Mrs. F. M. Craig and Grade 1 of Mays School, the baby class so to speak, contributed 97 cents.

Window Thief Gets 12 Rings, Eight Watches

A smash-and-grab thief got away with eight watches, a tray of 12 signet rings, and possibly other articles from the jewellery display window of Bert Austin, Charlotte Street, early this morning.

An attempt had been made to force the front door of the store, and when that failed the thief smashed a hole in the glass of the show window and reached in to grab the watches and rings.

The broken window was discovered by Constable Harold Mesley as he was making his rounds shortly after three o'clock this morning.

Clearing House Honors T. Mackay

Members of the Peterborough bank clearing house at a dinner at the Peterborough Club Wednesday evening, presented T. A. Mackay, retired manager of the Bank of Montreal, with a silver tray.

The presentation was made by H. G. Fitzgerald, who was presiding.

With the members of the clearing house were T. B. Chester and H. A. Kerr, managers of the Bank of Toronto at Omemee and Millbrook respectively; also Vincent Eastwood and E. Stratford Martin.

Surplus Of Carrots Reported In Ontario

An official of the Vegetable Growers' Association informed the Examiner that there is a surplus of carrots in the province. In all there are thousands of bags of them which have not yet been sold. At this season the imported carrots in the stores catch the eye of the consumer, and the home-grown article, though cheaper in price, is apt to be overlooked. He said various schemes had been discussed but yet there has been no general solution secured.

This official, who is also a producer himself, said the trade is well aware also of the way in which potatoes from the Maritime provinces are displacing Ontario-grown potatoes in their own province. "There was a survey made in Toronto of 300 stores and in only three of these were Ontario potatoes being sold at all, and that would be just one per cent. of the retail outlets handling Ontario potatoes."

Spring Assizes Open Monday

One criminal case and three civil actions are set down in the Spring Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario which opens in the Peterborough County Court House on Monday, February 24, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Justice Chevrier will preside.

The only criminal case on the list is a reckless driving charge under the Criminal Code against Fred Gall of Keene. The charge arises out of a motor accident on Highway 7 near Downer's Corners in which a woman walking on the highway was killed.

War—25 Years Ago

Feb. 23, 1916—Verdun battle continued with increasing violence, French troops evacuating Haumont. Portuguese seized German vessels lying in the River Tagus. Lord Robert Cecil appointed British Trade Minister.

Milk Distributors Oppose Increase

Milk distributors decided on Friday night to oppose the application of the local milk producers for an increase of one cent a pint.

More than ninety per cent of the city distributors were at this meeting which reviewed the conversations of last week and agreed that present conditions all pointed against the untimeliness of raising the price of milk.

It was said that the increase in the cost of living, the mounting war demands on the people, the difficulties in the way of collections were factors which should be taken into account and influence the producers not to proceed with their proposal that milk prices be brought up to seven cents a pint and twelve cents a quart.

Both groups are conferring again on Monday afternoon.

Kiwanis Ladies Entertain Men

The members of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club were guests of the "Kiwanicqueens" at the Kiwanis Club on Friday night. As is usual, this organization of wives of members of the Kiwanis Club entertain the club sometime near Valentine's Day. The party was in the form of a dinner and dance with incidental card playing and stunts.

A short program had been arranged by the ladies, which included tap dancing numbers, and several vocal solos of excellence were sung by Mrs. L. R. Mitchell.

In the course of the evening, a stunt was operated in the form of a quiz. Baby pictures of 14 of the members were shown, and the one guessing the identity of most was declared the winner. From this event, Ted Pridham emerged victorious. Mayor James Hamilton had the high bridge score.

Mr. E. C. Kyte Speaks At Art Club Meeting

Members of the Women's Art Association listened with keen interest and frequent chuckles of appreciation Friday afternoon to Mr. E. C. Kyte, librarian at Queen's University, as he recalled the days in London, England, when he was one of the "managing go-betweens" in connection with the printing of T. E. Lawrence's famous book, "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom."

'It was difficult to regard that rather smallish, blue-eyed person in the uniform of the Royal Air Force as someone extraordinary," he remarked when referring to an interview in which Lawrence outlined plans for the publication of his escapades with the Arabs.

Col. Lawrence's stipulation with regard to the printing of his book meant many snags from a publisher's point of view, including a demand for an output of "no more than fifty copies," finally set at 116. Although the books were first sold for thirty guineas, their value has since risen to enormous sums, four copies in the United States having sold five thousand dollars each. An original copy of "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom" is possessed by Mr. Kyte, who values it the more because of his former association with the author. Because of the limited original edition, an abridged form of the story was later published as "Revolt in the Desert."

The personal notes by which Mr. Kyte revealed the real personality of the literary army officer who took the name of Shaw to escape publicity, and enlisted as mechanic in the Royal Air Force, were told by the Queen's University librarian yesterday for the first time in a public address, and is no doubt the most authentic story Art Association members will ever hear regarding the late author of "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom."

Mr. Kyte, who spoke last year on English Country House Libraries,' was introduced by Mrs. C. S. Thompson, president of the association. A pottery exhibit from Canadian Potters' Guild, brought by Marguerite C. Baines, is scheduled for the studio program of March 7.

Dorothy Finnie Is Wed To K. M. Robertson

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Jean Finnie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Finnie, 489 George Street, to Mr. Kenneth Madill Robertson, son of Mrs. Robertson and the late Mr. John Robertson, took place quietly at two-thirty o'clock this afternoon in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr officiating. Wedding music was played by Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O.

The bride's father gave her in marriage, and she wore a frock of limestone green waffle crepe cut on Russian lines, with a blouse peplum trimmed with French embroidered white pique off-the-face style bonnet of brown felt, brown suede accessories and corsage of Talisman roses and freesia. Mrs. Jack Richardson was her attendant, wearing a navy blue ensemble with touches of white, and corsage of Briarcliff roses. Mr. Douglas Evans of Oshawa was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Jack Richardson and Mr. Noel Rishor.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left later by motor, the bride travelling in a two-piece wool suit of dark green, Indian earth shade top-coat with lynx collar, and matching beret.

Survey Of Women Power Reveals Abundant Ability

An interesting survey of women power in Canada, as made through the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women, and given on Thursday afternoon at a meeting of the Local Council of Women by Miss Margaret Hyndman, K.C., of Toronto, director of the organization, is as follows:

Three thousand women have had experience in making munitions; 1,300 have had experience as textile workers; 1,500 are experienced in manufacturing and inspecting clothing; 1,300 in manufacturing and inspecting hospital supplies; 300 in manufacturing airplanes; 60 in mining and lumbering; 200 in tanning and leather industry; 1,100 in the manufacture of shoes; 2,700 in other factory work. There are 3,000 women in Canada with previous military training; 9,000 technical school graduates; 1,300 with university education, a group that also includes 700 laboratory technicians; 14,000 who have had experience in catering; 1,400 who were graduate dietitians; 9,100 experienced in camp and recreational groups.

Forty-seven thousand have had business experience; 125 education in air mechanics; 50 are air pilots; 325 chemists; 175 dentists. Seven hundred and fifty women were listed who had been engaged in the intelligence service in different countries during the last war; there are 8,700 telephone and telegraph operators; 17,000 teachers; 1,600 translators. These did not include people who could only speak foreign languages, but those who could speak, read and write foreign languages and whose registrations indicated that they had a working knowledge of the language in question.

There are 24,500 Canadian women who have had experience in farming. The classification for farming is divided into: General, truck, fruit, poultry, dairy, ranching, and sheep raising, and the operation of farm machinery. Four thousand two hundred and fifty women asked for training in different classifications, such as motor mechanics, emergency, first-aid work, map reading, radio, telegraphy and signalling, commissariat duties, sanitation work, service clerical work.

Following her announcement of this list, Miss Hyndman remarked, "And there the matter rests, and has rested for months. In the language of the streets, one might ask 'So what?'"

ST. LUKE'S BRANCH.

The Valentine party held by St. Luke's church on Monday was an enjoyable affair. Members from All Saints' and St. George's branches were guests. B. H. Pammett and Art Northcott were in charge of the program, which consisted of contests and several games. Refreshments were served, after which all enjoyed an hour's dancing, with music by Mrs. Foster.

The Lakefield branch has invited St. Luke's to a skating party on Monday night so all members are asked to meet at the church at 7.30 p.m.

With Girl Guides

Guides have been invited to attend the evening service at St. James' United Church on Sunday, February 23, when Rev. Mr. Craik will preach on the Ten Laws of the Guides and Scouts.

As First St. Andrew's and Third St. George's are the only two companies who can attend, we would like every Guide from these companies to be present, so that we may have a good showing. This is a special Scout week-end for St. James', and the service should be very interesting.

Guides will meet outside St James' Church, corner of Romaine and Aylmer Streets at a quarter to seven, in full uniform.

This parade does not include the Brownie Packs, but their leaders are invited to come.

Worrying About Age Is Greatest Fault of Women. Wives Need to Cultivate Art of Being Pleasant If They Want To Hold Their Husbands.

Dear Miss Dix—I have been married for 23 years and have no children I am 15 years older than my husband and the strain of trying to keep as young as he is almost kills me. I realize now that I made a great mistake in marrying a boy when I was a woman. He is only 41 now, while I am 56. Lately he has become cool to me and seems to be ashamed to be seen out with me. I have tried so hard to keep my age from him, and I imagine everyone is talking about his looking like my son. I am so jealous of young, pretty women I feel as if I could tear them to pieces. He has always and still does support me and gives me a good, comfortable home, but he ignores me. I know he is going with a girl, although I don't know who she is, but he says he is going to stay with me. What should I do?

JOYCE.

ANSWER — I think the main thing for you to do is to quit thinking about your age. It has got to be an obsession with you, and you are making a bad matter worse by calling your husband's attention to your difference in ages and emphasizing its every disadvantage, instead of ignoring them and trying to gloss the matter over as of no importance. Evidently your husband did not object to marrying a woman older than himself, else he would not have married you in the first place. Well, there is no greater difference in your ages now than there was then. Probably he would still be indifferent to the age factor if you hadn't begun nagging him about it, and trying to boss him, and if you didn't watch him like a hawk and throw jealous fits whenever he spoke to a young and attractive woman.

Make Yourself Pleasant

When a woman loses her physical charms, she has to substitute mental ones for them. She can't bring back youth and beauty, but she can make herself so pleasant to live with, such jolly good company, so sweet and tender and considerate that her husband will never notice how many pounds she has taken on, or that her hair is turning gray. Or if he does, he won't care.

Marrying in Own Age Class

Of course, it is always a great mistake for a woman to marry a man young enough to be her son, because she lets herself in for a lifetime of strain and effort. Not for her are the blessed days of relaxation, when she can cease to count her calories and let out her corset strings and buy comfortable shoes. She dare not grow middle-aged. Never can she be herself and act her age.

She has always got to play a part, and lie about her birthdays, and pretend that she is young and gay and wants to dance and hop around when she is simply dying to stay at home and put on a kimono and bedroom slippers and rest. And always she has the chore on her hands of keeping a boy entertained and amused And why any woman ever thinks that any glamour lad is worth the trouble, goodness only knows.

And, worse still, the old wife of the young husband is inevitably bound to suffer every pang of jealousy that can tear the human heart when she sees him playing around with girls of his own age, and when she knows that between him and her there flows a river of time that neither one of them can ever cross.

Put Your Mother In Her Own Home

Dear Dorothy Dix — No doubt the mother-in-law in the house is the first aid to divorce, as statistics prove and our observation shows, but nothing that the daughters-in-law and sons-in-law have to bear compares to the sufferings of the mother-in-law who knows herself an unwanted guest, yet who is dependent upon the hostile charity of her children and those they married.

It is impossible for a woman under such conditions to be her real self. Being compelled to suppress all of her opinions leaves her a frustrated and unhappy creature who is often hard to live with. The solution of the mother-in-law problem is so easy and simple if the children are even in moderate circumstances, and if they would only make Mother an allowance of a few dollars a month, it would enable her to live her own life and not poison the atmosphere of their homes.

ONE OF THEM.

ANSWER — For years I have urged this plan upon the thousands of sons and daughters who have written me desperate letters telling how Mother was breaking up their homes, and upon the other thousands of mothers who complain of the way their in-laws treat them.

It would save so much misery, so many heartaches, so much friction if Mother could have her own little home where she could do as she pleased, or board among strangers whom she would not feel she had a right to boss, that it would seem that it would be worth the price of almost any sacrifice to the children to buy peace for themselves as well as happiness for Mother.

But apparently this plan for settling the mother-in-law problem makes no general appeal. Sometimes a mother is a victim of the old tradition that a woman should go to live with her children when her husband dies, and she is afraid of what people will say if she doesn't.

Sometimes a mother has no life outside of her children and no matter how unhappy she is with them, she would be unhappier away from them Often there is some welcher among the children who will not pay his or her part of Mother's monthly allowance. He or she prefers to wish her off on Tom or Janey, And so the plan falls through.

But, at any rate, it is a good plan and would make for the happiness of a lot of old women, as well as their children.

Many Young Men Can Bless Draft

Dear Miss Dix—I am a boy of 18 madly in love with a girl. At present I am attending a military school and the situation has reached the point where I must choose between my career and this girl. I love her very much, but feel that my country needs me at this time. What shall I do?

HEALTH PROBLEMS

By DR. L. A. CLARK, Peterborough M.O.H.

TUBERCULOSIS.

This week the Travelling Chest Clinic has been visiting Peterborough. (This has reminded us that the question of Tuberculosis should not be neglected.) Tuberculosis is one of those quiet, unassuming diseases that sometimes takes months to make itself manifest and creeps up on its unsuspecting victim who is all too often unaware of the fact, that he is being stalked by what used to be called The White Plague.

Dr. L. A. Clarke

Since the close of the last century the death-rate from Tuberculosis in Ontario has dropped to one-third of what it was at that time. This appears to be a notable achievement, but it is possible to have still better results.

What is the cause of Tuberculosis of the lung? Primarily the cause is a small germ which is acquired from someone who is already suffering from the disease. Associated with the infection, however, we have the problems in some cases of inadequate housing and food and also the question of occupation. Certain dusty trades, particularly those associated with some kinds of work with stone and sand, seem to make the entry of the tubercle bacillus into the lung more easy.

Over one-half the cases occur in adolescence and young adult life, and in these age groups tuberculosis is still the chief cause of death due to disease. The difficulty is that one-half of the cases of early disease have yet no symptoms and yet it is at this stage that the best hope for ultimate cure can be held out to the patient because with tuberculosis as with other diseases, early diagnosis and treatment offer the surest chance of a short illness with a quick recovery. It is at this point that the Travelling Chest Clinic steps into the picture as an aid to the local physicians in assisting them to make a diagnosis. During its current visit to Peterborough the Travelling Chest Clinic examined over one hundred patients and X-rayed them free of charge.

According to the new Act that came into effect in July of 1938, patients may now be treated free of charge while in sanatorium. Free sanatorium care has facilitated early treatment.

As we stated at the beginning of this article, people who have tuberculosis have acquired it from other people who have the disease. It is for this reason that efforts are made to keep in touch with contacts and follow them up for periodic examinations in order that if they are developing the disease it may be diagnosed in its very early stages and the proper measures promptly taken.

Tuberculosis differs from other diseases in the length of time it may take to reach the detectible stage, and thus may necessitate keeping in touch with the contact for a period of years. Fortunately not all who come in contact with the disease will acquire it, and to some individuals this makes these repeat examinations appear unnecessary. The reverse, however, is true, because the follow-up of contacts is our most fruitful source of cases. One of the values of early hospitalization is that the patient is isolated and this prevents the spread of disease to his fellow-men. This is an important consideration. I do not believe that anyone would care to think that his or her carelessness had been the cause of someone developing tuberculosis.

So the Travelling Chest Clinic has come and gone. In a week or so the doctors will have the reports of the X-rays taken mailed to them and our periodic tuberculosis stock-taking will be taken. Let us hope we find an improvement.

Exciting War-Time Program For F.N.C. Annual Dance

A black-out, and the scream of air-raid sirens and exploding bombs heard amid a whirling shower of leaflets bearing such inscriptions as "Get rid of "Vinnie" Churchill; I really vish you vould; For if you don't, I'll loose the var, and end by chopping vood!" caused excitement aplenty during the annual "At Home" of the Friday Night Club last night in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. Guests entered by way of an "air-raid shelter," and found themselves in a ball-room where the patriotic theme was carried out to the last degree. Graduated streamers of red, white and blue hung from ceiling lights, and bands in the same colors decked the back of the orchestra stand, where gay music was played by Jimmy Duffus and his orchestra.

There were gold columns on which searchlights picked out airplanes in flight, and at one side of the ball-room a huge poster bearing the words of His Majesty the King, "This time we are all in the front line," combined in a war-time setting that was cleverly arranged and carried out. At midnight supper was served in the auditorium, where red, white and blue again predominated in decorations.

Spot dances were won by Miss Barry Hutchings and Mr. Miles Allison, Miss Kay Tully and Jerry Wooll, R.A.F.

A child born on this way should be splendidly endowed with intellectual forces and faculties, fitting it for any number of accomplishments of high order. Its nature should be warm, luxurious, pleasure loving and extravagant, and it may be much imposed upon because of this softness of character.

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy at Home

Quick Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This well known recipe is used by many thousands of housewives, because they have found that it gives them an effective, dependable remedy for distressing winter coughs. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well known for its effect on throat membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a 16 ounce bottle and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of cough remedy, unusually quick-acting and dependable, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving quick, satisfying relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

Ivan Gray Heads Millbrook Library Board

MILLBROOK, Feb. 22 (ENS) — The Library Board held its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening, in the library reading room, when officers for the current year were appointed as follows: chairman, Ivan L. H. Gray; secretary-treasurer, E. H. Barnes; librarian, Margaret Armstrong.

Owing to the death of Mr. W. T. Wood, who had been a valued member of the board for several years, it became necessary to appoint a member in his place, the Municipal Council choosing Miss B. M. Turner, B.A., to fill the vacancy, and the latter was welcomed to the Board for her initial attendance on Wednesday evening.

By a unanimous vote the secretary was instructed to send a letter to Miss Margaret Wood, expressing the Board's sincere sympathy in her recent bereavement through the death of her brother, and their deep appreciation of the fine service rendered by Mr. Wood in all matters connected with the library's affairs, over an extended period of years.

The financial statement of the Millbrook Public and Continuation Schools for the year ending December, 1940, has now been issued, the auditors, T. H. Collins and J. L. Byam, having found same to be correct.

The summary includes the following figures: Balance forward from 1939 $2,519.57, Legislative grants: public school $723.81, continuation school $1,046.31, united counties' grant continuation school $3,573.83, school district levy: public school $3,535.72, continuation school $2,809.38, non-resident tuition fees public school $88.16; grand totals: public school $6,887.26, continuation school $7,429.52.

Expenditures—Cost of instruction, public school $2,889.10, continuation school $3,683.90, cost of installing equipment public school $59.61, continuation school $62.32, cost of administration public school $107.21, continuation school $164.80, cost of school plant operation: public school 543.03, continuation school $724.07, cost of auxiliary agencies: public school $21.43, continuation school $148.97, cost of school plant maintenance: public school $41.36, continuation school $62.91, capital charges: continuation school $2,562.55; grand total $11,091.23; total receipts $14,296.78, balance forward to 1941 $3,205.52.

Misses Jean and Mary Burnham were hostesses for the February meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle, which met at their home on Thursday at 8 p.m., with the vice-president, Dorothy Sisco, in the chair.

Mary Burnham read the lesson from John 10:1-18, and the leader offered prayer, after which Jean Burnham gave an interesting talk on "The Stewardship of Health."

Miss E. L. Hetherington and Mary Burnham will write the usual letter to Miss Margaret Luxon, and Mrs. D. Lunn was appointed program convenor for the March gathering to be held at the Parsonage. Regarding a new study book, the secretary will write Mrs. R. Kitchen, Peterborough, and after the offering, Ruth Thorne read a letter from Miss Florence Murray, missionary in Korea, who, while on furlough, has spoken at Millbrook, thus bringing a personal interest in her message.

"The life history of Maria Kim" was given by the vice-president, and Mary Dawson gave the poem, "Welcome Stranger."

Where Germany Threatens Greece

With Yugoslavia and Bulgaria falling in line with German demands, Greece is left exposed to attack by Nazi troops from two sources, if Germany decides it is necessary to pull the Italian chestnuts out of the Greek fire. Bulgaria has also opened a route for Hitler to strike at the Bosphorus, but it is believed that Turkey will stand as a formidable foe of such a move. The R.A.F. is devoting much attention to smashing air basis on Sicily, from where German bombers can take off for air attaks against the Greeks.

● SERIAL STORY

THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER

By HELEN WORDEN

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

✧ ✧ ✧

YESTERDAY: Mrs. Donovan lunches with Mrs. Martin, who suggests Dan's marriage to Lynda as the best way to unite the Donovan and Martin fortunes. Lynda interrupts the conversation. She is hardly settled when Dan arrives, with Marie.

"NOW, you and I are going to have nothing but fun for the next two hours," said Dan to Marie, as he reached for the menu "But before I even so much as order the clams, I'd like to hear your views on the situation." He twirled the menu card and waved the waiter aside. "Remember, though, every minute is precious. You've put your own time limit on this."

Marie smiled, but her eyes were serious. "I know, that's why I don't see what made you bring me here. You'll spend all your time talking to friends."

Dan drew crazy patterns on the table cloth with a fork.

"I suppose it does seem cockeyed coming to this nosey place, but it's home to me. I think I'd turn up here if I'd committed murder and the district attorney were sitting at the next table. I guess it's a habit.

He included the entire room with a single gesture. "Now, take these people here today. Ex-husbands and ex-wives are sitting table to table. Sweethearts and wives in the same party. Old husbands and new ones at the bar." He glanced around. "The Colony is sort of like a public place for confessing your sins and your pleasures."

He looked directly at Marie as he uttered the word, "pleasures."

"You are my pleasure, you know," he said "But you're more than that, you're every breath I draw."

Marie was about to speak but the waiter interrupted.

Dan looked at her, mouth quirked at the corners.

"I intend to start this thing off the right way.' His eyes twinkled. "I'm going to do the ordering." He laughed. "I hope you like it. You can tell me later.

WHILE he discussed the menu with the waiter she sat back in an introspective mood, hardly aware of the people round her save, perhaps, the three women in the front of the room. Without being told, she felt their antagonism. She knew that, whether they were looking at her this moment or not, they were thinking of her. Even a week at Varnet's had taught her something about women of this class.

But she felt strangely free of their criticism because she was neither asking nor taking away anything from them. In another hour and so many minutes she would be removed from their lives forever. That morning, after she left the barge, she had made up her mind that she belonged neither in the glamorous world of Varnet's frou-frou shop, nor Dan's sky-rocketing circle. With a maturity far beyond her years she had decided that her attempt to merge the two worlds, had caused all the trouble. She was a barge girl; a canalboat captain's daughter and nothing more. However, there was nothing to prevent her from carrying back memories with her. Dan's voice came to her suddenly.

"Snap out of it," he begged. "Where were you? I'm jealous. I'd like to be there too.

"As a matter of fact you were there." She smiled. "I'm happy, are you?"

He caught her hand under the table. "Why do you ask?"

She drew away. The thrill was so real it made her unhappy. She did not want to encourage anything so lovely, if it could not last.

"I know," he said, you don't have to tell me. I'm eating humble pie. Everything else in the world that I've wanted, I've got and now —well, I'll never ask you if you love me—until—" he stopped.

"Until what?"

"Ah, that I won't tell. It depends on you." He raised his cocktail glass. "To the happiest—"

✧ ✧ ✧

"I'M sorry," Lynda's voice interrupted. "Do you two object to a threesome for a few moments?" She smiled gracefully.

"Certainly not." Dan rose to his feet, but there was no enthusiasm in his move. "Won't you sit down?"

Lynda settled in a chair opposite them. "I believe Miss La Porte and I have met before." Her voice was friendly, but her eyes were hard. "I've heard so much about your living on—"

Marie looked at her. "You mean my living on a barge? Yes, I guess you'd say I called a canalboat home. I was born and brought up on one—the same one," she added defiantly.

"Which is more than most New Yorkers can say," Dan added. "being born and raised in one place."

"That's true." Lynda's tone had lost none of its graciousness. "But canalboats are curious homes—where is yours Miss La Porte?"

Marie laughed. "I don't think you could ever find it. It's on the East river. Does that mean anything to you?"

"No." Lynda spoke abstractedly. "Oh, I'm sorry, I must be running on, I see your mother and Auntie going Dan." She jumped up. "I didn't want to leave without saying hello."

"Do you like her?" Marie asked, when Lynda had gone.

"I used to think I did, after a fashion," Dan admitted, "that is, until I met you, and then I knew it wasn't the real thing."

She was silent.

"A penny for your thoughts."

"They weren't important, just about you."

"I like that, of all the—" And then they both laughed.

THE rest of the luncheon went this way, laughing over silly things that could mean nothing to anyone but themselves; discovering that they shared a common antipathy to parsnips, banana cream pie and hatless men who strolled through the streets with upturned overcoat collars, that each adored walking in the rain and that they both would rather tango and waltz than eat.

"Why, everybody's gone," cried Marie, looking up. "It must be terribly late." She glanced at Dan. "I'm not even saying goodby. I can't, I'm just going."

She got up. He rose with a defiant, "I don't care who sees us," put his arms around her and kissed her squarely on the mouth. "I'm coming with you!"

"No, you promised—" She laughed and slipped away.

"You may call this goodby—" he shouted, but she was gone.

Out on the street, she turned toward Lexington Avenue—bending her head as the wind swirled a cloud of snow about her. But she stopped as she heard someone, a girl, calling.

"Oh, Miss La Porte." It was Lynda Martin. "I—I don't know how to begin." She paused. "But Dan is so young and foolish. I don't know how to explain, but—he'll break his mother's heart, if—"

"If what?" Marie's tone was sharp.

"If— It's so hard to explain—" Marie stared at her. "You mean if he doesn't marry you?"

"Yes."

Marie looked at Lynda coldly. "You don't need to worry. I'm not going to marry him. Goodby."

Lynda stood there staring after her until she had entirely vanished in the veil of white snow.

Home Economics Features Marmora W.I.

MARMORA, Feb. 22 (ENS)—The February meeting of the Marmora Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. F. N. Marett on Wednesday evening, with the attendance of 22.

Following opening exercises E. C. Prentice, principal of the Marmora Public School, gave a splendid talk on "Our Flag," illustrating how the crosses of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick combined to form the Union Jack. The talk was interspersed with fascinating legends.

The roll call was "An Original Valentine" and was fairly well responded to. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. William Lavender, Mrs. R. E. Neal consented to act in her place for the evening. Sympathetic reference was made to the bereavement sustained by a member, Mrs. A. Ellis, in the passing of her husband.

At the close of the business period, Mrs. H. A. Burwash gave a paper on "Home Economics, and Mrs. R. E. Neal followed with a humorous reading. A "car" contest brought the program to a close, and after the singing of the National Anthem lunch was served.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the United Church on Tuesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. W. P. Fletcher, in the chair.

Dr. Fletcher read the temperance note prepared by Miss M. Brown, after which Mrs. H. R. Haacke took charge of the worship service. The missionary program, in charge of Mrs. Fletcher, dealt with the Christians of Korea and biographies of two Korean women were given. Following the meeting the re-affiliation ceremony of the C.G.I.T. with the W.M.S. took place. A gift of money was received from the girls by the W.M.S. treasurer, to be used for the year's special objective.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Linton and children of Elmvale spent the week-end with Mrs. Linton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilkes.

A special showing of war pictures and other films took place in the Town Hall on Friday evening under auspices of St. Paul's Laymen's Association. Unfortunately through the prevalence of colds and other minor ailments locally, the return visit of Fred L. Roy of Peterborough was not marked with the large attendance which had been expected.

Mrs. John Bell of Toronto recently spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Underwood.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Burwash spent Sunday at Baltimore.

Musical Program Treat At Keene

KEENE, Feb. 22—(ENS). — The members of the Keene Ladies' Club enjoyed the treat of a rare musical program at their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Murray.

The program entitled "Famous Composers," was capably prepared by Miss Margaret Bryce and Mrs. F. A. Eason.

The works of several famous composers of all nationalities were briefly reviewed.

Mrs. Eason gave a paper on Mendelssohn, and Donald Murray ably played two of his compositions. The work of Handel was read by Mrs. A. Doris. Mrs. Wright read a paper on Schubert. Mrs. Robert Nelson discussed the work of Chopin, and Miss Lois Wright nicely played one of his famous waltzes.

A paper on Beethoven was given by Miss Bryce and on Haydn by R. Frankish. The work of Mozart was given by Mrs. P. Gillespie.

Miss Isabel Faux traced the life history of Stephen Foster and described the play, "Swanee River." Mrs. Eason and Miss Bryce concluded an interesting program by singing one of Foster's songs.

A number of contests were enjoyed and the serving of dainty refreshments by the hostess concluded the evening's entertainment.

The last shipment of the Red Cross group consisted of 32 dressing gowns, 189 babies' diapers, 3 turtleneck sweaters for men, 3 helmets, 3 pairs of two-way mitts, 3 scarves, 5 pairs of seamen's long socks, and 36 pairs of men's socks.

Home Preparing

BERLIN, Feb. 22 — (AP).—Dienst Aus Deutschland, a source close to German officialdom, said to-day that Nazi submarines were sinking comparatively few British ships because "many of the (U-boat) crews now are engaged in preparation for the big offensive which Hitler proclaimed."

(Hitler said in his speech on January 30 that an intensified U-boat campaign would be one of Germany's spring offensive moves.)

Propose Airline Over Canada To Alaska Bases

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A military airline from Minneapolis through Canada to Fairbanks, Alaska, was proposed yesterday by Representative Andrew Edmiston (Dem. West Virginia) as a means by which Great Britain could compensate the United States for materials of war.

Edmiston, senior member of an aviation sub-committee of the House Military Affairs committee, said the group had informally approved the suggestion.

It would tie in, he said, with his suggestion that Great Britain grant the United States a right-of-way for a highway from Seattle to Fairbanks. That suggestion, Edmiston said, also had been approved informally by many members of the Military Affairs committee.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22.—(CP)—A proposal put forward in Washington that a military airline from Minneapolis through Canada to Fairbanks, Alaska, might be built to compensate the United States for materials of war obtained by Britain, was seen her yesterday as virtual duplication of proposals long since considered and now in the process of being carried out.

A string of air bases connecting Edmonton with Alaska is already being laid out. A safe air highway to Edmonton is already available.

IN MEMORIAM

MAHOOD—In fond and loving remembrance of our dear Dad, who departed this life February 22, 1934.

Deep in our hearts lies a picture
Of a loved one gone to rest;
In memory's frame we will keep it
Because he was one of the best.
Our lips cannot speak how we miss him,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God alone knows how we miss him
In our hearts that are lonesome today,
To those who have their father:
Cherish him with care,
You will never know his value
Till you see the vacant chair.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by his daughter Mabel, and sons Wilmot and Bert.

DEYMAN.—In loving memory of Lewis H. Deyman, who passed away three years ago to-day.
God's finger touched him, and he slipped away

The Great Invasion

In the early morning hours of July 8, 1937, some Chinese soldiers, thinking they were to be attacked, fired on a Japanese detachment stationed at the Marco Polo bridge near Peking. Invasion and war had come at last for all China.

With savage fury the Japanese attacked. Their bombers rained death upon the great defenceless cities of the Chinese coastal area. Twenty million people were forced to evacuate their homes and flee to the western provinces for safety.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK—VI

Climax of Japanese ruthlessness came with the now historic Rape of Nanking in which a horror-stricken world beheld a great civilian population slaughtered. It was an insanely stupid blunder, because all China now girded for the fight. .....

The war drags on. A unified China resists step-by-step the invader. Victory may not yet be near, but hope in the heart of Marshall Chiang Kai-shek for his embattled people grows brighter. Calmly he prepares for that day which will bring peace.

Winning Phrases Needed to Achieve Popularity

Tongue-Tied Girl Wins No Beaus

No one to take her home! She's just not one of the group, can't return the boys' gay banter.

Listen to the glamour girls at any party—"innocent as a lamb . . . but livid, my dear . . . dazzled by success . . ." Nothing deep about that!

Instead of boring with "He's very serious," you just pep up your talk say brightly "He never cracks a smile!" Instead of a dull "I know it's so," jolly along with "Yessir, that's the naked truth!"

And knowing a few gracious social phrases is such an asset. Invitations? Accept them with an enthusiastic "I'll be delighted." You'll be invited again. Greet an acquaintance—and make a friend—with a warm "What a pleasure to see you."

In business, too, smooth phrases help. "Thank you for the interview" pleasantly ends a call, makes you appear poised, confident to your future employer.

In our 32-page booklet you'll find a treasury of bright phrases—to start a conversation and keep it going happily. Has many phrases you will use for social and business occasions, also for telephoning, letter-writing, toasts.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of EFFECTIVE PHRASES FOR ALL OCCASIONS to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

THIS CAN'T BE DONE

THE COURAGE of George Washington and his men enabled a little group of colonies to win a war from the world's most powerful empire. But not all of his great heroes, plus all the King's horses and all the King's men, could find a way to take two bridge tricks with a single card, even though they be working together heart and soul in a single cause as they are today. That was tried, however, recently, by one of the world's greatest players, who is still enjoying the laugh at himself. It should prove consoling to ordinary mortals for the mistakes they make at times, none of which can be funnier than his.

South was in a hurry. After West led the spade K, he saw quickly that he could discard one of the dummy's clubs on the fourth heart, and so could be in a position to ruff out his club losers. So he won the first trick in the dummy, dropped the trumps in three rounds as a "safety play," raked in four hearts, discarding dummy's club 5, laid down the club A and then suddenly realized he had to ruff two clubs in the dummy, but had only one trump with which to do it, the J. There was no way to trump them both with one card, so he had to lose a club trick at the end.

If he had not been in such a hurry, he would have seen after the second trump lead that his plan would not work, and that the club finesse was obligatory to make his contract. He did not feel any better when he learned East had the club K, and the finesse would have worked.

MOUNT PLEASANT

Life Membership In WA Given Miss A. Sisson

MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 22. — (ENS)—Mrs. H. Seeney, Ida, was hostess to the members and friends of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church, Cavan, for their regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon, with an attendance of thirteen members and three visitors. The president, Mrs. Beatty, was in the chair and was in charge of the Litanies. The scripture lesson was read by Miss Jean Lough.

Plans were made for the bale to clothe an Indian girl at White Fish Lake.

War Orders

sources were neglected in favor of Ontario and Quebec.

Opposition Leader Hanson and Percy Black (Con. Cumberland) spoke on behalf of the Maritime provinces, the former claiming less than four per cent. of Canadian war dustry was located in the Maritimes.

Must Stay With Power.

Mr. Howe said he was as anxious as any member to see the new industries widely distributed but it was necessary to establish them where power was readily avaailable and where it would not be necessary to make long rail hauls of raw material to the plans and long hauls to shipment points.

The Minister gave figures to show that the government was committed to $307,000,000 in capital advances to priavte companies to enable them to enter upon war production.

Security for this money was the plant and equipment the companies purchased, which would remain the property of the government.

The House adjourned at 6 p.m. E.D.T. until Monday after four days' consideration of the resolution moved by Finance Minister Ilsley, preliminary to introduction of a $1,300,000,000 war appropriation bill covering the fiscal year starting next April 1.

Little progress had been made. The House remained in the committee stage on the resolution and requests were on record for a great volume of information on detailed expenditures and information regarding aircraft production which will be brought down next week.

Pouliot, Ralston Tangle

The sitting was enlivened at the start by the bitter attack launched by Mr. Pouliot on certain members of the government and a number of officials in the Defence Department.

Mr. Pouliot said he had "never witnessed such backstage intrigue as there now is in high quarters." This intrigue was being carried on by "a group of scoundrels, buccaneers, racketeers, pirates, who are trying to get hold of Canada's wealth for their own purposes."

The Rowell-Sirois report, he said, was designed not to give information but to keep the real facts from the public. Adoption of the report was being urged by those who wished to further railway amalgamation and make money for financial interests.

Of Col. Ralston he said: "When I was fighting Bennett (Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Conservative Prime Minister) I was not receiving $200 a day in fees from the Dominion government."

Turning to Mr. Howe, he said: "I will tell him that when I was fighting Bennett during the five years he was in power . . . I was not building elevators for R. B. Bennett at various places in Canada. . . .

"I am fighting the cause of the Liberal party for my chief (Prime Minister Mackenzie King) in order that he shall not be stabbed in the back after they have burned enough incense under his nose."

He said that when, last year, there had been opposition demands that Col. Ralston succeed Mr. King as Prime Minister, Col. Ralston had failed to disavow those proposals but had listened "just as though he had been drinking honey and milk."

Ralston Defends Friends

After Mr. Pouliot sat down, Col. Ralston said the Temiscouata member had been exercising his rights in speaking as he did "but it does seem to me that it is not entirely consistent with the professions of friendship he has made, a friendship which I have endeavored in my period in public life and all the time I have been in this House, to maintain with him."

The minister warmly defended those in his department who had been attacked by Mr. Pouliot, including Victor Sifton, acting master-general of the ordnance, Brig. R. J. Orde, judge advocate-general, and Col. A. A. McGee, the minister's executive assistant.

Of his own acceptance of a $200-a-day retainer as counsel to a royal commission on grain some years ago, Col. Ralston said that was the regular and normal fee. "I have no apologies to make to my honorable friend (Mr. Pouliot) or anyone else with regard to that matter," he added.

Denies Manitoba Pressure

When Mr. Howe was told by Mr. Hanson and Mr. Black that certain aircraft business promised the Canada Car Company in Amherst, N.S., had not been forthcoming, he retorted that there was an accumulation of aircraft assembly work in the hands of that company and asked Mr. Black to use his influence in having the work speeded up.

He denied an accusation by Mr. Hanson that the Government had yielded to pressure from the Manitoba Government to have a cordite plant established in Winnipeg. He said he received much more pressure for war industries from the New Brunswick Government than from that of Manitoba.

Mr. Cruickshank claimed there was a factory in New Westminster capable of making 100,000 shells a month, but it was not making one. Mr. Reid also told the minister this plant had prepared for orders which were not forthcoming.

Mr. Howe said the plant was making lathes which were greatly needed. He said also that a British Columbia plant was making the largest airplane produced in Canada and had the largest order given a single plant.

Farmer Enquiring About Rough Grain Policy
Canada Packers Planning Group Meetings

Increasing interest in the arrangements for transporting feed grains from the west to Ontario was reported in the city and district this week, and it seems likely that some local business will develop from this policy. Quite a number of farmers have been inquiring about the exact plans of this policy which is being promoted by the federal and provincial governments. They will each pay 50 per cent of the freight on car lots of barley, oats and feed wheat from Port Arthur or Fort William to Ontario destinations.

Local farmers may order feed grain from farmers in western Canada, but the freight assistance on these orders will be only the equivalent of the freight from the head of the lakes. Otherwise the business which is expected to reach considerable volume is directed through the regular dealers.

Farmers purchasing a car of feed grain shall sign an order form in triplicate. The original is to be given to the dealer. The duplicate is to be forwarded to the local Agricultural representative. Each application must be accompanied by the order forms of those farmers expecting to get grain from the car.

These are the general regulations applying to the ordering of grain from the west. The attractive feature about it is that it is freight-free from Fort William or Port Arthur

Farmers are advised that information may be obtained from the local trade or from Frank C. Paterson, representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Farmers who have been asking for details here this week are mostly breeders of dairy cattle, but there have been others who are featuring beef cattle and pigs

Jersey Breeders' Dinner

Bacon Demonstration

For the purpose of telling their story of market needs and acquainting farmers of the details of the industry, Canada Packers Limited are inviting seventy-five breeders of Pigs from the Stirling-Belleville district of Hastings county to visit the local plant here next Friday.

It is understood that this is the first of a series of educational meetings, Gordon Matthews, local manager of the plant, is actively interested in the planning of them, and also in meeting the farmers, and the details of demonstrations will be left to Mac Gordon and Graham Eastwood.

Processing methods will be shown to the company's guests, rail grading will be objectively explained, and there will be judging competitions of live hogs with later examination of the carcasses after killing.

Dinner will be served to the visitors at Murray Street Baptist church and the day's proceedings, beginning at 10 a.m. (DST) will wind up about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The company is beginning with the Hastings county breeders, and will extend the invitations to other groups in the district and provide corresponding programs for them in later weeks

Federation Dinner

The Federation of Agriculture dinner last Wednesday was a fine success and left the directors and everybody else quite happy. Well deserved compliments were paid to the ladies of George Street United church. They and Rev. Mr. Roberts and other members of the congregation contributed a great deal to the success of the affair

The dinner demonstrated what Peterborough farmers can do when they undertake something and really apply themselves to it. The stalwarts of the local rural movement were nearly all present. Some were in Toronto at annual meetings and others were ill. Probably there were some new recruits present, but not enough of them.

Alex L. Elliott, M.L.A., made one remark in his speech that is worth remembering. "You will find the best leadership in your own organization," and it is a fact that this local area including some farmers from Cavan, Emily and South Monaghan, have become energetic and well informed leaders, and the movement is gradually expanding.

W. H. (Wat) Porter, editor of the Farmers Advocate, also said something that lingers in the memory—"The real enemy of agriculture is in our own hearts and minds." He asserted that the London conference, visited by the Hon. James Gardiner, had put $10,000,000, or will put that money, in the pockets of Ontario farmers this year. He gave most of the credit to Herb. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation, much of the credit for bringing together so many farm interests and welding them in a common unit, an evidence of what can be done when the urge to union becomes focussed on some need and purpose.

"Let us go out as a construction gang and not as a wrecking crew," Mr. Porter advised. "We must equip ourselves for this movement. We must be well informed. If farmers are going to forget everything about this movement when seeding time comes, then I for one haven't time to waste on it. Let us take the long view of our organization and what it can do, like the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Indicating it intended to proceed with recommendations of the select committee which investigated court procedure, the Government introduced several bills for the purpose of implementing these and at the same time tabled the committee's report.

None of the main recommendations, such as abolition of grand juries in the Court of General Sessions, weer touched however. One of the bills, that to amend the Sheriffs' Act, would eliminate court criers and allot their duties to other court attaches.

Treatment of tubercular victims will be restricted to Government-operated institutions by means of an amendment to the Private Hospitals Act. Health Minister Kirby explained the amendment was to prevent private hospitals admitting tubercular patients, which he said were the particular charge of the Government.

The Corridor Bait

Press despatches from foreign sources reported Germany had offered Yugoslavia a corridor through Greece to the Aegean port of Salonika in return for concessions including the right to move Nazi war material and troops through the country.

(Associated Press dispatches from Belgrade last Wednesday said long lines of sealed railway cars, believed to contain German war supplies, were reported already rolling across Yugoslavia toward Bulgaria).

An exchange telegraph report from Switzerland said the German terms, given to Yugoslav Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic in a conference with Hitler last week, included:

Strict neutrality for Yugoslavia and disinterest toward any Nazi moves in Bulgaria and Greece, partial demobilization of the Yugoslav army the right to move war material throgh Yugoslavia accompanied by enough troops to safeguard transport, and provision for German air bases in Southern Yugoslavia.

Slice Of Albania.

In return the dispatch said, Germany offered to guarantee Yugoslavia a corridor to Salonika, which would become a "free port"; offered Yugoslavia a slice of Northern Albania, and pledged the Reich to mediate with Italy for transfer of the Adriatic seaport of Zara to Yugoslavia. Yugoslavia, it was said, would have to allow minor territorial concessions to Hungary and Bulgaria.

Exchange Telegraph quoted diplomatic sources in Belgrade as saying Yugoslavia would agree to all points except partial demobilization and the granting of air bases.

(Ziga Sol, Croat party leader, implied last Tuesday that the agreement already had been reached, and said it included the right to move war materials through Yugoslavia and gave Germany a greater share of Yugoslav agricultural production).

To the north, in Eritrea, British forces advancing from the north have dispersed Italian troops holding positions about Cubcub.

Here, too, many prisoners were captured and the southward thrust was described as "progressing."

Boulogne Rocks Under 74th RAF Battering

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(CP).—Royal Air Force bombers hit against during the night at familiar targets along the Nazi-held invasion coast, raiding Boulogne for the 74th time and Calais for the 61st.

Officials said the attacks were on a "moderate scale" but were "quite successful" despite unfavorable weather. During the night anti-aircraft fire on the French coast could be seen and heard across the Strait of Dover.

At Boulogne large fires were started in the dock area. At Calais a ship in the dock was hit and set on fire. Coastal aircraft attacked the docks at Brest.

The Air Ministry news service described the weather last night as "extremely capricious."

"In intervals of good weather," it added, "our pilots were able to observe good results from the bombing. Fires were quickly started at Boulogne and aircraft arriving soon after the beginning of the raid found them a useful guide.

"At Calais one of our pilots was able to count 30 fires among the docks and again ground defences were formidable."

Writing Upon Snow In Newfoundland Indicates Survivors

OTTAWA, Feb. 24 (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe today announced to the House of Commons that the plane in which Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of Insulin, had been reported missing, had been located.

The minister said he had no direct word of survivors.

The plane was reported missing by authorities yesterday. The plane, a military machine, had not been heard from since last Friday.

But, he told the House of Commons a message had been written in the snow near the grounded machine, indicating some one on the plane survived.

Mr. Howe said the plane was located on a point of land on the direct route between Canada and Botwood, Newfoundland.

First word that Sir Frederick was missing in a military plane was given out by Montreal authorities yesterday.

They said the plane had not been heard from since Friday and that a search was being conducted.

Mr. Howe said a plane, equipped with skis and capable of landing at the scene had been sent to investigate the fate of Dr. Banting and three companions.

See Pilot On Coast.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—(CP).—Officials announced to-day a man had been seen on the Newfoundland coast and it was believed he was Capt. Joseph Creighton Mackey, in charge of the military plane aboard which Sir Frederick Banting is missing.

An official announcement released here last night described the aircraft only as "a military airplane being delivered by a civilian organization." The plane carried a crew of three, in addition to its one passenger.

Sir Frederick, a major in the Canadian Army, has devoted much of his time in the last two years to research in the field of aviation medicine. He is chairman of the Associate Committee on Aviation Medicine, an organization he was instrumental in founding shortly before the war started.

The crew of the plane consisted of Capt. Joseph Creighton Mackey, formerly a test pilot with the civil aeronautics administration in Kansas City, Navigator Bird of Kidderminster, England, and William Snailham of Bedford, N.S.

The announcement that the plane was missing gave no indication of where it had taken off nor its intended destination, but indicated it may have come down somewhere in the sea along Canada's eastern coast, or in some remote section of the Maritime provinces or Newfoundland.

Nine Of 14 Drown As Ice Truck Goes Into River

LONGUEUIL, Que., Feb. 24—(CP)—Nine men were drowned today when a truck loaded with ice-cutters crashed through the St. Lawrence River ice near this south shore town.

Provincial police officers reported five of the 14 men aboard the truck were saved and taken to various hospitals in Montreal, across the St. Lawrence River from here.

An officer said the bodies of the men still were in the truck, in which they were trapped when it plunged into the river shortly before dawn.

Police said there was difficulty in establishing identities but released a list of 10 men, nine of whom were drowned. One of the 10 was saved but police were unable to identify him in the list.

The list of 10, all Montrealers, follows:

Philemon Daoust, the chauffeur; L. Legault, Jean Baptiste Gagne, Henri Gauthier, Zacharie Meunier; Paul Emile Faucher, married; Charles Lafranchise, married; O. Senecal; Ildedge Giroux, married; Smilien Lavigne.

Those saved and in hospitals included:

The heavily-laden truck went through the ice as the men, employed by H. Brunnelle, Limited, ice-cutting company, were being taken from here to nearby Boucherville. The vehicle was being driven along the ice to a spot where the men were to start cutting operations.

All were dressed in rubber boots and heavy clothing, which apparently hampered their efforts to reach the river surface.

From their hospital beds, Benoit Leduc and Marcel Senecal said they had managed to kick off their heavy boots and escape from the sunken truck. In the darkness they could see none of their workmates but they heard screams as the men were plunged into the icy water.

Hospital attendants said Leduc and Senecal were suffering from cold and shock but otherwise appeared uninjured.

Beaten Out In Africa Duce Apologizes, Win Yet With Nazi Aid

ROME, Feb. 24 —(AP)—Frankly confessing that Fascist arms had met with serious reverses in Africa, Premier Benito Musolini told the Italian people yesterday that the entire Tenth Army had been smashed with its armaments and guns, and the Fifth Air Corps "has been almost completely sacrificed."

This admission from the Duce came during a forty-four-minute speech in the Theatre Adriano, and it was coupled with a further statement that the war would be a long one. It was a speech in which the dictator blended appeals to his people to stand fast with threats of what his legions would do to the foes of Italy.

He promised a new Italian offensive against the Greeks, scoffed at United States fears of an Axis invasion of America, and assailed what he called the small minority of Italian "weepers, grumblers and snakes" left over from the Masonic lodges, "whom we will smash when and as we wish."

Claims 215,000 Tons Of Shipping Sunk Last 2 Days

MUNICH, Feb. 24.—(AP).—Hitler, in an emotional address to the German people, said to-day that Germany would unleash a "new type" of submarine "into the expanded warfare" next month.

"They will find out in March and April what German-Italian submarine co-operation will mean to them," he shouted.

"Our battles at sea can only begin now. The reason was that we wanted to school the new U-boat crews for the battle to come."

The Nazi leader, speaking on the 21st anniversary of his founding of the National Socialist Party, claimed that within the last two days the German U-boat and air force had destroyed 215,000 tons of enemy shipping. (There has been no word in London confirming any such claim of Nazi success in sea warfare).

"Most of a Convoy"

"Just a few hours ago," Hitler said, "I received a notice from our high command that our naval forces had just sunk 215,000 tons of enemy shipping. It was a convoy and 90,000 tons of the total tonnage were escort vessels while the remainder were transports.

"It will be much more from the first of April, and they will understand then that we haven't slept."

Foil Buzzards In 50-Mile Trek Of Peru Wastes, Airliner Quits

(John Lear, a writer for the Associated Press, reached Lima, Peru, on Sunday after a harrowing experience in the Sechura Desert. The plane in which he was flying to Lima was forced down last Tuesday and he was not heard from until late last night. He has been in South America on assignment to do special articles. CHICLAYO, Peru, Feb. 24—(AP).—A band of fishermen brought me back to safety Sunday after a terrible trek for two days and three night on foot in the Sechura desert with only a bottle of soft drink and a banana to share among three men.

We were so close to gone at one point that the buzzards began circling around us in the desolate sands.

With me were Hugh Wells, owner and pilot of the plane which was forced down last Tuesday in the desert, and Herman Baumann, Peruvian Government highway engineer. We had left 12 other persons at the fuel-less plane in a desperate bid for help.

We made the trip with an umbrella, a compass, and a flashlight, besides our little bottle of soda pop and the lone banana. And me without a hat.

Wells set the course with the compass and the light.

Baumann carried the umbrella, which shielded us from the blaze of the tropical sun by day and was used in several unsuccessful attempts to catch drinking water from the sky during the night.

I carried the bottle and the banana.

By some miracle my guess of the time required to get out of the desert proved exactly right, but to

France Main Cog in New Order

Though Beaten, Powerless Her Cooperation Vital To Nazis

By PRESTON L. GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

PARIS (Via Berlin—Delayed), Feb. 19.—(AP). — Even though France now is a powerless, defeated country, Germany needs her for successful re-organization of Europe, Fernand De Brinon, Vichy delegate to German authorities, said to-day.

De Briton's statement was part of a summary of what he believes to be the position of France with relation not only to Germany but also to Britain and the United States.

De Brinon favors collaboration between France and Germany. He claimed that collaboration is all Germany asks and not a direct turnabout which would place France actively in arms against Britain.

Referring to the meeting of Hitler and Petain at Montoire, De Brinton claimed that at no time had the Fuehrer demanded active French help against Britain. He quoted Hitler as saying, in effect:

"I do not ask for this because you could not do it. But I ask you to help me shorten the war by means in your power. I ask you to help in Africa, which is normally a complement of Europe, by opposing enterprises of Great Britain or De Gaulle in your African Empire.

"This I ask you to do and for it France will find again in the new Europe the place it used to have."

(Gen. Charles de Gaulle is leader of Free French forces allied with Britain.)

To this proposition of collaboration De Brinon claimed, the Marshal agreed.

(Indications from Vichy have been, hovewer, that Petain refuses to give Germany or Italy access to the French Empire in Africa for operations against Britain.

De Brinon was asked what possibility France had of remaining a first-line power in Europe alongside victorious Germany.

"At the moment," he said, and here he began choosing his words

Banting Leaves To Give U.K. Research Report

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—The news that Sir Frederick Banting was missing came as a tremendous shock to men like Colonel Graham, Squadron Leader E. G. Hall and Dr. Velyien Henderson who are associated with him on the advisory medical committee of the National Research Council, to Dr. C. H. Best, co-discoverer of insulin, to all workers at the Banting Institute and generally to the University of Toronto.

Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, chairman of the board of governors of the university, recalled that just recently Sir Frederick had been given leave of absence to go to England. From other sources it was carefully, "France is fallen as a great power....In order to remain a great power France must accept collaboration...."

The interview turned to the possibility of German success in organizing Europe and whether it could be done without French help.

"It is possible," De Brinon went on, "that Germany wants to impose its law by force. But this could last only a few months, a few years at most. Peaceful reorganization of Europe would be impossible without the help of France. For Germany, it is necessary to collaborate with France."

The resumption of debate found the bill's backers revising their hopes of getting a final Senate vote by Thursday or Friday, and then quick House approval of Senate changes so that the legislation could be delivered to President Roosevelt by the week-end.

Clark asserted in his prepared address that Britain "is fighting for precisely the same thing she fought for 1,000 years, commercial supremacy."

"She has a right to do this," he continued, "if she wants to kill her sons to preserve the riches of her empire.

"That is her affair, but it is certainly not ours."

Saying it was "beside the point" to discuss whether Germany should have invaded Poland or whether Britain should have declared war on Germany, Clark added that the British "undertook to starve the Germans into submission," with the blockade.

"They miscalculated and are now in a devil of a fix. And that is about all there is to this war."

Clark said that if he believed nations in Europe or Asia were fighting "America's fight" he would "declare war, and declare it now."

make the rations fit the time it was necessary to cut the banana in tiny slices and restrict the use of soft drink to the few drops that could be obtained by sticking one's tongue in the bottle opening and letting the liquid touch it.

We reached the Pacific Ocean—the only practical destination we could aim at after leaving the plane at sundown last Tuesday—with the dawn of the third day. We had walked 50 miles.

Then the second miracle happened.

While we were devising ways of distilling sea water to drink and catching crabs and oysters to eat, the fishermen came by the shack we had built from driftwood, our coats and our shirts.

These hardy fellows poured a potent brand of firewater into us, gave us some tough dry fish to eat, and set us each on a burro.

That was Friday noon.

By driving the burros day and night, they carried us to Morrope, the town closest to the desert's edge, by dusk on Saturday.

From there we came by truck to this place on the Pan-American highway, arriving about 1 a.m. Sunday, to learn that the people we were trying to save already had been rescued and had sent searchers for us.

Although a dozen planes, a corps of goverment trucks, and a part of the army on horseback and other men on foot combed 200 miles of desert, they couldn't find us.

They had considered it humanly impossible for us to have travelled outside that area and so they gave us up for dead.

That we are not dead is the result of a series of things that could never happen but did!

At one time it began to rain, and we stopped for half an hour trying to catch the water with the umbrella. By the time the drizzle had ended, we didn't have enough even to pour into the now empty bottle. We did the next best thing and licked the drops from the waterproof cloth.

Now we could hear the roar of the sea in our ears—or what we took to be the sea. It seemed to be coming from the south. So we shifted our course from southwest to south and arrived at the breakers just before dawn.

Young Baumann was impatient to get aid to the friends in the plane and left Wells and myself in the small shack we had built of driftwood to shelter us from the terrific heat.

A few hours later he disappeared down the coast, the fishermen suddenly appeared. Wells and I were stark naked in an effort to escape the heat. We rushed out on the beach to greet them.

They picked us up as though we were children and put us on their burros.

As we went along the beach we began to fear for Baumann. We came across an empty bottle he had taken with him. Then we found him stumbling along the coast.

The road to Morrope which cut back across a strip of the desert was an eight-hour trip. It was too much for me, and I became ill. When my burrow went under a low-hanging branch near the coast I was brushed off the animal without even knowing it.

At Morrope, they had to lift me off the burro into a chair and carry the chair inside a house and put me to bed.

forces were being aided by Senegalese reinforcements who travelled half way across the continent by truck to get into the fight.

The Senegalese, a battalion of Free French forces, crossed the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan from Chad in French Equatorial Africa, then were transported by ship to the Northern Red Sea coast of Eritrea.

They joined the upper claw of a British pincer being closed on the railroad town of Cheren, where the Italians have held out determinedly.

A British communique announced yesterday this advance from the north was making satisfactory progress, while other forces a few miles west of Cheren "continue their preparation for the reduction of the Italian positions covering the town."

Of the Ethiopian fighting the British communique said: "A combined force of our troops and patriots (Ethiopian natives) have occupied Shogahi on the Blue Nile."

An Italian counter attack "was repulsed, leaving over 150 dead on the field," the communique said.

It added that in Italian Somaliland operations were developing "to our advantage" after the clean-up around captured Jumbo near the mouth of the Juba river.

(The Ministry of Information in London announced the British crossing of the Juba cost the Italians "their strongest natural defence" in Italian Somaliland and predicted that the Italians might not be able to rally "before Mogadiscio itself." Mogadiscio is the large Somaliland port 250 miles up the coast from the Juba mouth.)

A statement from the Royal Air Force Middle East headquarters today said British bombers escorted by fighter planes were making "continuous raids on Gura, Cheren and Asmara," capital of Eritrea.

EndHomeService Pay Plums Is Nickle's Plea

MADOC, Feb. 24. — In the interests of the policy of thrift and economy which the people of Canada are being asked to follow, the Canadian Government should cancel dependents' allowances to reserve officers, and thus set the example, W. M. Nickle, K.C., of Kingston, declared here last night at a war savings meeting.

Branding the present situation as "indefensible," Mr. Nickle declared that dependents' allowances should be given only those who leave home and family, and not for non-combatant reserve officers "living tranquilly at home with family and friends."

"If these conditions exist, and who will truthfully say that they don't, then the officers in question and all other ranks who are receiving such pay plums for their home services must appreciate that this practice must stop, and stop in a hurry," said Mr. Nickle. "The Canadian ship of state cannot continue to float unless the financial leaks to which I have referred, and others, are plugged. Surely a man who offers his life for his family is entitled to a better rate of pay than the non-combatant reserve officer who lives tranquilly at home with his family? Dependents' allowance was given for the wife of the officer, N.C.O., or man on active service with a view to compensating him in dollars and cents for the extra expense that his household might be put to by reason of his absence from home and family.

Points the Finger,

"I ask with confidence the Prime Minister of Canada, is it not a fact that the district officer commanding M.D. No. 3, Kingston, receives more pay in time of war than did his predecessor in office in times of peace?" asked the speaker. "Is it not a fact that the district officer commanding Kingston, his staff officers, the officer commanding the reserve force at Kingston, the officer commanding the home guard artillery at Fort Frontenac, the quartermaster of the Medical Corps, the head of the dental services and many of his assistants, the works officer of R.M.C., the officer commanding the military hospital, and the chief recruiting officer are all receiving dependents' allowances at the rate of $65 a month and upward while living at home? If this is a fact, the sooner this indefensible condition is remedied by the Government, the better. If these conditions exist in Kingston, do they not exist elsewhere?

"Throughout Canada," continued Mr. Nickle, "there is a great group of officers and men, retired on pension on account of age or otherwise, whose services should be recruited or conscripted for military or other duties for the state, without being given any additional remuneration. If this cannot now be legally done, the Parliament of Canada which is now in session, could easily enact the necessary legislation to make it possible. If this policy were put into effect, the services of many reserve officers could be dispensed with without in any way interfering with our war effort.

"The system is wrong and must be righted," declared the speaker. "It is with confidence and hope that I direct the attention of the Prime Minister and his Minister for Defence to a financial iniquity that demands correction if the fervor of the people for the prosecution of the war is to be maintained and stimulated and their thrift and generosity encouraged."

Mr. Miles said death resulted from a bullet which made a clean hole through the right lens of Borislavsky's glasses and passed through his brain.

Col. Peter Zouboff, a friend of the slain man, asked by newsmen if he thought there was any political significance in Borslavsky's death, replied: "No, he had no political affiliations. He was a man of science."

Zouboff said Borislavsky had been working on scientific devices for the elimination of smoke, and that a bomb designed by Borislavsky had received "favorable replies" from the United States' War Department, although it had not been officially accepted.

"A German at a table not far from mine protested furiously and in a very animated way to the restaurant proprietor.

"About that time I had to go to the washroom. As I passed this German's table he suddenly growled at me:

"'What do you mean by ordering the orchestra to play that tune? Don't you realize it is against Germany?'

"His face was livid with rage. I tried to hold my temper. I replied as courteously as I could that I liked the tune, that Bulgaria was a neutral country, that I intended to do and say what I pleased.

"His face became contorted with anger. Then he reached for an empty wine bottle on his table. I quickly stepped back and threw up my hands to protect myself. I was not afraid of being hit, but I have always, in polo accidents and plane crackups, had a fear of losing my eyesight.

"The bottle, which the German threw at close range, struck me on the forearm. A bruise which later appeared was more than six inches long.

"This sudden, vicious, unprovoked attack irritated me considerably. I also faced the necessity of defending myself against further vicious attacks, so I smashed him in the face, knocking him down and causing his face to bleed.

"My friends at this point suddenly grabbed me and pushed me into a small adjoining room. All Bulgarians present also rallied to my side and helped protect me. The German was joined by a great many other Germans in civilian clothes, who rushed to his side from various parts of the restaurant. They made many attempts to charge through the wall of Bulgarians standing in front of me, but each time without success.

"It was one hour later that order finally was re-established enough so we could leave the restaurant and go to the American legation."

The identity of the German and how seriously he was injured were not established as no trace of him has been found.

Mr. Earle said he had been informed that the man was a German army officer who was ordered by his superiors last night to return to the Bucharest headquarters of the German Balkan army.

No confirmation of this report could be obtained from German circles here, which are maintaining silence over the episode.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Mussolini's apologia to his people yesterday was almost pathetic for its combination of bombastic promises of victory and excuses for failure of his African arms.

The proud Duce took pains to point out that his forces are supported by those of Germany and asserted German air and armed ground troops were now in Sicily and Libya.

It was no news that German air forces were in Sicily for the British Royal Air Force has been bombing their stations for the last week or so, operating possibly from Malta, Mediterranean stronghold which the Italians sought last week to advertise as untenable and abandoned as a defence outpost.

Mussolini gave considerable evidence to indicate all is not harmonious between his Fascist political leadership and his army chiefs. He paid particular attention to Marshal Graziani's complaint that reinforcement and additional supplies did not reach Mersa Matruh in time to prevent British forces striking at him before he was ready to march through Egypt to the Suez canal.

The Duce listed an imposing list of men and materials which, should his account be true, should have been ample to cope with forces Britain had at her disposal in the area at the time.

However, said Mussolini, the British stole a march on Graziani by attacking him 10 or 15 days before he was ready to proceed eastward. This assertion corresponded with Graziani's only on the matter of time and it was not completely clear whether it was intended as a rebuttal, although it bore the earmarks of such

The Duce promised his people that spring would bring success to Italian counter efforts to win back that part of Albania taken from them by the Greeks, but hitherto the Greeks, advancing steadily, have found themselves greatly impeded by weather conditions and by heavy snows in the mountains. Spring, almost certainly, will bring a virtual cessation to ground hostilities, other than artillery, by releasing torrents of water off the mountainsides.

The Italian dictator's emphasis on the alleged prowess of German forces fighting beside his own sounded like a moderately forlorn effort to cheer his people—especially after it became known he had ordered a large appropriation of money to repair damage done in Naples by Royal Air Force bombers and to provide shelters for the frightened populace. The fact that they lacked shelters in the first place as a fair indication of the slipshod nature of Italian war preparations.

Produce Market Prices Hold Up

The farm produce market Saturday was up to the winter average in attendance, and prices generally at recent week-end levels. Butter was 35 and 36 cents a pound, broiler chickens 35 cents, chickens 22 to 25 cents and hens 19 and 20 cents. The supply of poultry seemed lighter than usual.

At the fresh meat stands outdoors pork was 12 and 14 cents, beef 12 and 14 cents and 13 and 15 cents, and lamb 20 and 22 cents.

Potatoes were unchanged at $1, $1.10 and $1.20. Other vegetables such as carrots, parsnips, cabbage and turnips were the same prices as a week ago.

Northern Spy apples sold at $1.40 to $1.75 a bushel, and 40 and 50 cents a peck, with some at 35 cents; Snows 53 and 40 cents a peck and up to $1.50 a bushel and also down to $1 at one stand. Russets were $1 a bushel and Pippins $1.25.

British Subs Bag 7 Italian Ships

Latest Models Active In Siege Of Fascist Empire

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(CP)—The Admiralty announced Sunday that seven Italian supply ships had been blasted to the bottom of the Mediterranean in recent submarine operations and disclosed indirectly that Britain has sent some of her latest model undersea craft into the sea siege of the Fascist Empire.

The Admiralty listed two submarines—the Upholder and the Utmost—which are not found in the latest naval reference books, thus indicating they are among Britain's newest submersibles.

It has been announced that other new British war craft are operating in the Mediterranean, where the navy is likely to play as big a role in any major offensive in that area as it is expected to do in the long-threatened invasion of Britain.

If Britain decides to take any kind of a land initiative in the Balkans, it will be the navy that will have to carry the troops there and land them, it was pointed out.

The Admiralty reported these sinkings:

The Upholder—Two supply ships.
The Rover—An oil tanker.
The Regent—A supply ship.
The Truant—The largest ship in a Fascist convoy.
The Triton—Two supply ships.
The Utmost hit a supply ship which was "seen to be in a sinking condition" but the Admiralty did not claim her as being sunk.

Campinchi Dies, Famed French Lawyer

VICHY, France, Feb. 24—Cesar Campinchi, former minister of the Navy and Deputy from Corsica, who belonged to the group in the Daladier Cabinet which consistently opposed the Munich policy, died Sunday in Marseille after an operation.

Since the armistice he had been much attacked in the Nationalist press, which demanded his internment, but the Government took no action against him and he was staying in Marseille in retirement.

Cesar Campinchi made his reputation as a criminal lawyer in the Paris courts, where he came into prominence soon after the Great War. In numerous cases he was pitted against the leading attorneys, such as Henri Robert, De-Moro-Giafferi, and Henry Tores, and often to his advantage. He was an extremely able court speaker whose arguments were often built on legal subtleties, and who was given much to the telling use of irony.

He did not enter politics until 1930, when he was elected Deputy in Corsica after fierce political campaigns in which he matched his strength with the Chiappe faction.

Daladier chose him as Minister of the Navy in several Cabinets. Campinchi consistently advocated resistance to German and Italian aggression and publicly rejected the Italians' claims to Corsica.

At the time of the Munich conference with Georges Mandel, Paul Reynaud and others he favored rejection of the German offers, and his enemies charged him and the same group of having prevented the efforts of Georges Bonnet to keep peace in September, 1939.

The successes against German dive bombers after last month's attack on the aircraft carrier Illustrious were made evident by the fact that not a single enemy plane attempted to dive-bomb the fleet in this operation.

Destruction of 90 of the 150 dive bombers based in Sicily let the Germans know that further dive bombing would be extremely costly in the face of highly-effective fire from the guns of the ships and the planes of the fleet air arm.

Trade With the Favored

Every nation—including the United States—must realize that Germany is an "immensely powerful factor" in world economics, Hitler said.

"We are going to do business solely on the basis of German advantage," he asserted. "If it's good for Germany, we shall trade, and no American or British interests are going to put a stop to our way of doing business."

"We must be reckoned with and whether we deal on an exchange basis or not that is no business of any international, New York or London bankers."

Hitler, giving thanks that he was hale and hearty and able to lead the fight, remarked that he felt "that Spring is in the air."

Hitler traced the rise of the party he helped to found and shouted to his partisans a recapitulation of the hardships he said the party had endured in "freeing Germany from shackles of the Versailles Treaty."

Hitler touched on United States participation in post-war developments when he said that "even the high-sounding promises of former President Wilson turned out to be so much talk."

"Promises made to us by other nations were utterly futile and hollow," he said.

On Same Program.

"Fellow party members," Hitler began, "this day to us is a day of great significance. To me personally it means a great deal. It is a point of particular satisfaction to me to be in a position to-day to repeat exactly the same program as I promulgated it 21 years ago.

"Twenty-one years ago we started on a program which determined no longer to represent the special interests of any special groups within the population.

"We determined to act as the representatives —not of special religious or economic groups—but solely as the representatives of the large masses of the people.

"At the time we were in the midst of a great debacle. We were trying to overcome the hardships of the Versailles Treaty and to rebuild our national destinies.

"German political leadership of that time was utterly incapable of dealing with the necessities of the time."

He went on:

"Our enemies cannot understand that once I look a man in the eye and call him my friend, there is nothing in the world that can come between us. We are united with Italy, in bonds that are so strong, that no power on earth can sever.

"There is the strongest co-operation between us, and when our enemies ridicule the latest German-Italian co-operation in the submarine warfare, they don't know what is in store for them. But they will know what has been going on. They will know shortly, when our new types of submarine are going to be brought into the expanded warfare.

The Zero Hour?

"They will find out in March and April what German-Italian submarine co-operation will mean to them.

"Of course, our enemies keep predicting our downfall. But then, they have always done that.

"In the spring of 1941, they said, England is going to take the initiative, Well, we are waiting.

"Where is that initiative?

"Thirteen years ago, we finally came into power. We did not ask anything of the world. We went about our business, and always said that we do not want anything that the others do not have.

"I was ready to disarm, if the others were ready. But there were certain things of which Germany stood in dire need. Those things were vital to her national interests. Their aims and ours are radically different. They are fighting for the maintenance of their gold bags. But we are not fighting for things like that. I am not going to buy money bags for the German people. I am going to buy goods for them. It is a simple fact that nations today can no longer be built and exist on the capitalistic basis.

"As soon as I found that our present-day enemies were unwilling to come to peaceful agreement, I began to prepare our national defence mechanism.

"I anticipate the final onslaught with the utmost confidence and this confidence is based on the realization that we possess the greatest military machine of all times. And behind this military machine we have the entire German nation, unified and determined.

"No power on earth can ever break up this unity. It is a unity such as would be undreamed of in any democracy. Their greatest hope is the hope of future revolution within Germany.

Not Hungry Yet.

"I don't know what kind of revolution they are expecting. They were talking of the hardships of winter in Germany. Then they talked of hunger. They they talked of disillusionment. None of all this has ever come to pass.

"There may be a few insane people still in Germany, people who might believe in the possibility of such a revolution. But they are fortunately behind bars.

"There is one thing I am able to tell my democratic opponents.

"Germany's enemies are to-day facing a Germany that is stronger than it ever has been and better guided than it has ever been. And above all, I thank the gods that I am young and hale and hearty enough to assume the leadership in this final struggle. And particularly now I feel better than ever. I feel that spring is in the air.

"There are also the armed forces that we must think of at this time when we consider the chances for success. Millions of German soldiers, sailors and others are ready at the fields of battle.

Proudest Force in World

"Let us tell these soldiers something today. Let us tell them that all our hearts, the hearts of all National Socialists, are with them today. They are today the proudest military force in the history of the world."

"We know that this new year is going to bring us the greatest decision, the greatest tasks, and also the greatest accomplishments.

"We have worked, we have labored, and we have sacrificed, and the Lord cannot possibly acquiesce in the destruction of a people so courageous, so willing and so fortuitous....

"On the other side, the side of the democracies, there is nothing but greed, lust and selfishness. Destiny cannot bless the arms of such nations."

Cannot Ignore Any Threat Says Turk Chief

ANKARA, Turkey, Feb. 24 (AP) —In what was interpreted as a reference to the expected movement of German troops into Bulgaria, Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu said in a statement published today that Turkey would find it impossible "to remain indifferent to foreign activities which might occur in her security zone."

"Turkey will oppose with force any and all aggression which might be directed against her territorial integrity or her independence," Saracoglu added.

Turkey always has considered Bulgaria to be a part of her own security zone but diplomatic observers were puzzled over the exact interpretation of the words that Turkey, a non-belligerent ally of Great Britain, would be unable to "remain indifferent."

They expressed belief, however, that the statement was prompted by Bulgaria's seeming inclination to interpret her week-old non-aggression pact with Turkey as an indica-

Farmer Found Unconscious; Death Follows

Overcome by a sudden seizure, Owen Johnston, 143 Rubidge St., formerly engaged in the trucking business in Peterborough, was found Saturday morning in an unconscious condition in the house on the Dinsdale farm near Millbrook, where he had been working for some time.

He was brought to hospital in Peterborough but died shortly after his arrival.

Drs. Waite and Snider, who performed a postmortem examination agreed that Johnston's death was due to natural causes, cerebral hemorrhage being given as the reason for the man's passing.

The son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Johnston, he is survived by four daughters, Mrs. W. Buller, Mrs. J. Godfrey, Mrs. R. Orde, and Miss Edna Johnson, all of Peterborough.

A member of George Street United church, Mr. Johnson had been a regular attendant while his health permitted.

Surviving besides his daughters are two brothers, George, of Saskatchewan, and James Henry of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. S. Scriver of Hastings.

The funeral will be from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. W. Buller, 227 Sherbrooke street, at 2.00 p.m. on Tuesday. Rev. H. L. Roberts, of George Street United church will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake cemetery.

Superchargers By General Electric

A press report from Washington at the week-end suggests something that sounds of interest and information for the friends of Carl A. Salmonsen. Referring to certificates for plant expansion under the national defense program that were cleared by the National Defense Advisory Committee during the period Feb. 1 to 15 the news gives the total at $63,977,000.

Here is the significant announcement: "General Electric Co., received a certificate covering the largest amount in the current list, for $13,752,000 for expansion of equipment to manufacture turbo-superchargers for aircraft engines, turbines and controls."

That sounds very much like the new responsibility for which Mr. Salmonsen is leaving Peterborough, and although it is only a surmise it is likely that C. G. E. executives would agree that this is the job to which the works manager is leaving at the end of this week.

City's Budget Is Reviewed And Compared

Municipal estimates reviewed by the finance committee of the council Wednesday night are abridged in the following summary for purposes of information to ratepayers.

City Treasurer Shaver supplied the members of the council with a volume of stereotyped pages presenting the complete details of the requirements of all the civic departments.

In this summary of the proposed appropriations several abbreviations are used for convenience, that is—"est" for estimates; "pay." for payments. The amounts are the estimates and expenditures or payments for 1940 and the estimates for 1941.

Assessment and Taxes

This expenditure is almost entirely fixed. It comprises salaries of employees in the offices of the assessor and tax collector.

1940—(Est) $17,630; (pay.) $15,-743.79; 1941— (Est) $16,310.26.

This outlay includes $11,680.26 paid to the county of Peterborough for the maintenance of the jail and other similar obligations. Other details are criminal court reporters, Crown witnesses, selecting jurors, magistrate's fees and fines.

Charity

1940—(Est) $13,300; (pay.) $15,-056.69; 1941—(Est) $13,980.

In this category are such community assistance as the care of indigent patients at the two city hospitals; Children's Aid Society, and payments to various out of town hospitals.

Elections and Bylaws

This amount is simply the cost of municipal elections.

Fire Department

Chief Gimblett's department requires various day to day supplies such as office needs, light and power, laundry, telephone fire alarm boxes and upkeep, uniforms, insurance and so on. The big item in this year's estimates is $31,500 as compared with $33,575.35 last year and the actual expenditure last year of $33,640.11.

The city also bought a new pumper for $9,450, which is of course out of this year's estimates. However, the new chairman, Alderman Ovens, has persuaded the council to increase the purchase of hose to 1,000 feet and to buy a few extra gadgets and also to set aside $500 for the firemen's convention here this year.

City Trust Commission.

The Commission's requirement for 1941 is $33,544 less than last year, a fact which has been mentioned at the city hall in regard to the Board of Education's budget. Mayor Hamilton pointed out the other night that only about 63 per cent. of that reduction affects the general tax rate; the rest relates to local improvement, interest and sinking fund requirements.

Queen Mary Hospital

1940—Est. $2,130; payments $2,-633.62; 1941—Est. $4,200.

The explanation of this increased appropriation is the greater use of the isolation hospital mainly by men from Morrow Park military camp who contracted measles and diseases of that infectious nature.

The Board of Health had to engage a supervisor and nurses at a cost of $3,580 more than last year. In fact there was no appropriation for this a year ago. Queen Mary Hospital has been dormant for quite a long time with only intermittent use.

Groceries and supplies are up from $600 to $1,400. There is an item of $400 for repairs as against only $50 that was appropriated last year. In that connection, and certainly in no sense of disparagement or of lack of appreciation, it may be pointed out that the late Alderman Stocker believed in avoiding expense, keeping down the cost of services to such an extent at the hospital that the Board now finds absolutely necessary to make repairs which have been accumulating over the last five or six years, such as an entire new roof, painting and so on.

Health

1940—Est. $3,860; payments $2,-058.41; 1941—estimates $3,530.

M.O.H. Office

1940 Estimate $6,010; payments $7,138.98; 1941—estimates $8,015.

This service includes the salaries of Dr. Clarke and public health nurses, office help and upkeep, drugs, transportation and so on.

Heating

Interest

Bank of Montreal on overdraft: Estimate (1940) $5,000; exp. $3,-817.30; 1941—est. $4,000.

Legal Claims

Indemnity insurance: 1940—Est. $2,900; pay. $2,000; 1941—est. $2,000.

Law and Legislation

Light

1940—Est. $22,860; spent $23,-033.57; 1941—est. $23,000.

Market

1940—Est. $2,765; pay. $2,633.59; 1941—Est. $3,000.

Salaries of rest room employees, supplies, painting.

Manufacturers Committee

1940—Est. $3,000; pay. $3,611.15; 1941—Estimate $2,900.

Alderman Bradburn is chairman of the manufacturers committee. The appropriation is for various means of advertising the city. Last year's expense included $1,166.04 for well digging. That was the effort to locate water for the C.I.L. which recently let a contract for its new plant at Kingston for $700,000.

Pproperty Committee

1940—Est. $2,537; pay. $2,447.17; 1941—Est. $2,000.

Alderman Swanston is in charge of the market and property maintenance. The repair bill will be less this year, but there is an additional item of $500 for insulating windows, a job to be undertaken when the fine weather comes as an investment in heat for next winter.

Miscellaneous.

Estimate 1940 — $13,641.06; payments $3,727.42. Appropriation for 1941 is not yet decided. City Treasurer Shaver mentioned a sum in excess of $8,000, Wednesday night, depending on the tax rate, any other appropriations which may be made in the meantime.

Reception.

Provincial Laboratory.

1940—Net estimate $1,375. Paid $1,749.77. 1941—Est. $2,000. The provincial government makes a grant of $2,000 to this service. The estimates are for the most part fixed in salaries plus supplies and incidentals.

Postage and Excise Stamps

1940, est. $500, spent $527; 1941, est. $500.

Printing Etc.

1940, est. $1,500, paid $1,458.74; 1941, est. $1,500.

This account includes the cost of printing the auditor's reports, also office supplies and other printing charges.

Municipal Government

This appropriation falls into the "fixed" class, comprising salaries of city clerk and staff, city treasurer and staff, and other items of that kind, with a credit payment of $300 from the Utilities Commission as part of the cost of the auditor's salary.

Parks

1940—estimate $7,500; payments $7,217.26; 1941—est. $7,850.

Maintenance of the parks, skating rinks, tourist camp and Inverlea bathing beach are all included in this section. Wages are the largest item. There was a credit to the department last year of $822.09 from the sale of used bulbs, and a bookkeeping sum for the use of the parks truck in delivery of relief wood.

Police Department

1940—est. $32,825; payments $32,-806.93; 1941—estimate $33,775.

Chief Newhall hewed close to the line of his appropriation last year. Expenditure included cost of new car and motorcycle but on the new expenditure for 1941 appears the amount of $1,200 for an additional policeman, and several salary adjustments according to schedule.

Dog Tags

Public Library

Suburban Area Roads

1940 est. $10,000; payments $10,-000; 1941 est. $10,000.

The county council spends the money, and charges the city for this amount which is determined by agreement.

Voters Lists

This account is for the printing of the municipal voters list for election purposes. The list is prepared from the assessor's rolls, and it is understood that the work is done at the city hall by a Gestetner machine.

Water Commissioners

1940—est. $18,000; spent $18,000; 1941—est. $18,000.

This is a set amount charged by the Utilities Commission for the water service which is the basis of the city's fire protection. It also includes the cost of water for flushing streets, sprinkling parks, and the water system in the city buildings, a domestic municipal charge.

Relief

1940—est. $38,000; expended by the city $23,702.69; 1941 estimate was proposed at $29,000, but it was suggested the other night that the total to be paid by the city for relief this year be $25,000.

Board of Works

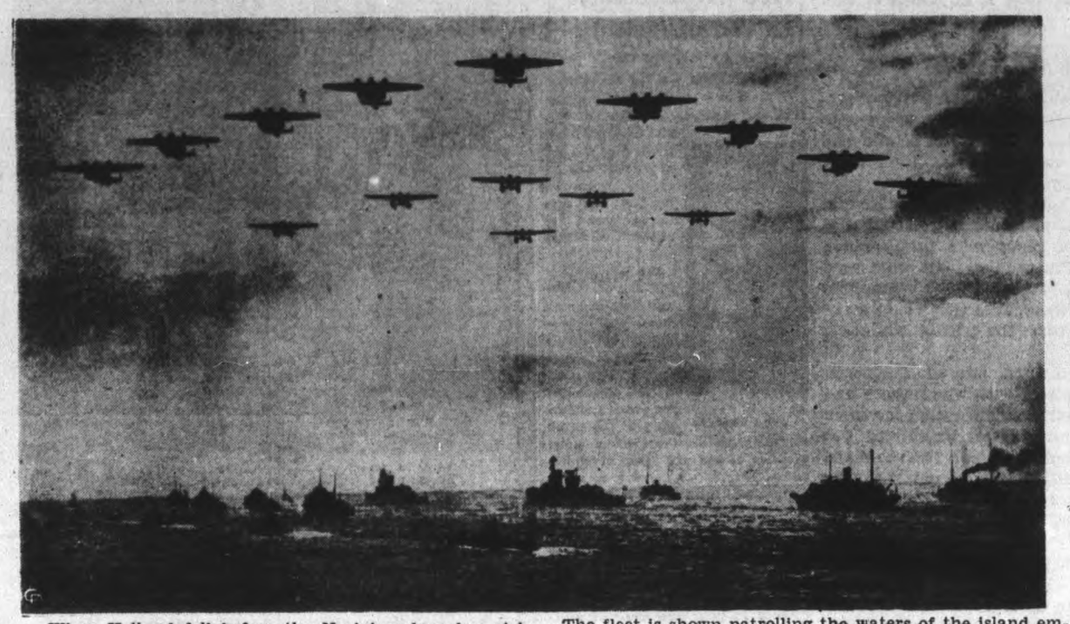
Special Grants

1940—Estimates $7,000; paid $10,-742.56; 1941—estimates $8,225.

Payments last year included an additional $2,000 to the Peterborough Exhibition Board. The grant this year is $725 to cover insurance and taxes, an undertaking by the city resulting from the transfer of Morrow Park to the militia authorities for a training camp. There was also the £500 gift to the Lord Mayor of London's Fund, $500 to the Greek Relief Fund and other items which are not repeated for 1941. However, in this year's grants there is the sum of $1,000 which has been set aside as a drawing account for the Peterborough War Savings Certificates committee, $1,000 to the Provincial Plowing Match, $250 to the Junior Farmers' division of the Peterborough Exhibition, and $2,-500 to the Victorian Order of Nurses.

The Board of Education's estimates and the requirements of the Peterborough City Trust Commission have also been received by the council.

Dutch East Indies Mass Armed Forces For Protection Of Island Empire



When Holland fell before the Nazi invaders, her rich East Indian colonies in a sense became stronger, because Dutch warships, submarines and other naval craft, sailed around the world to get to Sourabaja naval base in Java. The fleet is shown patrolling the waters of the island empire of Queen Wilhelmina while overhead fly planes of the formidable island air force. The arrival of Australian troops in Singapore has greatly strengthened the position of the Dutch East Indies.

Weekend Toll Claims Nine In Ontario

TORONTO, Feb. 24—(CP)—Traffic accidents, two aviation accidents, an industrial accident and a fall were among causes of death which brought the week-end toll in Ontario to at least nine.

Three persons died of injuries received when they were struck by automobiles. In Toronto AC. Paul Emile Roy, 19, of Eastview, Ottawa, was struck while walking on a street late Saturday and died before reaching hospital. William R. Finkle, 59, of Toronto, alleged driver of the car, was charged with manslaughter.

Other victims of traffic accidents were William Kosowan, 54, of Hamilton who was struck by a car operated by Richard Reid of Hamilton, and Harry Graham, 55, of Windsor who was struck by a car driven by Arthur E. Churchill, 47, of Maidstone district.

Cpl. Richard Samuel Dening, Toronto mining man and industrialist now in the Canadian (Active) army and veteran of the first great war, died in hospital Sunday of injuries received earlier in what police said was a street fight with Trooper Walter Payne of Winnipeg, member of the Fort Garry Horse.

In a Sunday plane crash south of the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre at Camp Borden, 21-year-old Lac. W. H. Shortt of Oshawa, Ont., was killed and his instructor, Sgt. B. J. Smith of Mount Pleasant, Mich., was severely injured. They were using a Yale trainer and R.C.A.F. officials said they were on a dual instruction flight. Cause of the crash was not determined.

Another aviation fatality occurred in Toronto Saturday when 16-year-old George Washington, ground employee of the Toronto Flying Club, was struck by a propeller as he was swinging it.

Walter Lucas, 16, was killed, and his father, George Lucas, was severely injured late Saturday when they were struck by a train as they walked along the tarck near their home in the Napanee district.

Harvey Lalonde, 21-year-old employee of a Cornwall paper mill, was killed late Saturday when he was crushed between the heavy rollers of a pulp press. No explanation of the accident was given by officials.

In Toronto Paras Sawyck, 11, died Saturday of injuries received when he fell on his way home from school Friday and struck a stone.

Claim Convoy Bombed

BERLIN, Feb. 24 — (AP). — Nazi sources claimed a large British convoy in the Atlantic north-west of Scotland was attacked by German long-range bombers to-day and a 7,000-ton ship sunk.

It was further claimed that two other ships of 5,000 tons each were damaged.

(No immediate comment on the German claims was available in London.)

Pte. Harry J. Baldwin of Lakefield enlisted with the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment at Picton on March 19, 1940. He landed in England on May 21, 1940. Pte. Baldwin was formerly a member of the Prince of Wales Rangers and has a wife and three children at Lakefield.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Present And Future Queens Of England

Approved by Her Majesty, this is the latest picture of the Queen and Princess Elizabeth — present and future queens of England—to reach this continent. The Queen and the princess are helping to keep up the morale of the British people by constantly mingling with them with words of cheer and sympathy and sharing the hardships of rationed food and nightly bombings.

"Put your confidence in us. Give us your faith and your blessing, and under Providence all will be well. We shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire. Neither the shock of battle nor the long drawn trials of vigilance and exertion will wear us down. Give us the tools and we will finish the job."

The German Method

Fire and hurricane visited the port of Santander, Spain, and both Britain and Germany answered with aid. Britain ordered two shiploads of wheat and oats to be diverted from her own needs and delivered to Santander, on the Bay of Biscay.

Germany, which has had troops poised on the Spanish frontier for weeks, sent hospital kitchens, technicians and engineers to help clear the debris and aid the suffering population.

And in the form of assistance proffered by Germany those who are wise in the ways of the world at present see a sinister move. They admit the British plan was simple and direct; the cargo will simply be delivered and that will be the end. There will be no experts or agents sent in to see where it shall be placed or how it shall be distributed.

Germany has a habit of sending in many men wherever the chance affords opportunity. Hospital kitchens will be acceptable no doubt, but why send so many engineers to help clear up the debris. That is where the finger of suspicion points.

Germany has the habit of sending in large numbers wherever possible, and the large numbers do not pick up and leave when their mission has been accomplished. They stay right there, and it would be difficult for Spain, or for that one particular city, Santander, to suggest that these helpers were actually overstaying their leave.

We have read previous reports of German technicians being in Spain. They seem to stick like leaches, and some of them have been there since the end of the war in 1939. It is known that German infiltration in Spain has been heavy and it is known there is a strong desire on the part of the Axis powers to go through that way in an attack on Gibraltar.

One does not care to present wrong motives when a body of men are going to the assistance of a distressed city, but it is not possible to forget the habit of the Germans in sending far more men than are required into other countries when they have occasion to cross the borders. And after they have made entrance the trouble always has been to get them to move on. They are bent on staying.

In Rather Poor Taste

John Diefenbaker, M.P., insisted that Hon. C. D. Howe should read out the list of capital assistance advances made to private companies on war contracts. Mr. Howe asked if it would serve the same purpose or have the list prepared and placed on record on the pages of Hansard. The answer was "No." Mr. Howe must read them.

It was a long list, and after Mr. Howe had been reading until he became hoarse he suggested again that the list be prepared and recorded in the usual way. Hon. R. B. Hanson joined in the insistence that the reading should continue.

After half an hour of reading during which Mr. Howe could not be heard far from where he was standing in the House relief came in the form of a debate which continued until the close of the sitting.

If the desire was to have all this information placed on record then the usual and proper way would have been to have it prepared and printed in Parliamentary Debates. When information of that nature is read out in the House there would be few of the members who would be paying close enough attention to know what it was all about. It would be a miserable task to inflict upon either minister or private member, and we can at the moment think of no good reason why the reading business should have been forced upon the Minister. After going for half an hour he had reached only to the "D" section, and the final solution was that the remainder of the list should be placed on the pages of Hansard at some later date.

This is hardly the year for exhibitionism in the House of Commons. It was not expediting the transaction of public business nor was it bringing out information which could not have been secured by other more reasonable and more effective methods.

Beginning At Jerusalem

War Service Minister Gardiner sent a letter to 12,500 industries, and the purpose was to get them interested in the saving of paper and cardboard. He informed them such material should be saved and returned to the mills through regular dealers or local salvage committees.

There are some communities where this kind of work has been carried on efficiently and persistently. Quite considerable amounts have been raised for war purposes, and the local committees have been more than usually successful in carrying out their objectives.

But Mr. Gardiner when writing the letter was sitting in an office in a building which one way and another makes use of a great deal of paper which is not required. Paper and envelopes which if cut off from circulation would create no objection on the part of the receiving public.

We are pleased that Mr. Gardiner has opened the subject. We know large quantities of paper could be salvaged, but we also know that large quantities of paper could be saved at Ottawa by not using the paper in the first place, and that in turn would cut down on the use of those fine big envelopes which are used to house the papers. It is a case where the missionary work should first begin in Jerusalem.

We'll Keep On Giving

The Examiner was asked how long the fund for British War Victims would be continued. It was not an idle question, but it came from one who apparently is thinking of doing something about it. The answer can be given in several ways and for several reasons.

One way of looking at it is just this: How long will you continue to be interested in your own people, your own family? The answer to that is you would never lose interest in them. You will continue to cherish them and you will go their aid as long as they need it.

The fund is growing in this city and district—and outside of it. We regard the growth as reflecting the feeling of the people themselves. The Examiner believes readers will agree that there has been no undue pressure applied in any way to try and secure funds. We have realized that giving and taxation have been heavy; that we have gone through a successful community drive and are now in the midst of another for the increased sale of War Savings Certificates. But the War Victims Fund seems to keep on growing.

So we feel justified in saying it is not going to stop. Evidence of the widespread interest is found in a contribution received from a girls' preparatory school in Cincinnati. It came in the form of a collection taken up in the school and it amounted to $55 in U.S. funds, which became $60.50 when it crossed the border into our country.

It would be difficult to say the fund is going to stop at any particular time; it would be impossible to say it is going to stop now. We may read a great deal, and we may look at many pictures of the damage which has been done in Britain, but actually we have not an adequate idea of the conditions under which bombed-out people are living. They have nothing at all; their homes are gone and so is their furniture and their clothing. The best we can do is probably not more than the proverbial drop in the bucket when compared to their actual need.

Stealing From The Scots

Malcolm W. Bingay writes in the Detroit Free Press. At times his aim is true, but often enough it seems that even if he does pull a long bow he has not allowed for the wind.

Recently he made it known that haggis was not a Scottish dish. At least it was not invented or concocted there. (We do not know at the moment which of those words is correct). Haggis, says Malcolm, was "discovered" by the Greeks, and they have a word for it which is Kollaprobatie. The Romans borrowed the recipe from the Greeks and they in turn took it to Britain.

The Detroit writer says he has employed what he calls research to trace down the beginning of haggis, and therefore contends his conclusion is correct.

We are moved to doubt that haggis could have been "discovered" by the Greeks or by any other people. That word is not adequate; it gives the feeling of one going out and deliberately searching for something which he had strong reasons for believing actually existed. Haggis never came into existence that way, and we make that assertion regardless of what those who rely on research may say. It must have had its origin in the same state of mind or the same atmosphere of frugality which brought into existence the "Mealy Jamies" of sausage-like dimensions on which a man can fare well at noon when doing heavy work. They are some way related to haggis.

Haggis is one of those strange dishes which was never discovered, invented—nor yet clearly defined. That long Greek word Kollaprobatie probably has something to do with the state of the weather or the political situation in Europe or the Balkans. Taking haggis, the bagpipes and the kilts away from the Scots is a favorite pastime of this uncertain age. Some day we expect to read that Loch Lomond is in Kentucky and Ben Nevis is a mountain in India.

When The Roads Drift

Looking over reports from various sections of Western Ontario it is plain to see there was a snowstorm of size and dimension, and also of at least three days' duration.

In Huron county, which is a large and rangy sort of place, it was reported that 420 miles of roads were pretty much blocked. "Plugged" was the word used in some dispatches. The snowplows were called in because they could make no progress while the drifting was going on.

In the district around Shelburne there were places with which there had been no motor communication for three days. A rural mail carrier started out with team and sleigh and tried to make his rounds, but he had to quit when he encountered drifts so deep they threatened to engulf his team.

The Bruce Peninsula was virtually isolated. There were places where funeral services had to be postponed, and in another case it is reported that two teams with sleighs travelled ahead of a hearse in order to open the road.

Three days of it brought to light the fact that certain communities were running short of supplies. The bread wagon or truck from town had not arrived and it was not possible to get to any place where bread was offered for sale. Other supplies which are purchased in small quantities were away low. And all on account of a bang-up snowstorm.

We have become pretty much a generation of fair-weather travellers, depending on the motor car to take us there and bring us back; to call at the door daily with supplies. It is a good enough plan too as long as it works, but it plays havoc when it ceases to function.

Not so many years ago people in that tied-up belt would have been put to little inconvenience by a snowstorm of three days' duration. We are certain they would not have been short of bread or other things which they needed to eat because they would have had a stock right on the premises. They knew in advance that the snowstorms would come and they were ready.

Possibly the old-timers of the district which are still old-timers at heart would have had their innings comparing the "softies" of the present day with the pioneers of other days.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Dionne children have started figure skating, and if one tumbles it will denote a 20 per cent. falling off.

We have a fair enough idea of what was meant, but in the published report it read: "The car was later found abandoned by the police."

There are some smart young people in United States, and one lad when asked was able to name the Vice-President of his nation.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe made a mild remark in the House when he said that the charge that people were placed in internment camps because they were members of trades unions was not at all helpful to him. The plain interpretation is that all which is not helpful is harmful.

Looks as though the tourist trade were going to come along all right. One prospect, a woman in Providence, R.I., has made inquiries about Baffin Island, its climate, hotels and tourist accommodations." That is truly in Canada's frozen north, so we may see the lady on the way through.

SAFER

¶ A group of villains fall on him and hold three guns upon his chest, while others search his trousers first and then his jacket and his vest.

¶ At other times they pick him up and cast him in an auto car, and drive him many miles away, from friends removed by distance far.

¶ And then he has to write a note to them who handle all his kale, that they shall take the ducats out and fill at once a ten quart pail.

¶ If he moves not with haste at once they'll whack him soundly on the head, and then they'll leave him where he be, no matter if he's nigh on dead.

¶ It's better far, of this I'm sure, to not be burdened down with wealth, it's better for the peace of mind and safer too regarding health.

¶ Too many guns for those around who pause to stack their ducats high, it's better far, of this I'm sure, to be a plain and humble guy.

Some Dictators Are Well Liked In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Far be it from the U.S. state department to defend any dictatorship whatever. Nevertheless, it's confidentially chatted around departmental headquarters that some dictators aren't as bad as some others are.

John Metaxas

The late Premier Metaxas of Greece was one, and the most anti-dictatorial of critics can't help pleading guilty to plenty of admiration for his management of the Greek campaign against the Italians under Dictator Mussolini's general supervision.

Portugal's Salazar regime is a dictatorship, too. The Portuguese aren't particularly praised, like the Greeks, for their fighting prowess, since they're not involved in the war as yet, anyway. What's being commented on in their favor is their amazing decency in their treatment of refugees from the conflict-stricken European area. The state department hears of it from its diplomatic representation in Lisbon. A good many of the refugees themselves also are arriving in the United States from the Portuguese capital, and telling their stories of the little country's hospitality.

Portugal's simply swamped with these fugitives. It's very poor and hard put to it to care for them. Yet its charity is described as absolutely unlimited. Arrivals at its frontier are mostly penniless, but no questions are asked as to their ability to support themselves or pay their bills. If they're refugees, they're invited right in, and fed and sheltered at Portugal's own expense, up to the limit of Portugal's resources. It's related that such of the native folk as are opulent enough to own autos make a regular practice of mesting the newcomers with their cars at the Spanish border, to carry them to wherever they can be quartered.

NO PROFITEERING

A FEW of the fleeing exiles have money to pay for their accommodations, but it's said there's no profiteering from them.

The dictatorship is given credit for encouraging this policy.

Dictators Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin rate at the state department as 100 per cent awful. The Jap dictatorship figures at about 99 per cent. Dictator Franco of Spain figures around 95 per cent, with possibilities of a hike in the quotation. But the Greek and Portuguese outfits are considerably discounted—the Greeks' for its courage and defensive bellicosity; the Portuguese for its benevolence.

When Benito first began picking on Premier Metaxas they were considerably perturbed. I'm well acquainted with one of them—a Greek restaurant man. His name, of all things, is Corrigan. I once asked him how he explained it. It seems his original name was Corrigan, with a soft "g." It was Greek-Armenian. He modified it a trifle for local purposes. Other names in our midst have been transformed similarly. There's a sizable Greek tribe in Washington which gives its cognomen as Perkins. This being my own middle monicker, I investigated and ascertained that the Greek original was Perkintzis.

Anyway, early in the Greek-Italian muss, I consulted Greek-American Corrigan as to the probable outcome.

"If they tackle us only five to one," he said, "we can lick 'em. If they get above that they may make us trouble." He was rather despondent. Today he's as cocky as Milliades.

U.S. Portuguese-American population is pretty skimpy. It's numerous in Hawaii, but not on the mainland.

However, indirectly there is an important tie-up with Portugal.

Brazil, the biggest, most populous and strongest of Latin-American neighbors, is Portuguese by descent and the relationship between ancestor and offspring always has remained a very close one.

Well, the refugees now overflowing Portugal naturally are refugees because they're anti-totalitarian. And, inasmuch as Portugal is so nice to them, it would seem to follow that the Portuguese people despite the Salazar dictatorship, aren't altogether so darned undemocratic. And Brazil's likely to reflect Portugal. On Pan-American grounds we should be glad of it.

Oh, yes, I know, under President Vargas, Brazil itself is a good deal of a dictatorship, but it isn't a dictatorship in a class with Herr Hitler's, Signor Mussolini's or Comrade Stalin's.

In short, there appear to be dictators with absolutely nothing but bad qualities and dictators we might like—if they weren't dictators.

Letters To The Editor

THOSE SALARIES

Editor Examiner

Sir,—Let me add my voice of approval to the protest by "Working Machinist" regarding salary increases for city officials, particularly in the relief department.

Last fall many persons were cut off relief in Peterborough regardless of whether or not they were able to provide for themselves. I understand that some of these persons were asked "If they know there was a war on." It seems to me that it would only be fair and square if the same question were asked of the Peterborough relief officer now.

It seems to me that after such an exhibition of supposed patriotism by the relief officer it would be most timely indeed for him not only to refuse this raise in salary but also refuse to accept as much salary as he did when there were so many persons on the relief list.

Relief in Peterborough is now at a minimum and it is only British fair play that the wage paid to the relief officer should be in accordance with the amount of work to be done.

FAIR PLAY.

Peterborough, Feb. 22.

CIVIC SALARIES

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I see by a report in the paper that there has been a good raise in pay for some employees of the city. I wish to say sound judgment has not been used. Aldermen know it is not their own money they are spending. On entering council these men were going to keep the taxes down, and then some of them went ahead and were the first to allow this to go forward. Just consider how many men have no jobs at all, and hard work to meet their tax bills, and still they select the larger salaries as the ones which should go up. Because there is some new tax money coming in is no reason why they should feel like gobbling it up. Those raises are more than some men earn in a year.

MONEY IN PIGS?

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—There is some advertising matter being handed around to show how a man made money feeding pigs. He sold 14 of them when prices were only $7.75 per hundred, and yet he made $4.39 per pig. The selling price is given as $192.98, the 14 hogs weighed 2490 pounds and were 5½ months old.

His expenses are listed as being $131.50, and so his net profit was $61.48, or $4.39 per pig.

Now I admit that looks very nice, and I am interested because I have occasion to sell pigs myself, and on the last lot was docked $3 because one hog was considered too heavy, although it was still under the 200 pound market.

But that way of calculating is wrong because in the first place those figures do not allow that the 14 pigs were worth anything to start with, and if one goes out to buy weanlings he will find out he is expected to pay for them, so they have value which should be included in any and all calculation.

Then there is not a thing put down for the time it takes to feed the pigs; apparently all the buildings and bedding and all else are put in as costing nothing. A farmer can't reckon things that way and I see no reason why he should not have the right to claim something for his work. Other people work for wages and draw them regularly. According to the table those pigs had to be cared for 5½ months, and in that there would be a heap of hours put on that job. So why leave that out? And why not allow that the pigs had market value after their birth?

FARMER.

PROPHECY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The following is from an advertisement issued by the National Savings Committee, London:

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY PROPHECY

The Time will come, when thou shalt lift thine eyes
To watch a long-drawn battle in the skies,
While aged peasants, too amazed for words,
Stare at the flying fleets of wond'rous birds.
England, so long the mistress of the sea,
Where winds and waves confess her sovereignty,
Her ancient triumphs yet on high shall bear,
And reign, the sovereign of the conquered air.
(Translated from Gray's "Luna Habitabilis," Cambridge 1737.)

Make It Come True. Just two hundred years ago this remarkable vision of the war in the air was written down in Latin verse by the great English poet who composed the famous "Elegy." To make Britain "Sovereign of our conquered air" is now our task. There is no time "to stare at flying fleets," we must exert all our energies to increase them. Everyone must help. You can help with money. Save every shilling you can lend it to the nation.

Save regularly week by week. Go to a Post Office or your bank or stock-broker and put your money into defence bonds or national war bonds; or buy saving certificates; or deposit your savings in the Post Office or Trustee Savings Bank. Join a savings group and make others join with you.

They Let "George" Do It

GEORGE is the name of the automatic pilot by means of which aircraft almost fly themselves on their required courses.

How he got the name George is not known. For a long time the authorities would not acknowledge his christening, but he was George to the pilots from his very infancy, and now, grown up, he is George to everybody. Even air marshals know him by name.

He is a piece of gyroscopic mechanism taking charge of the aircraft, working rudders, elevators and ailerons, just as a human pilot would, but even more quickly.

George keeps the aircraft straight and level at a set air-speed and allows the pilot to study his maps, recognize landmarks below, check up on navigation, and prepare for action. In war, when vigorous avoiding action has often to be taken, George is frequently cut out because evasion is the think he does not take to very kindly.

But on the way out, particularly when there is a long journey to make through continuous bumpy clouds, the automaton is clipped in and the human being has a rest. Again when there is a change of pilots, George steps back into position while the second pilot is taking over.

In the flying boats, when long hours are spent over the sea, the pilot knows that his mechanical friend can be depended upon.

He would not claim to be able to "take-off," climb, avoid enemy fire, bomb, or come in to land, but he can do all the rest of the work. — London Evening News.

Parks: Not a bit. In our district there's three christenings, two weddings, and a funeral, all on different days.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought....But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God....But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. —I Cor. ii, 6, 9-12, 14.

THE DEFENCE TAX

THE simpler and less expensive way of collecting the money now raised through the national defence tax would be to include it as part of the income tax (which, in deed, it is) and have the returns made by the same method as is now employed in the case of the income tax proper. This would relieve firms of a good deal of unprofitable and thankless bookkeeping, make possible a cutting of expense at Ottawa, avoid confusion, red-tape tangles and rebates, and put the responsibility for payment of the proper amount where it belongs—on the individual required to pay the tax. Nor would any hardship be entailed, since the individual has to make out his tax forms anyway and the handy instalment system is already in general operation.—Brntford Expositor.

TAKING 'EM DOWN

THIS YEAR Teck Township council at Kirkland Lake decided to have stenographic reports of all council proceedings. Last week the stenographic report of the council filled the bigger part of two big notebooks. The notes were not transcribed, but held as a reference.

If the stenographic report includes all the "hums" and "ahs" and "well nows" and the careless words often used on such occasions, it might be a good thing to transcribe the notes and have them printed in full as a serial in the newspaper.

Such a plan would establish the fact that the newspapers, whatever may be their shortcomings, are more kindly and considerate than the stenographic truth. — Timmins Advance.

DOMINIONS AND BEES TAKE CLOSE DECISIONS IN CITY LEAGUE

Juniors Push Dominions But Lose 42-35

Dominions climbed to the top of the Men's Senior City Basketball heap by turning back the juniors 42-35 while Bees took a 26-25 thriller from Quaffers to move into a second place tie, in a bitterly fought double-header at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday night.

Bees carried a two-point lead into the second half and it was just enough to spell the difference in the hectic last half. Dominions had a small edge throughout to learn a 42-35 victory over a battling and much-improved junior O.A.B.A. team with their big margin, also coming in the first half. Dominions are now a half a game ahead of Bees and Quaffers who are tied for second place, a full game ahead of the juniors, bringing up the rear.

After forty minutes of fast moving basketball Bees finally got the nod over Quaffers in the dying seconds, 26-25. The teams battled on virtually even terms all the way with the lead changing hands every couple of minutes. Bees took an early lead and were up one basket at the half 17-15. Quaffers tied it up as the last half opened and the lead changed hands several times before Gemmell scored from the field with seconds to go and put Bees up to stay. Even at that Quaffers had a chance to tie it up, a free throw missing as the final whistle sounded. Bees counted three for four foul tries and Quaffers made five in eight throws from the foul line.

Gemmell, Johnston and McArthur stood out for Bees and Stewart and McPherson were best for Quaffers. The teams:

Bees, 26: Harle, Gemmell (8), Rogow (4), Johnston (2), Thorburn (9), McArthur (3).

Quaffers, 25: Dundas, Stewart (11), McPherson (1), Turner (5), Dougherty (6), Ward (2).

Referee—Nels Stanger.

A new fighting spirit in the junior O.A.B.A. team gave them enough lift to push Dominions all the way, before bowing out 42-35 in a hard-fought second game.

Dominions carried a small margin all the way, building up a 19-15 lead in the first half. A junior rally, midway in the final period, tied it up at 30-all but Dominions got the jump again and pulled away to a seven-point lead in the remaining minutes. Both teams played a fast-breaking attack with hard checking on the defensive turning it into a tough battle for points all the way. The juniors turned in by far their best effort of the season, shooting and passing much more effectively than in previous starts and threatened to go in front several times.

Dominions made up a good part of their winning margin on free throws counting six in nine tries while the juniors only counted three in the same number of tries.

Ferguson, Marsh and Mineer led the winners and K. Gillespie and Rogow were best for the juniors. The teams:

Dominions, 42: Ferguson (7), Marsh (19), Csumrick (5), Grose, Mineer (9), Gardiner (2), Wolstenholme.

Juniors, 35: Currie (4), K. Gillespie (4), Rogow (6), Craig (11), Burns (4)), C. Gillespie (6).

Referee—Nels Stanger.

Mioland Takes The Handicap Pot

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—(AP)—Charles S. Howard's Mioland ran to victory in the $10,000 San Antonio Handicap Saturday against a crack field of eligibles for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap one week away.

Favored to capture this event—final test under colors for the big 'cap next Saturday—Mioland reaffirmed his backing as the horse to beat in the Santa Anita with a well-run battle over the 1 1/16 mile route.

Challendon, making his first start in nearly four months, was never a factor and finished a badly beaten seventh in the field of eleven.

Hysterical gave the Mioland backers a scare with a spectacular challenge in the stretch that fell short by a mere nose at the finish, while Bay View ran a close third after setting the pace from the start until giving way soon after rounding the turn for home.

A throng of 35,000 turned out and another $1,000,000 day a the betting windows was recorded. A total of $199,826 was wagered on the featured race.

Challedon, a 7-to-2 shot, was raced well after a slow start, and while never punished severly by Jockey Georgie Woolf of Cardston, Alta., finished far out of the money.

The time was 1 minute 45 2/5 seconds.

Mioland paid $5.60, $4 and $3.40; Hysterical $15.80 and $8.80, and Bay View, $21.40.

"Challedon wasn't running any part of it—start, middle or finish," Woolf said. "If he looked as if he was running in the stretch it was just tiring horses dropping back to him."

Trailing behind the first four were General Manager, who won from Mioland at seven furlongs several weeks ago; Can't Wait, Challedon, Vino Puro, Viscounty, Rough Pass and Don Juan II.

Mioland's victory was worth $49,460 to Howard and brought his total earnings to $127,990.

Lynn Head Wins "Y" Handicap Swim

The seventh of a series of handicap swims was held on Saturday at the Y.M.C.A. pool under the direction of Gordon Minty, coach of the Y Junior Swimming Club. The race, which was the 40-yard breast stroke event, was won handily by Lynn Head, who has shown a great deal of improvement in the last few months. Don Pinch, the junior champion, was second by a touch over Jack Thirnbeck, with Reg. Seabrook, the shield holder, in the fourth position.

In the relay race which followed the team of Shields, Thirnbeck, Young and Clapham won a decision over the team of G. Pinch, D. Pinch, Seabrook, Scriver and Gynane.

The complete results are as follows:

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Peterborough's two O.H.A. teams are away from home tonight in playoff games that will have a lot to do with their future hockey plans. The senior club left early this afternoon for Kingston where they will battle the Combines in the third game of the best three-of-five playoff series while the junior squad departs early this evening for Oshawa to meet Frank Black's Bees in the third game of their playoff series. Both outfits were confident of victory tonight, the juniors claiming that they will hang up their third win in a row over the Oshawa kids in the playoff series and grab off the group championship and the seniors declaring that they will win back their initial advantage by another away-from-home win over the Combines. If the juniors live up to their claims the series will be over tonight; on the other hand an Oshawa victory will bring the two teams into action here again Friday night in the fourth game of the final round. No matter what happens at Kingston, of course, the Combines and Petes will tie into each other at Brock St. Rink Wednesday night in the fourth game of the series.

* * * * * *

The senior squad look upon the battle with Kingston at this stage as if they were just starting on a best two-out-of-three game series with the first game in Kingston tonight, the next in Peterborough Wednesday and the third, if necessary in Kingston Friday. They figure they have to win another game in Kingston and they might just as well do it tonight as to wait until Friday night to turn the trick. Pointing out that in several respects their work was below form Friday night, they are confident that in the important tussle in the Limestone city tonight they will hit their real stride and carry the battle to the Queen's-Kingston outfit all the way. The Combines went home the other night in a decidedly cocky mood, figuring the series was about as good as over, but the Petes have other ideas and are determined to demonstrate them tonight. There will be a sellout at Kingston as a result of the Kingston victory here. Just what the Peterborough lineup will be had not been definitely decided when the squad left but Harding, Burton, Godfrey, Gardner, Tompkins, Heal, Kingdon, Jack Jopling, Creighton, Mortimer, Starr and Ralph Jopling made the trip from here and Don Crowe and Drake Jopling will join the team in Kingston.

* * * * * *

Manager Archie Weir will use the same lineup in Oshawa tonight as defeated the Motor City Bees here last Wednesday. The team is in good shape and the players are all confident that they can take the measure of the Oshawa kids and wind up the playoffs in three straight games. Oshawa has only been able to defeat the Colts once in three starts in the Motor City and the last three meetings between the two teams has seen the young Petes in the driver's seat although the margin has not been large. In tonight's battle the Peterborough team will have Morrison in goal, Parnell and Vitarelli on the defence, Rochetta, centre, and Cauley and Leonard wings on the starting line with Scriver and Horton the other defence pair and Mortimer, Shields, Eason and Curtis on the second forward line. It is expected that Kenny Holmshaw of Toronto who refereed the other two games in the playoffs will be the man behind the whistle tonight.

* * * * * *

The official scoring summary of the Kingston-Peterborough game here Friday night should have contained one more assist on the goal scored by Walt Gerow at the start of the third period. It should have gone to a former well known Peterborough ball player who was sitting in the front row of the balcony. When the rubber was deflected almost into the balcony when a Kingston shot hit Johnny Godfrey, the ex-diamond star unthinkingly batted the puck down in front of the net where Gerow had nothing to do but knock it into the cage. Somehow or other Referee Bert McCaffery missed the play and it went through as a legal goal. The irony of the thing is that the fan who made this soft goal possible played in the Central League when Kingston and Peterborough ball games were bitter battles and he would rather see a Kingston club of any kind lose than get an invitation to a dozen banquets. He was fit to be tied when he realized that he had handed the enemy a goal on a platter just at a stage in the game when the first counter made a lot of difference.

* * * * * *

When the Cobourg and Peterborough police meet at Brock St. Rink tomorrow night in what some of them think will be a hockey game the spectators are warned that they sit in the front seats at their own risk. If they find a 225-pound copper landing in their lap as he takes off over the boards after a bodycheck the management wishes to make it perfectly clear that it is not accepting any responsibility. It is understood that so far as possible the game will be played under the regular hockey code with all players searched for blackjacks, false knuckles and trick handcuffs. There will be a speed cop on duty in both nets but it is not expected they will have to lay any speeding charges. The cops are more likely to be guilty of careless driving or making turns when the move cannot be made in safety than they are of moving too fast. It should be quite an evening, especially for doctors and first aid men. Anyway, the proceeds are for a great cause—the British War Victims' Fund.

Teams in the City Basketball Loop at the Y.M.C.A. are beginning to hit their stride and from now on every fixture should be a real battle. There were two honeys of ball games Saturday night with the interest sustained until the final whistle. The Bees won from Quaffers by the narrowest of margins, 26 to 25, with Jack Gemmell tossing in the basket that meant victory just a few seconds before the game ended. Even at that Quaffers had a chance to tie it up when they were awarded a free throw. It failed to click however and Bees had won. Dominions grabbed off the second game by a seven-point lead on end but late in the second half the two teams were on even footing, the juniors coming from behind to tie up the affair, only to drop back again as Dominions put on the pressure in the closing minutes. It was fast and pleasing basketball in both tilts.

Once more those steadily-rolling Boston Bruins are at Toronto's heels. The week-end bill leaves Art Ross's club only a point in arrears and the Bruins have a game in hand. Sunday night the Rossmen took the scalps of the Americans 3 to 1, and that made 23 games in a row, only one short of half the schedule in which Boston's opposition have been unable to outscore them. That is a remarkable record when the up-and-downs of professional hockey are considered and the present mark is not likely to be seriously approached. Charlie Rayner, rookie Amerk goalie made a valiant attempt to beat Boston last night stopping all but three of 63 shots driven at him during the pastime. Toronto Leafs over the week-end broke even with Detroit, winning 6 to 2 in Toronto and being shutout 3 to 0 in Detroit while Black Hawks lost to Canadiens 7 to 3 on Saturday night and to Rangers 4 to 1 on Sunday.

The playoffs in the South-End League get under way tomorrow, Tuesday night, at the Sacred rink with King Edward bantams and St. Peter's bantams meeting at 7 o'clock, the Colts and St. Peter's juveniles at 9 o'clock. The winners of these games meet the league leaders, Canucks, in the bantam division, Royals in the midget and the Aces in the juvenile, in two game series, total goals to count. The final series will be played on Thursday February 27 and Tuesday March 4.

CRU And West Make Peace; Revamp Rules

TORONTO, Feb. 24 — (CP). — Revision of four important sections of the Canadian Rugby Union playing code and a flawless exhibition of peace-making by Harold Bailey, new C.R.U. president, brought a reunion of East and West in football when the annual meeting of the C.R.U. was held here Saturday.

The new rules were a miracle of compromise, with neither section able to claim a victory over the other, and will be given a one-year trial. Member unions have until March 15 to meet and approve the amendments to the playing code, and although none of the delegates could say definitely his union's reaction, all seemed hopeful of approval.

The changes increased interference areas for linemen from three to five yards and for backfields from one yard behind to one beyond the line of scrimmage. The points for a kick to the deadline was made a matter for local decision, with individual managements authorized to declare ground rules on the deadline kick, eliminating the point. Instead, the defending team in such instances will scrimmage the ball on its 25-yard line.

Bailey was elected president to succeed John Bannerman of Calgary, who resigned the office when the Western Interprovincial Union withdrew from the C.R.U. last December. Bannerman's resignation was accepted, but the W.I.F.U. withdrawal was tabled and later retracted when it became evident that Eastern delegates would not accept the rule changes without immediate reaffiliation of the West.

The annual meeting was concerned mainly with discussions on the rule changes, which were passed by the C.R.U.'s rules committee Saturday morning, but brought up for discussion in the later meeting.

The season of 1941 will be the first since 1934 that East and West will have placed under identical rules, should the present situation be unchanged at opening of the season. No provision was made for action should any member union decline to accept the amendments, but on that subject Bailey said: "I cannot believe any union....knowing that acceptance of these rules will mean unity in Canadian football, will reject the amendment."

John Thompson, President of the W.I.F.U., and Frank Hannibal, President of the Winnipeg Rugby Football Club, attended the meeting only by invitation until Thompson withdrew his union's resignation from the C.R.U. Other organizations represented were the Eastern Interprovincial, the Ontario and Quebec Rugby Football Unions, and the Eastern and Western Intercollegiate Unions.

Joseph Gregory could be excused for having such aims, for in the space of eight years this 25-year-old wonder athlete from South Bend, Ind., has run the second fastest two miles and third fastest three miles ever run and set world indoor records at each distance.

Instead Rice ran 13:52.3, which stood as the world record until he hit 13.51 two nights ago.

Still, having so convincingly proved himself the finest distance runner United States has produced, Greg hasn't any particular desire to come down to the mile. He said as much yesterday at the New York A.C., where he received the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy as 1940's No. 1 amateur athlete.

Rice, meanwhile, is anxious to get rid of the "automaton," "robot" and 'mechanical marvel' tags that have been hung on him.

"I'm not one of those guys who run with a stop watch on his head," he said. "Gosh, in practice I can't even hit within two seconds of the time in which I want to run a quarter mile."

In evidence of this fact, Rice pointed to last Saturday's race, though he was the only one of 14,000 people to find a flaw in it. He said that actually he'd run the first mile—4:32—five seconds better than he'd planned, and therefre he had to run the second mile five seconds slower—4:46. The last mile he ran in 4:33, with a 62-second last quarter that found him just lapping Don Lash as he hit the tape.

A free-for-all climaxed the first game between West-End and Y.M.H.A., and resulted in the banishment of Art Walker of West-End and Brandes of the Hebrews. Watts of West-End was the instigator, pulling down Brandes as he went in for a shot, but he escaped punishment.

MAPLE LEAFS SPLIT WEEK-END TILTS WITH DETROIT RED WINGS

Win Home Scrap By 6-2 Score; Bruins Add One

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

With just three weeks of the National Hockey League schedule left, a showdown nears for every one of a half-dozen issues built up during the lengthy season. They ranged from the red-hot battle for first place to the problem of deciding the sundry trophy winners and the conjecture whether Boston Bruins' history-making unbeaten streak will hold.

Not one of the issues was erased from the agenda during a five-game week-end. The Bruins continued their breakneck pace to turn in their 23rd straight unbeaten game with a 3-1 victory over New York Americans that served the double purpose of further tightening Boston's contest for the championship with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs kept their one-point edge in the two-team battle by defeating Detroit Red Wings 6-2 on Saturday night. A 3-0 loss before Goalie Johnny Mowers' brilliant performance in a return engagement at Detroit last night, however, left the Leafs with one less game to play than Bruins.

By outscoring the Red Wings 6-5 in the two games, Toronto kept their goalie Walter (Turk) Broda well in the picture with Mowers for the Vezina Trophy, awarded to the goalie with the best "goals-against" record for the season. The result left Broda with 78 goals scored on him in 40 games and Mowers with 80 in 39 matches.

Bidding also for Calder Rookie Trophy, Mowers lent lustre to his effort with his third shutout of the season—but not more than did his most probable rival, Centre Johnny Quilty of Montreal Canadiens, who paced the Habitants to a 7-3 victory over Chicago Black Hawks with a goal and three assists.

The prize at stake in the fifth match of the week-end came nearest to decision, when New York Rangers defeated Chicago 4-1 last night. The teams were deadlocked for fourth place before the game and the result gave the Blue-Shirts at least temporary ownership of the berth.

Playing their second game in two nights, the tired Hawks proved no match for the Rangers at New York. Neil Colville paced the New Yorkers' attack with two goals and an assist, while the other Ranger goals went to Alex Shibicky and Lynn Patrick. A crowd of 9,815 saw George Allen get Chicago's lone tally in the final frame.

Chicago was without Defenceman Earl Seibert and Forward Doug Bentley for the match when the pair were both injured in the Saturday night contest at Montreal. A crowd of about 9,000 watched the Montreal game, in which the Hawks were completely outclassed by the fast-stepipng Canadiens.

The victory left the Canadiens seven points ahead of the cellar-dwelling New York Americans when the Amerks fell before the Bruins at Boston last night. A further blow to the Amerk playoff hopes came when Defenceman Pat Egan suffered a leg injury which will likely keep him out of action for the rest of the season.

Hockey Apparition

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press.

Syl Apps of Toronto Leafs climbed within four points of the leading Bill Cowley of Boston in the National Hockey League's big seven during the week-end when he scored once and assisted on two goals while Cowley went pointless. Two Rangers—Bryan Hextall, who bagged one assist—claimed the next two places, while Toronto's Gordie Drillon scored twice and helped on another goal to jump clear into fifth position in his first appearance in the big seven since returning to action after an injury. Boston's Bobby Bauer and Syd Howe of Detroit, each scored once to tie Eddie Wiseman of Boston for the final berth.

Week-End Stars

By The Canadian Press

Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, Toronto, combined for three goals as the Leafs defeated Detroit Red Wings, 6-2, Saturday night.

Johnny Quilty, Toe Blake and Joe Benoit, Canadiens, picked up 11 scoring points as a unit in the Canadiens' 7-3 victory over Chicago in Montreal Saturday night.

Johnny Mowers, Detroit, returned from his pasting in Toronto to hang a 3-0 shutout on the Leafs in a return engagement in Detroit last night.

Art Jackson, Boston, scored once and assisted in another goal as the Bruins stretched their undefeated streak to 23 games with a 3-1 victory over New York Americans last night.

Charlie Rayner, Americans, missed only three of 63 shots on the Amerk nets as the Bruins held a wide edge for their triumph in Boston.

Neil Colville, Rangers, paced the Blue-Shirts' attack with a pair of tallies and an assist in their 4-1 victory over Chicago last night.

Remember When—

By The Canadian Press.

Johnny Risko, round-faced Cleveland baker boy, defeated King Levinsky in 10 rounds at New York eight years ago to-day. Risko was nicknamed the "spoiler" of heavyweight boxing by the late Tex Rickard after he "robbed" Jack Sharkey of a title bout with Gene Tunney with a decision over the Boston sailor.

Irishers Ousted In Tie Game With Evergreen

TWEED, Feb. 24—(ENS).—A record crowd witnessed the wind-up double-header of the Centre Hastings Rural Hockey League schedule Friday evening, when the Zion Hill "Irishers" were eliminated after a great battle with Evergreen, which ended in a two-all tie. To have another chance at the playoffs the Irishers needed a clean-cut win and the game left them only one point behind the third place Glen Ross squad.

Had they won this game, Zion Hill would have been tied with Glen Ross, but a tie was the best they could do after holding Evergreen scoreless for two sizzling periods. Going into the last period Zion Hill led 2-0, on a goal by Thompson from Simms in the first period, and a counter by Simms, unassisted in the second frame.

Stapley and Wright shared the honors of tying the score, each scoring in the last period.

Lineups:

Evergreen.—Goal, F. Rodgers; defence, B. Stapley, Don Reid; centre, Cooke; wings, Barnard and Rodgers; subs, Bailey, Wright, F. Stapley, K. Stapley, McMullen, Wright.

Foxboro Takes Lead

The nightcap of the evening saw Foxboro move into first place with a one-point margin by virtue of a 4-1 victory over Centenary which was not unexpected. The Centenary crew started strong and faded at the end of the tussle, their strength could be summed up in the efforts of Orval May in the nets, Ivan May and Cole up on the forward line; apart from these three and Shortt there was little more than downright gameness.

Foxboro tallied with a single goal in the first period, when Walt banged in a pass from Wright at the four minute mark. At the five minute mark in the second Elder put the Foxes two up, the lead being cut to one goal two minutes later when Cole rapped home I. May's pass for the only Centenary goal of the game. Walt combined with Spencer for the third Foxboro goal late in the period, while Elder tallied the lone goal in the last period.

Lineups:

Centenary.—Goal, O. May; defence, Harder and Cummings; centre, I. May; wings, Ray and Cole; subs, Hall, Harder and Shortt.

Foxboro—Goal, G. Guay; defence, J. Guay and G. Walt; centre, Wright; wings, Spencer and Thompson; subs, Elder, N. Guay, Priestly and Sine.

Referee—E. Wallace.

Blame Visibility

TRENTON, Ont., Feb. 24—(CP).—A coroner's jury last night returned a verdict blaming poor visibility for the collision between two trains near here on February 12 in which two Canadian National Railways employees were killed.

The jury decided a dense fog which shrouded the district was responsible for the accident, which occurred when a passenger train crashed into the rear of a stalled freight train, wrecking six box cars and derailing the passenger train's engine.

Kennedy's Rink Captures Royal York Cup

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—Bert Kennedy's Toronto Royal Canadians rink captured the Royal York Trophy Saturday night in a thrilling extra-end battle which climaxed the fourteenth annual Ontario Bonspiel. He triumphed, 10-9 on the thirteenth end after Skip Frank Willcox of Fort William missed with what could have been the winning rock on the twelfth end.

The final was one of two Saturday which wound up the six-day spiel. In the morning, A. R. Tarlton's Hamilton Thistles, who won the grand aggregate and the Seiberling Trophy Friday night, added to their laurels by taking the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie Trophy, 14-10, from Col. W. O. Morris' Torontos.

The Royal York final, said to be the best ever played in the bonspiel, saw nearly ever rock knocked out, most ends finishing with only a stone or two in the house. There were brilliant shots and a few misses but the one in the twelfth was the payoff.

At the time Kennedy was leading 9-8. He had set up two guard rocks and was dying one. A. L. Grant, second on the Fort William rink, made a marvellous effort to draw around the guards, take out Kennedy's stone and lie one himself. Kennedy then knocked out Grant's stone to lie one.

On the third last rock, Vice-skip Frank Sargent of Fort William then drew on the inturn to place his stone in the house in an impregnable position behind the guards. Kennedy's last rock failed to knock out the Fort William granite and, with the tying rock in the house, all Willcox had to do to win the game and trophy was to draw to the house with his final stone. But he made his shot too heavy.

Brawl On Street Fatal To Corporal

TORONTO, Feb. 24. — Corporal Richard Samuel Dening, M.M., well-known soldier and mining man, was fatally injured in a street brawl on King Street West early Sunday morning.

Trooper Walter Payne, 21, of the Fort Garry Horse Regiment, Camp Borden, alleged to have struck the blow which caused the veteran soldier's death, is held on a charge of manslaughter. The blow which sent Dening to the sidewalk, striking his head on the curb, was the climax of an argument between the two soldiers, both apparent strangers to one another.

From what information the authorities were able to gather, the argument started inside a King Street West sandwich bar over the respective physical strength of the older and younger members of the army. The police were called, and had asked the men to leave the place, which they both did. Upon reaching the street the argument resumed more heatedly and blows were exchanged. A stiff right by Payne sent the older soldier limp to the sidewalk and brought about his death four hours later in the military hospital. Payne said he struck in self-defence.

Coroner Dr. Julian Loudon held a preliminary inquiry. An inquest will not be held.

learned that Sir Frederick was going to England shortly to report on the war medical research work being done in Canada.

One after another stressed the magnificent contribution which Sir Frederick, through his knowledge of medical science, his powers of organization and his capacity for leadership, has made to the war effort not only of Canada, but of the whole Empire.

Devoted Energies To Work

"To his university, his country and his Empire, Sir Frederick has given the most distinguished service," commented Col. Duncan Graham. "Since the outbreak of the war he has devoted all his energies to the investigation of medical problems that would further our war effort. As chairman of the committee on medical research under the National Research Council, he organized committees to deal with each phase of the work. In his own department in the university he turned his attention from peacetime activities to airplane and aviation research. As chairman of the committee on aviation medical research he tried to co-ordinate all the research facilities throughout the country. He has been untiring in his work on all problems."

"Sir Frederick has rendered exceptionally valuable service to the National Research Council and has made several outstanding contributions to the prosecution of Canada's war effort in the field of scientific research. If by any chance he is lost, then it will be an irreparable loss to Canada," declared Squadron Leader Hall, who has been closely associated with Sir Frederick, both in Ottawa and in the Banting Institute.

"I have been tremendously impressed with what he has accomplished in aviation since the beginning of this war," remarked Dr. Best, professor of physiology at the university. "He has done a great job. When the story of his work in this war is told, it will be one of the most marvellous stories of medical research. A quiet man, he is a great organizer and administrator, as well as a great research worker. I am one of those who have been privileged to know him closely and he is one of the greatest people in the whole world."

Took Charge of Committee

Dr. Henderson recalled that almost three years ago Sir Frederick accepted the chairmanship of the newly reformed advisory medical committee of the National Research Council.

"As chairman of that," said Dr. Henderson, "he took charge of the organization, of its work and the direction of its expenditures. One of his first duties was to make a tour of all universities and other research institutions. As a result of this, he produced a real enthusiasm for research and gave an impetus to it throughout Canada. That meant there were many more requests for grants of money than the National Research Council could take care of; a subcommittee was named with Sir Frederick as head to handle the situation, and it was Sir Frederick who saw to the wise distribution of the money and kept peace in the ranks of the research workers.

"It has been chiefly through the efforts of Sir Frederick that many distinguished scientists in the United States have come to Canada to participate in the work here."

"If any thing should happen Sir Frederick, it would be an irreparable loss," remarked Dr. Macdonald. "His work has been beyond any powers of expression or even comprehension of the ordinary layman. Both as an organizer and a scientist, it has been nothing short of marvellous. We'll still hope that he may return to us."

Research Council's Associate Committee on Medical Research, and a member of a committee composed of leading medical authorities whose work led to establishment of "blood banks" in Canada to provide transfusions for as many as 20,000 Canadian and British troops and civilians.

The committee made large-scale blood banks possible through discovery of improved methods of storing blood for use in transfusions later. Treatment and storage of the blood is now carried on at University of Toronto under direction of Dr. C. H. Best, who with Dr. J. R. MacLeod was associated with Dr. Banting in the discovery of the insulin treatment for diabetes.

That discovery remains as the best-known work of the three men throughout the world. Announced in 1922, it was first greeted with suspicion in medical circles, but soon proved itself so effective that it brought acclaim from many parts of the globe.

It brought Dr. Banting and Dr. MacLeod the Nobel prize for medicine the following year, and Dr. Banting immediately announced that he felt Dr. Best should have been included in the award and turned over half his prize money of $5,600 to Dr. Best.

tion that Turkey would be indifferent to a Nazi march into Bulgaria so long as no violation of Turkish frontiers occurred.

Hunt Anti-Nazis

In Bulgaria, meanwhile, all automobile traffic in the Sofia district was halted by police as they began a nation-wide hunt for Bulgarians spreading anti-German leaflets, one of a number of signs interpreted by observers as indicating impending Nazi troop movements into and across the country.

Reports from Hungary said still more German soldiers were moving across that country into Rumania, next door to Bulgaria, whose border regions, including the area along the Danube River facing the Rumanian shore where Nazi troops are massed, were forbidden to foreigners.

Sofia was ordered to be ready for a blackout at a moment's notice, beginning Tuesday.

Blames Graziani

designed to smash Britain's power in the Mediterranean. Implied in his words was criticism of Graziani for keeping in the front lines Libyan troops unused to motorized warfare.

The fact that the forcer under General Wavell had taken the initiative too soon had caught the Italian armies napping, and smashed all the carefully laid plans for a great offensive brought passion into the voice of the Duce as he told his listeners of the "exasperating events" of recent weeks. Frequently he spoke of his Axis partner, and repeatedly he told of what German aid would do for Italy and the common victory, which, he asserted, would be theirs in the end.

Britain attacked with fifteen divisions five or ten days before Marshal Graziani was ready to launch his offensive, he declared. Italy had suffered severe defeats and he wanted to tell them why, to assure them that everything possible had been done.

"But our capacity for recuperation is formidable," he shouted as he went on to tell of the arrival of German mechanized detachments as well as Stuka dive-bombers to herald "a new season of success for us." The Premier described as "idiotic" talk of Italy making a separate peace with Britain, and he pledged his regime to carry on until victory was won.

Will "March" to End

"No matter what happens Italy will march side by side with Germany to the end," the Duce told the listening Blackshirts and the nation.

It was Mussolini's first address to the nation since November 18, nearly a month before the British offensive opened in North Africa.

In defending his regime against charges abroad that there had been a lack of preparation for the Libyan campaign, Mussolini gave figures on the men and supplies sent to Libya for what the Italians had expected would be an advance on Egypt and seizure of the Nile and Suez.

He claimed 14,000 officers and 396,358 soldiers of two army corps —the fifth and tenth—including ten divisions of Italians and Libyans, had made up the Italian forces. There were 1,924 cannon of all sizes, many of the most recent model; 15,386 machine guns, 11,000,000 rounds of shells, 1,344,287,275 rounds of small arm ammunition, 127,877 tons of other materials, 779 tanks, some of them heavy; 9,854 trucks, and 4,809 motorcycles.

"These figures show that an effort which may be called imposing was dedicated to the defence of Libya," Mussolini shouted. "The same thing may be said about the preparations for resistance in East Africa, notwithstanding the distances and the total isolation which exalts the will and courage of our soldiers."

(In a Rome report published December 23, Marshal Graziani, Italian commander in Africa, blamed Italian reverses in Egypt and Libya on the lack of tanks and armored cars, which he said failed to reach him from Italy.

(After the fall of Bengazi British authorities in Africa estimated that 122,000 Italians had been captured, including 19 generals and one admiral, and numerous guns, tanks, and stores. British sources estimated that the original Italian force in Africa consisted of 250,000 men.)

2,000,000 Under Arms.

(British troops have taken more than 125,000 prisoners in the Libyan campaign, and numerous guns, tanks and trucks).

At present, Mussolini claimed, Italy has about 2,000,000 men under arms, but boasted she could have 4,000,000 this year.

The largest section of his address was devoted to the power of Nazi Germany. This power he claimed, did not diminish during the winter, but rather increased by "gigantic" proportions.

Germany's human losses were held to "a minimum" in proportion to the effort, and losses in materal were "insignificant," he claimed.

"May it be said for foreigners who are always ready for wicked slander that the behavior of German soldiers in Sicily and Libya is perfect in every way," he added.

Italy's losses in the Greek campaign, he claimed, were limited to "a few thousands, mostly wounded," while Greek losses have been "extremely high." (Athens communiques have indicated the contrary to be true).

Italy was "forced" into the war with Greece because Greece would not renounce British guarantees, he contended.

As in Libya, he continued, men and arms have been sent to Albania without reserve.

"Let it be said once for all," he roared, "that our soldiers in Albania have fought superbly. The Alpini especially have written pages of glory which would honor any army."

Conceding that the Italians have been having "grey days" in Africa, Mussolini claimed that "happens in every war."

He told his listeners that two battleships damaged by British aerial torpedoes in the November 11 attack on the Taranto naval base have been repaired and are almost ready to return to service.

(Three of Italy's six battleships were damaged badly and other war vessels were hit when Royal Air Force torpedo-carrying planes raided Taranto).

All Fronts Common.

Speaking of German aid to Italy, Mussolini said:

"The co-operation offered by the Fuehrer of the German air and armored detachments now in the Mediterranean Sea is only proof that all fronts are common (for the Axis) and that the efforts are common."

Mussolini referred twice to the United States. The first time he said; "England is alone. This isolation pushes her toward the United States, from which she desperately and urgently invokes aid. The industrial power of the United States is certainly great, but for it to be felt supplies must reach England safely and must be in quantities not only to compensate for the destruction wrought and to be wrought on the industrial plants of Britain, but to give superiority over Germany, which is impossible because men, machines, and raw materials of the entire European Continent are now working with Germany."

The second reference to the United States was this;

"Let me say that what is happening in the United States is one of the most colossal mystifications in the records of history. An illusion and a lie are at the base of American intervention, the illusion that the United States is still a democracy while in fact it is really a political, financial oligarchy dominated by Jewry through a form of extremel personal dictatorship.

"It is a lie that the Axis powers want to attack America after Britain. Neither in Rome nor Berlin are fantastic projects of that kind held. Such projects could only come from an insane inclination.... Let Americans rest at ease and not believe that as regards them is there a big bad wolf which wishes to devour them. In any case it is more likely that the United States would be invaded by the inhabitants of the not well known but very bellicose planet Mars who will descend from the starry spaces upon an imaginable flying fortress than by Axis soldiers."

The words recalled to Mussolini's listeners the Orson Welles broadcast of an adaptation of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds," which caused mass hysteria in October, 1938, chiefly in New Jersey. The audience roared with laughter.

"The events of these months exasperate our will and contribute and heighten our cold, conscious, implacable hate against the enemy —a hatred radiating in every heart, diffused in every home and which is an indispensable element of victory," he said.

Italy's plan for a war on Greece was presented by the High Command in Albania and was "unanimously approved without any reservations," he contended.

Speaking of Germany's aid, Il Duce said the 'Germans know Italy has 1,000,000 soldiers at her back between the British and the Greeks, as well as 15,000 to 20,000 planes, a similar number of tanks, thousands of cannon, and at least 500,000 tons of naval craft."

Mussolini said he would stick to the truth in speaking of Italian losses in Africa, and praised the Italians still fighting in East Africa.

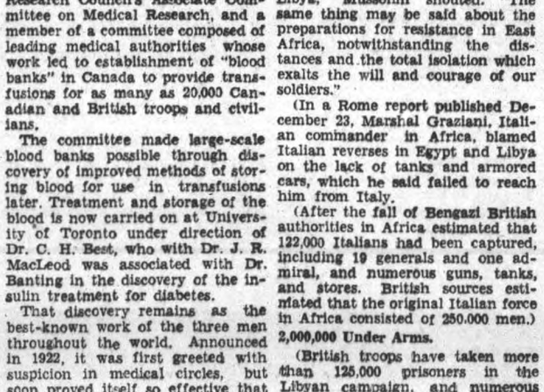
After R.A.F. Blasted Italian Airdrome



These pictures were made after El Adem was bombed by the R.A.F. It was the largest Italian airdrome in Libya and the accuracy of British fliers and gunners wrecked 87 Italian planes when they tore this aerial headquarters into bits. The Italians evacuated the airdrome leaving masses of provisions, fuel and equipment behind them. The large power station was left unsabotaged by the Italians in their hasty retreat. At TOP is seen the wreckage of one of the workshops, at BOTTOM, one of the 87 Italian aircraft destroyed by the R.A.F.

Salary Question Looms As Issue

Council Is Due To Strike Rate Tonight

The 1941 tax rate is expected to emerge from a special meeting of the council tonight following the finance committee session which is called for 7.30 o'clock.

No additional information has come out of the city hall as to what this year's levy is to be, other than the report by City Treasurer Shaver a week ago that a 32.5 mill rate was in prospect, half a mill less than last year.

It is not known whether the proposed salary increases will be carried through the final review tonight and into the budget, but there has been some intimation that both firemen and policemen are asking for some readjustment.

Several members of the council have said that if any change is made they want the first action to be applied to those city hall employees who are in the lower wage brackets, and then work upwards to the top.

Alderman Bradburn's comment the other night that the half mill margin under the 1941 rate was being whittled down too fine and that the council would have to go back to the 1940 rate has not been received with any approval, judging from comments heard on the street.

Ratepayers have been expecting that there is going to be a reduction in the levy this year, and they have been saying so.

Alderman Bradburn told the Examiner that he was greatly surprised by the number of citizens who took the trouble to telephone him last week, telling him that they were in full accord with his criticism of increases that were being contemplated by the council, even if they were being only tentatively considered

"I did not know some of the citizens personally," Alderman Bradburn said, "and it was quite an experience because I was not expecting anything like that."

Another alderman said he did not know what to do about the estimates and especially the Board of Works. "If my memory is right it is not so long ago that the council was giving the Board $65,000 to $70,000 a year to spend on the city streets, and we all thought the members of that year were doing a pretty good job. The council has now got up to $100,000 for the Board after cutting off a thousand dollars or so in committee."

One of the new aldermen said: "I have come to the conclusion that cutting down expenditures is not so difficult. All you have to do is shut your eyes and slash. If I thought that was what the people really want, I might be inclined to do it, but I think they want some thought and care given to this question, no doubt the major business of the year."

Fred T. Tuggey, former alderman, commented that the council could make a name for themselves this year by lopping two mills from last year's rate, and not worrying too much about the consequences.

"May be a lot of people would have more appreciation of things the council has always taken a pride in if they had to do without them for a year," Mr. Tuggey said, "but the decision is in the hands of the council. I don't think you will find very much complaint from the people this year if the Council and the Board of Education could get together and make a substantial reduction in the rate this year."

Alderman Swanston offered the explanation that the resolution of the property committee to buy a floor washing machine for the market hall was based on urgings from the Board of Health.

"The Sanitary Inspector, Medical Officer of Health and the Board of Health had all been proposing that the market hall should be washed oftener," the chairman of the property committee said. "When the place is scrubbed they have to carry water from the police station or get hot water from the restaurants in the block, and go over to Louis Yeotes' cafe. That has cost around six to seven dollars or more, but how long should the council of a city like Peterborough put up with such conditions as that It couldn't have been any worse than that when the market was first built. and that wasn't yesterday. We have many women coming in from good farm homes every Saturday, and if the Board of Health says the market hall and entrances are not being kept clean enough and that scrubbing should be done oftener, I think they ought to know about it, because Sanitary Inspector McPherson looks over the place every week.

While I am at it, I'd like to say one other thing, and I am not quarreling with Malcolm McIntyre, either, but when he says he also is in favor of giving Chief Gimblett an increase in salary it might be remembered that he was chairman of the fire, water and light committee last year, or for two years, but there was no action taken to give the Chief the increase he has asked for. Apparently when an alderman graduates from the council he is in favor of some expenditures which he did not put through himself when he had the chance."

Contributions to Peterborough's fund for the relief of British War Victims include today three cheques from well-wishers in the United States. Their combined amount is $75.22.

Two of them were received from Miss Camilla H. Park of the staff of the College Preparatory School for Girls, Cincinnati, for $55 which with its exchange increment amounted to $60.22.

Accompanying it was the following letter, in part, from Miss Park, a sister of Maurice H. Park of this city, to Fred G. Mann:

"Your prompt and kindly acknowledgment of Miss Cotteral's Christmas cheque stimulated interest in your fund, and I am happy to be able to enclose this cheque from the school, which represents the proceeds of a silver collection taken at the school during its recent celebration of the anniversary of Washington's birthday.

You will be glad to know that a great deal of war work is being done by the "Bundles For Britain," with which an active Canadian group of about seventy members has identified itself.

The other small cheque ($10 in Canadian funds) was given by one or two friends here in the apartment buildings where I live."

Miss L. Walters of Bristol, Pa., sent an American five-dollar bill, which enters Mr. Mann's column in Canadian value of $5.50.

There are other contributions recorded in Mr. Mann's list today that deserve mention, including $40 from nurses attending first aid lectures, but prominence is given to those helpful and timely remembrances from friends across the border. They help push the fund total on toward "five figure" mark.

Mr. Mann is hoping that citizens will support the police hockey match at Brock Street rink Tuesday night. The proceeds go to the British War Victims.

More Sacrifice Urged In Lenten Letter

"We must now awaken to the realization that our nation rightly demands the spirit of sacrifice from each and every one of us. Canada needs us all—every man, woman, and child, to strengthen her, to stand faithfully by her, to make all necessary sacrifices gladly, to lift up our hands and hearts in prayer for her until her hour of trial has passed and her hour of glorious triumph shall arise."

This quotation is taken from the pastoral letter issued by the Archbishops and Bishops of Ontario and read in all the Catholic churches of the province on Sunday, announcing that the first Sunday of Lent be consecrated in all parishes as a day of intercession for peace with victory. The Lenten season begins on Ash Wednesday this week.

"Dearly Beloved in Christ Jesus," the pastoral letter begins in its salutation to the clergy of the province, religious communities and the faithful,

"We stand upon the threshold of the Lenten season, the memories of which centre in the Cross of Christ, bringing to us through silent lips of the crucified Master His own exhortation to prayer, self-denial, and to penance for our sins. Our divine Saviour's message comes to us this year at a moment when our beloved country and the whole British Empire faces the most fateful crisis in its history. To quote the Right Honorable Winston Churchill in his address of February 9, 'We may be sure that the war is going to enter upon a phase of greater violence.'"

"We are living through a crucial hour, darkened by the hateful iniquities of infidel dictators. Our Christian civilization and culture, our democratic way of life, our civic and religious freedom, are challenged by the greatest menace of all time. We must light new beacons on the watch-towers of our freedom. By our dauntless courage and abiding trust in God, we must win victory and restore peace to the world—a lasting peace based on justice and charity. Since the outbreak of the war, we have exhorted you, our faithful people, to lift up your hearts in unceasing prayer for our country's weal and the success of the British cause. Now that further threats darken the world's horizon at the aproach of the Lenten period, we deem it our duty to ask you to renew your fervent supplications and to cheerfully accept whatever sufferings and sacrifices you may be called upon to endure until the final goal of liberty has been attained.

"During the past year we have witnessed the heroic endurance of the men, women, and children of Great Britain 'in the midst of fire and death from the clouds.' The gallant resistance, the calm, serene courage of the people of London, of Birmingham, of Liverpool, and of battered Coventry, amidst the wreckage of their homes and in the peril of their lives, evoke our highest admiration and our warmest praise. The daily deeds of heroism which mark even the civilian life of England bring to our lips the sacred words of Christ, 'Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends.' (John xv., 13.)"

The letter refers to the example of the soldiers and sailors and airmen of the Empire, and also mentions the escape of Canada from the fury the Motherland has suffered, then makes the appeal for more energetic co-operation and sacrifice mentioned above.

"Let us, then, willingly co-operate with the civic authorities of our land and gird ourselves with the threefold spirit of detachment, self-denial and of courage in whatever sacrifices may be necessary....

"Our hearts have been consoled by the voice of His Royal Majesty, our Christian King, George VI., calling upon his faithful subjects throughout the Empire to kneel before the God of nations and humbly acknowledging our defects and our sins, implore the aid of His Almighty Power....Humble, persevering prayer ascending to the throne of the Most High will pierce the clouds and bring down the dew of God's mercy upon us and upon our cause. In the words of the Royal Psalmist, 'Some place their trust in chariots, others in steeds. But we, in the name of the Lord, our God.' (Psalm lxvii., 1.) The valiant warrior, Judas Maccabeus, knew the power of prayer when he said: 'Success in war is not in the multitude of the army, but the strength comes from heaven. They come against us with an insolent multitude and with pride to destroy us. But we will fight for our lives and our laws. And the Lord Himself will overthrow them before His Face; but as for us, fear them not.'"

The letter concludes with details for next Sunday's devotions of intercession. Signatories of the letter include Archbishop M. J. O'Brien of Kingston, and Bishop D. O'Connor of Peterborough.

Canuck Women Must Gird For War Work

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 24 (ENS)—The part Canadian women are to play in the Empire's war effort was graphically told by Mrs. Thomas Reid as the principal feature of the monthly meeting of Rylstone Women's Institute. In a carefully prepared address Mrs. Reid pointed out at least nine ways that Canadian women can make their contribution.

She began by asking the meeting, swelled by a large number of visitors if they had really stopped to think what a serious thing this war is. She said, "We know that it is a fight for the existence of democracy—for all that civilized people care for—social progress, learning, culture, Christianity, freedom of the human spirit. But that fight is being carried on at a distance while we in Canada work and play much as usual. Our sleep is unbroken by the crash of bombs or anti-aircraft fire nor do we lack food, clothing or shelter. We know nothing of sleepless, nerve-racking nights in stuffy shelters, or of wearisome days of work and worry. In fact unless some of our loved ones are over there 'war' is a very vague term to us. But we must not forget that an axis victory over England would mean an axis invasion of America, when we ourselves would learn the full meaning of war and all its horrors.

Looking back in history we find that women had very little to do in war-time except to nurse the wounded and even in the last war she was still merely an auxiliary but today quoting Clemence Dane, 'she is a partner in the life and death struggle which is not made against the nation's defenders—the Navy, Army, and Air Force, but against the nation itself which is more than half feminine. 'Total war' they call it, and at the end of one short year (these women) have formed themselves into such official and unofficial armies as the world has never seen."

The Canadian women have certain duties to perform and every woman and child in the British Empire must waken to a sense of his responsibility. In England women are nursing, driving ambulances, caring for air raid victims, putting out fires, supervising the collection of scrap, acting as milk girls, window cleaners, post women, canteen workers, taxi drivers, bus conductors, farmers, etc. Though there are some of these things which we cannot do there are others the English women cannot do. "We can and must buy British," said the speaker who pointed out that before the war it was a very sound idea but now it is imperative. Export trade is the fourth arm of defense in modern warfare and it is up to Canadian women to support this arm. Britain's ability to buy foodstuffs to feed her people to buy aeroplanes, tanks and shells to supply her fighting forces is dependent upon her ability to establish credits in other countries to pay for the goods which she must buy in those countries. It is up to Canadians to see that the ships that come to this country for war supplies come with their holds filled with goods for us. Second method of helping recommended by the speaker was by giving "our time" to provide comforts for soldiers, sailors and airmen and for the victims of Hitler's outrages. "What do a few hours a week mean? It is no sacrifice when we consider what is being done to keep the war from our doors. Let us recall Churchill's word regarding the airmen, 'Never was so much owed by so many to so few.' We must also give our money. Farmers seem to be particularly short of that commodity just now. Sometimes we think we can't get along with much less in the line of clothing or equipment, but before this was is won, we shall probably learn by experience the true meaning of such words as 'self-denial' and 'sacrifice.' The number of British war victims is constantly growing thus making an ever-increasing demand for their relief and though we may not be able to give to all of the societies soliciting funds we can all give something. We must buy War Savings Certificates for in doing this we are neither giving nor spending, we are investing. We know that dollars are going to be the turning point in this war and that there is a limit to the number of dollars which can be secured by taxation. So far only $3,000,000 a month has been subscribed in this way. The Government is asking for $10,000,000 a month." Those who are in moderate or meagre circumstances should not leave this to wealthier neighbors to do.

Referring to the cunning tactics of those in the United States who would have a negotiated peace the speaker declared that the people of this country wanted peace too but "it must be a just and lasting peace and we should never delude ourselves in the belief that we can secure such a peace from a barbarian who is still flush with victory and fat with the spoils of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France. Hitler has in the past hinted that a peace might be negotiated offering the English nation, in return for acknowledgment of all his murderous conquests, freedom from destruction. To any such insinations our English statemen have turned a deaf ear. Therefore never let the mention of such a peace pass from our lips until we have rid the world of the bloody and lying banners of Hitler and have forever settled the greedy ambitions of the arrogant German nation.

Fifth method by which Canadian women can help is to report the suspicious characters that "pass our way" and also those who suggest the Hitler method of government would not be a bad thing for Canada. "Whether such talk is a product of ignorance or of pro-German sentiment we do not know. Let us never for one moment tolerate such conversation.

Making a plea for unity Mrs. Reid declared that the women must regardless of creed or station, personal prejudice or selfish interests, unite in the tasks which lie before them. "We are not only helping to win the war at this time but are also laying the foundations for post-war days and it is for us to begin to instil in the minds of youth the principals for which we are fighting—liberty, truth, tolerance and christianity.

Mrs. Reid expressed the opinion that God would intervene on the side of Christianity at the right time and she cited several instances in history when He had done this. The evacuation from Dunkirk had been made possible by something of a miracle which kept the channel calm for three days during which 335,000 soldiers were brought back to England. Another such example was the rain which bogged down Napoleon's artillery until Bleucher had arrived to aid Wellington at Waterloo and the strange order to cease fire which gave the French a chance to bring up reinforcements in Sept. 6, 1914. "Surely," said the speaker, "these (examples of God's intervention) should strengthen our faith."

In order to keep the health on the home front at a high standard —those who are mentally and physically health are better able to meet emergencie and bear the extra work and worry—it would pay us to make a more thorough study of the matter and apply it in our kitchens. The nutrition department of the Red Cross has been calling attention to the importance of the nutrition program in relation to war time problems. Frequent relaxation is a necessity in these days. The value of morale and the part women can play in keeping it high in times of difficult and danger were pointed out by the speaker. One cause of the French downfall was a lack of stern mental preparation for possible set-backs. "The bulk of the French army had never seen action when the downfall came." Italian reverses in Africa and Albania are another example of lack of morale. "We of the British race know what we are fighting for, and we have what it takes in the way of backbone and courage. We must not belittle the fact that the forces pitted against us are great but we must look to the future sustained by the knowledge that we have faced as great dangers before and did not fail."

The speaker concluded with a quotation from Churchill, "Come then, and let us to the task, to the battle and the tail, each to our part, each to our station. Fill the armies, rule the air, pour out the munitions, strangle the U-boats, sweep the mines, plough the land, build the ships, guard the streets, succour the wounded and honor the brave."

During the business part of their meeting a report was given of the Vanishing Teas which are being arranged by members in their spare time and it was decided to send $5 to the British War Victims Fund. Other items included readings by Vera Stewart, Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn, Mrs. W. Rutherford. Mrs. L. Anderson then conducted a contest and the hostess, Mrs. W. Rutherford served refreshments.

Farm Complaint Justified Says Milburn

KITCHENER, Ont., Feb. 24.—(CP))—V. S. Milburn of Peterborough, secretary of the Canadian Farmers' Dairy Association and secretary of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, was guest speaker at the annual meeting of the New Dundee Co-operative Creamery, near here Saturday.

Urging Canadian farmers to do their war-time job of producing butter, milk and cheese in the required quantities—"as they are just as important as bullets," he added at the same time that complaints of the farmers are justified "because farming is a business, and we must have money to run it. That is why we must have better prices."

Mr. Milburn foresaw that "in the period following the war, we'll be able to build up a democracy which will function successfuly for all—labor, industry, and farmer alike."

Bank Pledges Popular In Campaign

Contrary to the expectations of the War Savings Certificate Committee bank pledges are showing a marked popularity and many business people, retired people and women claim it is the most convenient method of purchasing the certificates.

Briefly the bank pledge method is a simple method whereby a person signs an order instructing his bank automatically to deduct a certain amount each month from his deposit account and forward it to Ottawa for the purchase of War Savings Certificates. The certificates then come through by mail from Ottawa to the purchaser and he has no fuss or bother in connection with the transaction.

Canvassers in the women's division and in the Retail and Professional division have found that many people favor this method over any other.

This morning Chris Hughes had a 100 per cent turnout for a meeting of his team captains and he gave them complete instructions for the last lap of the drive in this particular division which is scheduled to be completed without fail on Wednesday night of this week. So far the men in this section have completed just over fifty per cent of the offices and institutions which are on the lists.

This evening the women of the city who are working in the city-wide canvass will start to turn in completed cards at the committee rooms, located in the old Bank of Montreal building, George street, opposite the Elite Cafe. Doug. Hammond will be on duty in this office every evening from 7.30 to 10 as well as during the day. Cards must be turned in so that the work of tabulating and checking them may be started without any further delay.

The women taking part in this drive are showing keen enthusiasm and their work so far has been commendable. The only think now is to put a little extra time into the drive, if at all possible so that the canvass may be completed in the time allotted.

Harold Casgan, chairman of the suburban division reported today that the women in the southern part of the municipality just outside the city limits are doing great work, and he expects the territory will be covered in record time.

At the time this story was written no word had been received from Toronto as to when the Norwegian fliers would be able to fly their planes over Peterborough. Gordon Matthews is still trying to complete arrangements and notice will be given in the Examiner just as soon as final word is received. Mr. Matthews has been battling a severe cold for the past five days but was back on the job this morning.

Grandmother's Wedding Was Like This

Guests at the Robertson-Finnie wedding on Saturday pulled a fast one on the bride and groom, and when the happy couple came out of the church, instead of entering a taxi, they were ushered into the back seat of a tandem cutter, the only one in this part of the country. Having no alternative, the pair pulled a buffalo robe over their knees and settled for a ride down through the business section, while cars honked in the rear. A large sign on the back of the cutter proclaimed the fact that they were newlyweds. The bride was formerly Dorothy Finnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Finnie, and the groom is Kenneth Robertson, of Oshawa, commercial traveller for Heinz, and formerly of this city. He is the son of Mrs. Robertson and the late John Robertson. His mother lives on Dale Avenue. There is a strong suspicion that Miss Jennie Batten, county clerk and treasurer and Noel Rishor know where the team of horses and the cutter came from. The picture shows the wedding party just leaving St. Paul's Church after the ceremony on Saturday afternoon.

Mary J. DeMaio Is The Bride Of H. F. Minifie

Miss Mary Jeanne De Maio, daughter of Mr. F. De Maio and the late Mrs. De Maio, 149 Rubidge St., and Mr. Harold Richard Minifie, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Minifie of Keene, Ont., were married in St. Peter's Cathedral at nine o'clock Saturday morning. Rev. J. D. Masterson, D.D., conducted the ceremony, and the wedding music was played by Miss Alma Duffy, A.T.C.M. Miss Teresa Lamberti of Toronto sang.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a princess-style gown of white brocaded satin, with short train and leg o'-mutton sleeves, and her embroidered tulle veil fell from a crown of pearls and brilliants. Her jewelry was a gold cross and chain, and she carried a Colonial bouquet. Mrs. Alex De Maio, and Miss Mary Tammaro, the latter of Toronto, were her attendants, the matron-of-honor wearing a rose taffeta jacket frock with bouffant skirt and rose turban, and Miss Tammaro in turquoise blue taffeta with pink bows trimming the full skirt and matching picture hat. Each attendant carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Mr. George Minifie was his brother's groomsman, and Mr. Edward Prete was usher.

For a short wedding trip, the bride donned a rose crepe ensemble with matching veiled turban, and muskrat coat. Mr. and Mrs. Minifie will live in Peterborough. Congratulations were received by cable from the bride's brother, Lieut. Alex De Maio, O.M.E., from "somewhere in England."

Lowly Carrot Is Called Up For Sandwich

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(CP)— The common potato and carrot have been elevated to a distinguished position in the changing diet of Britain. Previously accepted as commonplace as water and fresh air, the potato and carrot are being disguised in fancy dress so they may appear different for every meal.

The Ministry of Food is reminding Britons of the nourishment to be obtained from these vegetables and suggests various ways in which they may be served for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Take the case of "Miss Lightfoot," a character given birth by the Ministry which tells how she works in a factory all day and "makes no song or dance about it but she is doing her bit." And the thing you can't help notice about Miss Lightfoot is that "she is seldom tired, never ill, never nervy." That's because she eats her potatoes and carrots every day. But how about you?

Now Try These

If you would like to follow the example of Miss Lightfoot, how would you like to try "carrot sandwiches for a change," or a "carrot cup salad," or Fadge for Breakfast, or perhaps Potato Floddies.

For the sandwich you simply grate carrot and cabbage and mix with chutney or sweet pickled. That will help replace rationed ham. If you prefer the salad, instructions are much the same except that you boil the carrots instead of serving them raw.

"Fadge" which the Ministry says is both nourishing and filling, is approximately mashed potatoes mixed with enough flour to a pliable dough, and then cooked on a gridle.

With "potato floddies," the potatoes are grated raw, mixed with flour and water to form a batter and then fried much the same as "potato chips" or "French fried."

Food As Munition

Coupled with these instructions is the advice to grow potatoes, carrots and onions, vegetables that will store for winter.

"Food is a munition of war," the Ministry declares on a flowing banner, under which is the admonition "don't waste it."

In the centre of a double-column advertisement is a caricature of a perspiring dockhand cursing volubly under a heavy load. Under him is another reminder.

"Our dockers don't mind risking their lives to unload your food but if you waste it their language is something horrible."

And these should be hours of deep, really restful sleep.

....If possible, sleep without a pillow. Don't be a Spartan about this, however. The important thing is that you be comfortable. Sheets should be long enough to stay tucked. Mid-Term Recital Held By Mary Harstone's Pupils

The Recreation Room in the Y.W.C.A. was the attractive setting Saturday afternoon for the mid-term piano recital of pupils of Miss Mary Harstone. The program was varied, interesting and carried through with precision and alacrity.

The outstanding feature of the recital, and one which the audience could not help but sense, was the thorough knowledge of musical interpretation that Miss Harstone possesses, and which was most successfully tranmitted to the pupils. From the simple nursery rhymes to the most difficult pieces one was impressed with the fact that they, too, have that knowledge to the degree their studies have taken them. After the recital the doors were opened to the club room at the back, where the table, centred with spring flowers and candle-lit, was presided over by Mrs. J. Walton Stevenson. A silver collection for the British War Victims' Fund was taken, and $8.50 realized.

The program follows: "The Skating Carnival," Mary Stewart; "Merrily we Roll Along," Jessie Blackwell; "Diddle, Diddle Dumpling," Mary Craw; duet, "Santa Claus Guards," Mary Craw and Miss Harstone; "Slumber Song," Joan Seymour; "Fairy Call," Mary Helen Matthews; duet, "The Merry Bobolink," Mary Helen Matthews and Joan Seymour; "I Love You," Betty Jackson; "The Sparrows," Tommy Griffin; "Tumbling Clowns," Be... Hopkins; trio, "The Floral Dance," Ruth Fisher, Joan Smith, Marie Adams; "The Bumble Bee," Joan Smith; "The Echo," Norma Harrison; "The Crooked Man," Helene Westran; duet, "The Country Fair," Helene Westran and Miss Harstone; "The Merry Peasant," Marie Adams; "The Jolly Roger," Ruth Fisher; "The Dreamer," Barbara Wood; "Burlesque," David Johnson; "Romance" (Schuman), Nancy Stanton. "Albumleaf" (Greig) Nancy Derry; trio, "Home Guard March," Nancy Stanton, Nancy Derry, Jean Hills; Minuet (Bocherini) John Gillespie; "Cradle Song" (Spendiarow), Jean Hills; "Impromptu" (Schubert)), Fred Garner; "Waltz in G Sharp Minor" (Chopin), Audrey Wood; "Melody" (Gluck-Siloti), Andrew Scott. An interesting arrangement of God Save the King was played by Fred Garner.

Now Streamlines For Apple Sauce

OTTAWA, Feb. 24—(CP).—Along with other measures designed to develop a home market for Canadian apples, the horticulture division of the Central Experimental Farm has provided technical assistance to manufacturers in order to get a high quality of the apple sauce mother used to make.

A cannery in Nova Scotia is working full blast and some 4,000,000 pounds of the new streamlined product is about ready to go on the market. It retains the apples in pieces instead of reducing them to a thick fluid.

While the sale of fresh apple juice and of a new white vinegar made from apples goes a certain distance towards providing a market for cull apples, the sale of apple sauce and the introduction of better packaging methods is expected to provide a larger market for good quality apples.

High grade apples are required for the production of apple sauce and must be of uniform variety. One of the advantages is that varieties which cannot be shipped long distances, such as the Gravenstein, can be used up in apple sauce canning.

In connection with packages the horticulture branch is seeking to foster consumer packing in the orchards and is experimenting with different types of packages. The sale of apples in barrel and bushel containers to dealers who repack them in smaller containers causes bruising and deterioration and discourages buying.

If the apples are packed in smaller containers on the farm, however, they reach the consumer in better shape. Some success was attained last Fall with a peck-sized cardboard apple box which was quite inexpensive.

Another method of packing apples in a half-bushel lot was also successful but more expensive. The cellophane prevents the apples from drying out and generates a small amount of carbon dioxide gas which helps to keep them in good condition.

An odd thing noted about apple-eating habits is that the per capita consumption of apples in the Prairie Provinces is higher than in the rest of Canada, despite the fact that few apples are grown there while all other provinces have numerous orchards.

O'Brien-Sheridan Vows Are Pledged

The marriage took place Saturday morning at Sacred Heart Church of Miss Rose Catharine Sheridan, daughter of James Sheridan and the late Mrs. Sheridan, to Mr. Clare O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O'Brien, Father James Houlihan officiating. The bride wore a street-length dress of turquoise blue with accesories to match and corsage of American Beauty roses and fern. Miss Mary Sheridan was her sister's attendant, wearing a rose-beige ensemble with corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Leo O'Brien was groomsman.

The wedding breakfast was held at Hooper's Palm Rooms. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien will live in Peterborough.

Kiwanis Members Entertained By Kiwaniqueens

The annual Men's Night of the Kiwanis Club was held by the Kiwaniqueens at the Kawartha Club Friday night, and a jovial company sat down to dinner under the genial chairmanship of John Troke. Clever novelties prepared by the ladies added to the enjoyment of the banquet. Mayor Hamilton was present, and in a brief speech paid tribute to the work of the Kiwanis Club, expressing his pleasure in the program, and Ralph Standish added to the merriment with a jocular but sincere vote of thanks to the ladies.

The results were about evenly divided between the subjects of war and love during a telegram writing test in which the first letter of the successive words were to form the word "Valentine," of which probably the most ingenious was the sentence, "Victory Almost Looks Easy Now That Italians Not Eager." A "sing-song" was led by Mrs. Al. B. Clark and Mrs. L. R. Mitchell sang a number of excellent solos.

Amusement was high during a picture contest in which men were invited to guess the identity of fellow Kiwanians from baby photographs rounded up by the wives. Just one complete agreement was actually reached, since one appealing infant's picture had the name of "Raymond Scott" clearly written across the back. Ted Pridham was the winner of this contest.

A highlight of the evening was provided by the floor-show. Barbara Parker and Douglas Bean, two

Prints For Smart Women

THE FROCK or suit of printed silk is a favorite American fashion, and in the good old days the Paris designers used to show it because of their New World clients. It is a style in which our designers have always excelled, as can be seen from this beautiful Louise Barnes Gallagher model. It is a suit that is enchantingly feminine and full of Victorian charm, yet very smart. The leaf green background has a print of tiny white bow-knots and old-fashioned hoop-skirted girls. The pleated ruffle makes a narrowed V at the waist and gives a peplum effect. The ruffle has a border of tiny hand finished scallops.

Ramblers Take Bisons 4-3; Eagles Match It

BUFFALO, Feb. 24.— New Haven Eagles, challengers for the lead in the American Hockey League's eastern section, were threatened today with elimination from the loop's playoff round—so close was the race in the four-team division.

Only two points behind the leading Providence Reds, the Eagles needed a spurt to make sure of one of the three playoff berths in the face of the late drive staged by the last-place Philadelphia Ramblers.

The Ramblers, who started the season at a near-disastrous clip, have been winning consistently of late in an effort to make up the ground. They defeated Buffalo Bisons, 4-3, last night and it took a victory by an identical, 4-3, count over Hershey Bears to keep New Haven five points ahead of them.

With but a few games remaining in the schedule, both of the first two clubs are still within reach of the Ramblers. Providence Reds, who took over the top rung by beating the second-place Springfield Indians 3-2 last night when two points ahead of New Haven by the victory, while the Indians stayed within a single point of the third-place team.

One other game was played last night, with Pittsburg Hornets and Indianapolis Capitals tying 2-2, in their battle for the third playoff rung in the western section of the loop. The draw left the third-place capitals four points ahead of the Hornets.

Pittsburg spotted the Capitals a 1-0 lead in the game at Indianapolis when Jud McAtee scored in the second session, but the Hornets tallied two straight goals by Johnny O'Flaherty and Steele in the third period. A counter by Ken Kilrea for the Caps at 10:50 of the last session forced the game into a scoreless overtime.

Bisons Now 5 Down

Philadelphia, seeking to improve their own playoff chances, dealt a severe blow to the hopes of the Bisons by their victory at Buffalo. Last place club in the western division, the Bisons fell five points behind Indianapolis by the loss.

Buffalo held a 3-2 lead going into the third period after Morey Rimstad, Jack Toupin and Bill Cunningham scored to offset Rambler tallies by Frank Boucher and Murdo McKay. Herb Foster tied the count at 6:44 of the last period, however, and McKay gave Philadelphia the winning goal less than a minute later.

New Haven blew a two-goal lead and were forced to come from behind for their win at home over Hershey. The Eagles built up a 2-0 edge in the second period on goals by Don Wilson and Mark Maveety but the Bears went ahead on three straight third-period goals by Hec Kilrea, Gordie Pettinger and Bobby Kirk.

Playing-Coach Earl Robinson tied the score at 6:18 of the period, however, and Gus Mancuso gave the Ramblers the winning goal two minutes later.

Providence also came from behind for their victory at home over Springfield when the Indians held a 2-1 lead midway in thef inal period on tallies by Rhys Thomson and Larry Thibeault against Eddie Bush's unassisted goal. George Johnston and Paul Platz both scored for the Reds to win the match.

In Saturday night's games, Hershey defeated Buffalo, 4-2; Cleveland beat Pittsburg, 3-2; Philadelphia whipped Indianapolis, 7-2, and New Haven and Springfield played to a 1-1 overtime draw.

JEALOUSY NOT PROOF OF LOVE; IT'S LACK OF FAITH. Green - eyed Monster Destroys Homes, Wrecks Marriage, Causes More Grief Than Any Other Curse.

In a recent movie a husband and wife who lost their taste for each other, quarrelled and parted, are brought together again and the old flame rekindled by each making the other jealous. That is a good enough theme for presentation on the silver screen, but in real life jealousy isn't the food of love, it is its poison. And it doesn't build up homes. It does more to wreck them than any other one thing. To this column come thousands of letters sodden with the tears of wives who are crushed under the tyranny of husbands who keep them virtually prisoners incommunicado. They are not allowed to go shopping alone. They are not permitted to be members of any women's clubs, or visit their mothers or sisters unless husband is along. They cannot even speak to the butcher boy when he delivers the roast without their green-eyed husbands accusing them of having an affair with him. And I get equally as many letters from despairing men who tell of the hells on earth their jealous wives make for them; who say that their wives are ruining their business by insulting their women customers; that their wives spy upon them continually, open their letters, go through their pockets at night, and require them to furnish an alibi for every minute of the time they are away from home; that they cannot visit their mothers, nor speak casually to a woman acquaintance or even glance at a pretty girl on the street without having their wives make scenes about it.

And these men and women who are the victims of their jealous wives and husbands ask what they can do about it, and if there is any cure for jealousy. To which one must answer sadly, no. For jealousy is madness that needs no excuse for existing, and it curses equally those who are afflicted with it and those who are made to suffer from their evil passion.

Analyzing Jealousy.

If jealousy could be analyzed, it would be found to be made up of equal parts of possessiveness, of an inferiority complex, and of all the baser instincts of the human animal. It is founded on the selfish desire of one individual to own another, body and soul, and to separate that one from all other contacts.

The wife of the jealous man must give up her family and her friends for him and find no pleasure in any society but his. The husband of the jealous wife must let her monopolize him so that he has not an interest or a thought that is not centered in her. And neither the jealous husband nor wife gives a thought to the happiness or desires of those whom they are sacrificing so ruthlessly to their own egotism.

Jealousy is the bitter fruit of an inferiority complex, because it is the open confession of lovers, or husbands and wives that they do not consider themselves as attractive as even the common millrun of men and women, and are afraid to be brought in competition with them.

Why Boys Are Jealous.

The boy who is so jealous he will not let his girl friend dance with another lad at a party is afraid to have her contrast his clumsiness with the skill and smoothness of a good partner.

The jealous husband who glowers at his wife if he sees her entertained and amused by her dinner partner is secretly burned up by the knowledge that he is a poor talker. The jealous wife who cannot endure for her husband even to look at another woman knows that she lacks beauty and chic and feminine charm. It is the fear of themselves that makes men and women jealous.

But the strangest thing of all about jealousy is that jealous people seem to have minds that are perfect cesspools of iniquity. Apparently they have no belief in any decent human impulses or any faith in any man or woman having any nobility of soul or any high principles.

A jealous husband does not believe that his wife is virtuous or loyal, no matter how many years he has seen her walk the straight and narrow path, nor what evidence she has given of the purity of her character. He suspicions her not only of being unfaithful to him but of indulging in the lowest orgies. Nor does the jealous wife believe it possible for her husband to have a sense of honor or to be faithful to her.

Foolish people have said that jealousy is a proof of love. It is quite the contrary. It is the greatest insult that can be offered to love, because it shows that you do not trust the one you profess to love. Also jealousy is first aid to philandering, because after being fed up on his wife's false accusations until he is weary of them many a man starts out to justify them.

There are few things in the world that cause so much sorrow and so many heartaches as jealousy, but there is no known cure for it.

America-Bound Boys Arrested

LONDON, Feb. 24.—(CP).—A 14-year-old Rochdale errand boy who took £362 ($1,134) in treasury notes from his employer and tried with two other boys to get to Canada was bound over and placed under supervision when convicted of theft by Rochdale county magistrates.

The boys, when found at Wigan railway station, said they were going to Liverpool and hoped to get to Canada or the United States where they intended to start farming.

A 16-year-old Liverpool boy was charged with receiving £1 $4.50) from the errand boy, while the third, aged 13, was charged with stealing cigarettes from the co-operative society where the errand boy worked. They pleaded guilty and were bound over.

Curling Notes

By HERB MARTIN

Our next competition will be the Leads and Seconds bonspiel for the Ross Dobbin Trophy. It will commence just as soon as the Neill Trophy is concluded.

But this year the committee has decided to make up the rinks from only the Leads and Seconds who are themselves interested enough to make their entry on the blackboard. Other years, all Leads and Seconds were entered, and over half of them defaulted. That's no good. So now, boys, it's up to yourself.

Four mixed rinks from our club motored up to Lakefield last week for a friendly game with the curlers of that town. Two games were played at 7 o'clock and two games at 9 o'clock. Our local rinks came out second best.

The personnel of the rinks were:

Mrs. V. Selkirk, H. Darling, Miss L. Lyle, N. Hamley (skip).

J. McCullough, Mrs. A. Leach, Mrs. G. Wood, R. Martin (skip).

Mrs. O. Steer, O. Steer, Mrs. E. Thomas, E. Thomas (skip).

Mrs. M. Rishor, D. Clark, Mrs. D. Clark, F. Batten (skip).

The longer we are at this curling game, the more we see, the more we learn, and the more we know. Just the other day a brand new idea was sprung on the curling fraternity right out on Number 6 ice.

It has been the custom—and is yet—when at the conclusion of a game all players shake hands one with another; a sort of a round robin set up; an act of good sportsmanship.

But on this certain day two ladies rinks were playing, and one had not been doing so well in the schedule; but this day was different. They played bang-up curling; everything was going just right and they made the best of it. The last end came and this particular rink was two up. What a glorious feeling? The first win of the season. Tradition was thrown to the wind; no hand-shaking for this crowd. The skip was so excited that she dropped her broom, ran clean across the ice, threw her arms around her lead, kissed and hugged her in a manner that would put John Barrymore in the background. The Vice soon caught on to the idea, she was not to be left out in the cold. She made for the second player. Players on the opposing rink followed suit. It was a grand finish and a new one. And here we with one or two other males were left high and dry on on Number 8.

We are now wondering if this new idea is going to be carried out in the mixed bonspiels. If so, a lot of us are going to get badly hurt in the crush—even maimed for life.

Climate Helps Fighting Tone Of Parasites

By JAMES MacCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 24.—(CP).—If the climate does not suit useful insects, then get insects that will suite the climate.

That is the guiding policy of important experiments a young Canadian entomologist, Dr. Alfred Wilkes, a graduate of the University of Toronto.

Dr. A. B. Baird, entomologist in charge of the laboratory, stated that the work being done by Dr. Wilkes is developing a whole new field of useful service for those who believe that insects can best be fought with insects, and that for every pest which troubles mankind there is a natural enemy which can exercise control.

A plain wooden box with a maize of electric wires and controls is the basic equipment in the experiments. In the ingenious apparatus a 55-degree range of temperature is provided to discover what temperatures useful parasites like best.

A notable guardian of Canadian resources is the parasite microplectron, one of the two imported insects responsible for controlling the European spruce sawfly which damaged thousands of acres of Canadian timberland. Microplectron and its ally, exenterus, must find sawfly cocoons in order to live. In the infested areas of the Gaspe Peninsula the parasites did their part nobly and lived fat until the sawflies were checked.

When parasites are released, the laboratory is vitally interested in how they have behaved. By collecting sawfly cocoons entomologists established that the parasites were doing their deadly work, but they were not satisfied. The possibility of the sawfly moving to other climatic zones had to be kept in mind, and it was uncertain whether the parasites would care to follow their enemy into colder or warmer areas.

Discriminating Families

On the electric wires in the box constructed by Dr. Wilkes were placed sawfly cocoons, and each came to the temperature of the wire. Then in the box were released families of microplectron permitted to choose whatever cocoon they wished. Some chose the colder, some the warmer.

Dr. Wilkes took the microplectron which had chosen the colder wires and kept them apart. When their children were released in the box of varying temperature, the vast majority chose the colder cocoons.

"We have come to the stage where we have only a few throwbacks who prefer the warmer wires," said Dr. Wilkes. "There has been a radical change in their preference. Whereas we used to find the average microplecton liked the cocoon with a moderately warm temperature this selected group prefers temperatures 25 to 30 regrees lower. We have the graphs showing their preference and while a few drift to the warmer cocoons, there is no question of general preference.

"This is important, because if the sawfly moves into colder districts of Canada we can fight them with insects which prosper in the cold and far more effective and economical than those which prefer higher temperatures."

By other methods of selection, Dr. Wilkes has improved the microplectron strain. Where the average egg-lay was 10 to 15 years ago, the careful selection of females on record of performance has raised the average for breeding stock to 40. The number of useless males has been reduced.

Dr. Baird said methods of selection made it feasible to have insects suit localities where they were required to fight pests although without selective breeding they could have been of little service.

"Dr. Wilkes' equipment is thought to be the first of its kind and our understanding is that we are far ahead in this study of insect selection to meet specific needs," Dr. Baird declared.

● SERIAL STORY

THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER

By HELEN WORDEN

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

YESTERDAY: Dan and Marie have a delightful party, but Marie realizes that she can never break through to Dan's level of society. After she leaves, refusing to let Dan take her home, she meets Lynda. Marie tells Lynda that she has no intention of marrying Dan.

CHAPTER XXV

THE success of the William Martin party could be measured by the number of photographers and newspaper reporters congregated outside the great mansion at 88th Street and Fifth Avenue. It was not yet 10 o'clock but many guests had already arrived.

"Our city editor doesn't care how much dough or S. A. she has," remarked Benny Tompkins, the Looking Glass's crack cameraman. "She can't get by unless she's under 40 and still photogenic."

"Social appeal, to you. Sh-h." Benny fitted a flashlight in place and focused his camera. "Here comes the Donovans, father, mother, Dan himself and Lynda Martin!"

Lights blazed. Lenses clicked. "Hold that just a minute, will you Mr. Donovan? Thanks, we'll try one more—" A dozen photographers shouted at once.

"For Heavens sake, have a little mercy," begged Dan. "I know you fellows have to make a living but—"

Mike took Dan by one arm and Katie by the other. "Let's give 'em a break," he said, pausing on the white stone steps with his son and wife. "How's this boys? Dan, you bring Lynda in closer."

The crowd on the sidewalk, and by this time it was a big one, parted as a Rolls-Royce town car drew up

✧ ✧ ✧

MIKE broke in. "What's that Lynda, me dear?" His voice, usually gentle when he spoke to her, had become gruff.

"Oh, you wouldn't understand, Mr. Donovan," Lynda snapped. "You just happened to make me out a little idiot. It's not your fault. I should have known better."

Those who knew Mike Donovan well, recognized trouble ahead when he spoke quietly.

"I was just putting meself in the place of the photographers, Lynda," he answered quietly. "If a picture of me is goin' to help them, they can have it."

Katie's tones were placating. She recognized danger signs. "Now all of you stop this foolishness," she urged, and come inside." She took Lynda's arm. "'Twas so thoughtful of you and Dan to pick us up."

"That was Dan's idea," said Lynda ungraciously.

Dan said nothing.

"MR. AND MRS. DANIEL DONOVAN." A footman in knee-breeches, standing at the top of the red-velvet carpeted marble stairs, boomed out the names of Mike and Katie. They both started self-consciously, then walked uncertainly into the grand ballroom where Mrs. Martin and her husband were receiving.

"Where are Dan and Lynda?" hissed Mrs. Martin into Katie's ear, as she pressed her hand. "They should be in the receiving line. I phoned the Plaza, but someone who's seen them said they were stopping for you and Mr. Donovan."

Katie cringed, as if she'd been guilty of something, she didn't know what. "They came with us," she whispered back. "I guess they're still downstairs getting off their hats and coats."

Mrs. Martin nodded, as others joined the line. "Awfully nice of you to come, Mr. and Mrs. Donovan," she said in her drillmaster's voice. A set smile fixed itself on her face. "And how do you do, Freddy Kissam—where have you been hiding yourself all this time?"

When Lynda and Dan appeared, she made them join her and their "Uncle William" as she referred to her husband.

"Why doesn't your uncle kick—," muttered Dan, to Lynda, after they had shaken hands with the hundredth couple, "or at least break and run?"

"I don't see why he should," answered Lynda stiffly.

"Well, I do. Come on let's dance."

Before she could protest he had whirled her out on the floor. "Oh, this is a waltz. I hate waltzes," she cried.

"Never mind," he said. "The next one will be a tango."

"And I hate to tango," she fussed. "I'm not the type."

Someone cut in. Dan didn't even know the boy, but he surrendered Lynda gladly enough.

She wasn't the type! At last he knew she wasn't. In another second he had extricated his hat and coat from the custody of a surprised footman and was out on Fifth Avenue, hailing a taxi.

"Pier Six, East River!" He hopped in. His mind was made up. His mother and father, much as he loved them, Lynda, as much as he regretted hurting her, nothing mattered but Marie. This time, no matter what happened, he was never going to let her out of his sight again.

✧ ✧ ✧

"EVERYBODY'S over at Kelly's Dance Hall, sir," the hot dog stand man told Dan at Pier Six. "I'm goin' jes' as soon as I close."

"Is Marie La Porte there?"

"Yep. Folks tell me she warn't goin' at first. But somethin' changed her mind."

Dan raced up the steep stairs to the dance hall.

"Name, mister?" A huge-fisted giant waiting at the top of the flight glared at him.

"Why, Donovan. Dan Donovan." Dan was puzzled.

"Mis-ter Dan Donovan—" the fellow bellowed.

As Dan watched, he saw Marie dance away with Tommy Ryan. Dan started forward, fists clenched, shoving his way through the crowd to the whirling pair.

✧ ✧ ✧

A WOMAN shrieked. Dan heard loud, angry voices. The band stopped suddenly. The crowd surged toward Bat. Dan glimpsed him, pulling off his coat, shouting angrily. And the object of Bat's rage was—Mike Donovan!

"I know me boy is here!" Mike was shouting.

Marie darted across the room to her father's side. "Papa! Papa! Wil you never stop this fighting?"

Dan waited as Tommy Ryan pushed into the circle gathered about Bat and Mike

Bat pushed him aside. "I knew that all the time. I pay you to repair, not to explain."

Marie eyed her father. He had known, then. How this old bargeman loved her. To give up his cargo. At that moment on the barge, Bat had surrendered his daughter's future into her own hands.

"I had to make you turn back to New York, papa," she explained.

Bat turned to her, forgetting Donovan for an instant. "I know, baby," he said tenderly. "Why? Because you wanted to marry Tommy Ryan?"

"No, because I want to be near Dan Donovan!" Marie's words echoed through the stillness of the room. Dan started forward again, only to be stopped by Bat's words.

"Do you think that a boy like that can really care for you—a barge captain's daughter?"

Marie nodded.

"But he won't marry you—" Bat warned.

Dan shoved the crowd away, reached Marie's side. "That's just what I intend to do!" He held Marie's hand, waited for Bat's wrath to descend upon them.

"No ye won't!" Mike bellowed, recovering from the shock. "I'll disinherit you! Not one penny of me money shall ye have!"

"That doesn't matter. I can get along without your money," he said in an even voice, loud enough for all to hear. "You started from scratch. You and mother. Why can't Marie and I do the same?"

Bat forgot his first quarrel, joined forces with his future son-in-law. "I don't see why not—You can work with me!" He glared belligerently at Mike.

"Mike! Mike! Do you know what you're saying?" The circle parted to let Katie Donovan through to her husband's side.

"Now, now Katie!" Mike's voice soothed her. "Sure I know what I'm doing. I had to be certain Dan knew what HE was doing." He moved over to his son, stuck out his hand. "Dannie, my boy! Ye've won. I'm proud of you, boy. And of me new daughter, too." His arm went around Marie, and his grin widened as she reached up to kiss him.

"If ye two want it," Mike went on, "Ye can have the Katherine for yer honeymoon!"

"What's that?" Tommy Ryan started a fist toward Bat's nose. But it never landed. Moving swiftly, Mike Donovn blocked the blow, then landed a haymaker flush on Ryan's chin.

"Throw him out," yelled George Fontaine. "Throw him out!" echoed Matt Flanagan, and together they grabbed Ryan, hustled him to the stairs.

"MR. LA PORTE," Dan said, "Dad says we can turn the Katherine into a barge if we want to."

Mike chuckled. "I must admit, I've foreseen such a possibility, but what I want to say, if ye should ever want to go into the truckin' business to work with Donovan and La Porte, I might stake—"

But his last words were drowned out as the band blared out again.

"Come on, Marie!" said Dan.

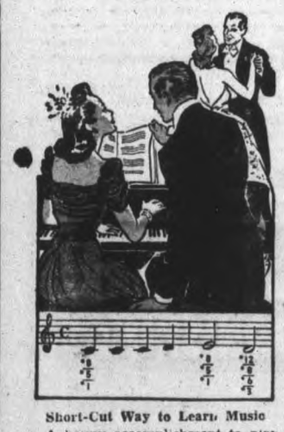
Piano an Accomplishment You Can Teach Yourself



Short-Cut Way to Learn Music

A happy accomplishment to play the piano, to entertain with the latest hits. As for that special man his favorite tune lures him like a magnet!

Learning to play isn't hard. You read music quickly with the aid of a chart which shows life-size the main part of the keyboard. With each key is its music note.

In your first lessons, with the paper keys of the chart right behind the real ones, you see at once which key to play for each note.

The paper keys are numbered too, so you can learn pieces a short-cut way. Instead of playing every note, you can just play the melody line with your right hand and harmonizing chords with your left.

Guitar diagrams on your popular music tell which chords to play. Looking them up in your table of chords, you note the numbers which match your key numbers — and there you are, ready to dash off a tune!

Tempted to learn how? Do! Our 24-page instruction book, with life-size keyboard chart, explains elements of music, time, chord building. Has three favorite pieces for practice.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of QUICK COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

YOUR CARDS DWINDLE

EVEN IF the declarer already knows from your bidding that you hold all the real strength of your side, and a double therefore would not give him any additional guidance in playing the hand, you should still be wary if you realize your partner probably will never be in the lead. Having to play away from your own honors can make them dwindle into spot cards in effect, and in addition the declarer may build a squeeze against you, counting you as having to protect all suits.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl
Pass	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♣
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl

Off-hand, West's double might seem like a thoroughly sound one, unless you stop to figure out how he will have to play his cards. Being obliged to lead from them, not only at the start, but later, he might have reckoned he was likely to throw away about two tricks in one way or another, no matter what he did. That is the way it developed.

A cursory glance at the cards make it appear as if the declarer will lose five tricks—two in hearts, one in diamonds and two in clubs—and therefore be down two. But he made his contract.

West led the club K. Seeing the guarded Q in dummy, he switched to a trump, the 8. South thereupon took three trump rounds, winding up on his own hand, and led the club 6. West won with the A and, hating to open a red suit—either of which would cost him a trick, he led his club 4. Declarer won that with dummy's Q, discarding the heart 10, and then threw West in with the heart 2 to the K and A.

This time West had a lead to make, his heart Q, but South ruffed it and ran his spades. As the last was played, he also held two diamonds in each hand, plus the heart 9 in dummy. West didn't like to pitch the heart J and set up that 9, so he discarded the guard to his diamond K. Thereupon declarer tossed the heart off in dummy and took the diamond A and Q for the last two tricks. West was squeezed, and there was nothing he could do to beat the contract.

Sturdy Warrior From S.A. Waterloo Of 'Hoppers

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 24. — (CP).—Trouble is in store for the Canadian grasshopper.

After three years of research work, officials of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory here believe they are on the way to controlling forays of the pest which has chewed millions of dollars from Canadian crops.

The most promising anti-grasshopper weapon at the moment is an insect called sarcophaga. Some of its kind are found in Canada and have done their humble part in stemming the hopper invasions, but they have been to few, too weak to exercise control.

"What we have in mind is facing the hopper with the type of sarcophaga best equipped to deal with him," said Dr. A. B. Baird, chief entomologist. "Perhaps we will have to import the parasite which will do the best job. Perhaps it may be enough simply to move sarcophaga from one part of Canada to the other in places where particular types will be most effective. It is all a matter of research and study and unfortunately it takes time."

Three years ago the laboratory received a request from the Argentine about grasshopper enemies known in Canada. Co-operation of entomologists in Dominion laboratories on the prairie was obtained and a comprehensive sample of known hopper foes was sent—alive—to the Argentine. In return, the South American laboratory sent Canada samples of parasites, including the sturdy sarcophaga, found in South America.

Sarcophaga Strategy.

Canadian studies led to the conclusion that the Argentine variety was more deadly in this country than its native relatives. Entomologists watched it at work.

"To see a sarcophaga go into action is an amazing spectacle," said Dr. Baird. "It is not a vicious-looking insect but in attacking a hopper it assumes a deadly role. It flies in at lightning speed, selects a spot to land and there lays an egg.

"In a fraction of a second the egg is a maggot. If the sarcophaga lands on a soft part of the hopper, the maggot has vanished in the twinkling of an eye, burrowing like mad. The shell part of the hopper is no protection. If the egg is laid there, the maggot may be delayed a second or so, but no longer. It drills its way through, gathers strength by sucking the body fluids at first and then eating into the hopper's vitals.

"It means the hopper is dead in about 15 days."

Dr. Baird agreed the time might come when a district infested with hoppers might send a hurry call for armies of sarcophaga, 'but that is not the way we want to work. We would locate the breeding grounds and place the hopper foes there. There would have to be co-operation with the United States and we know we will have it because we constantly exchange information.

"Grasshoppers on the plains are migrants and action on both sides of the border is as essential in a campaign of using parasites as in the employment of poison. The Argentine has worked with us and we hope to extend our anti-grasshopper alliance to Australia, South Africa and other Empire countries with similar problems.

Effective Operation.

"Our studies are not confined to parasites which may be imported and found effective, such as those from te Argentine. Thre is the possibility that an eastern grasshopper enemy—if it will survive—will be more effective when used in the west and vice versa. British Columbia and Ontario grasshopper control presents some problems different from those on the prairies.

'Such experiments take time. We have reached the point where some grasshopper parasites have been released in Ontario and the results have been encourging. But we cannot say anything definite yet because we have to be sure.

"We believe we are on the right track and with the support of other countries and continued research at home we feel that in the future we will cope with the grasshopper and control him, tough though he is."

Rev. W. A. Filer To Be Rector Of All Saints'

The congregation of All Saints' Anglican Church on Sunday, March 9th, will hear Rev. W. A. Filer preach his first sermon as their new rector. Mr. Filer, formerly of St. Luke's Church, Saint John, N.B., replaces Canon J. Douglas Paterson, who has retired from his post at All Saints' and is now in Toronto.

No stranger to his new parishioners, Mr. Filer was at All Saints' in July while Canon Paterson was on a mission in the Canadian west, during that month the new minister conducted the services at All Saints and also spoke at a mission in Bobcaygeon.

Graduating from Wycliffe College in 1925, Mr. Filer was curate at St. Ann's Church in Toronto and for a time held the same position in the Church of the Epiphany in Toronto, under Rev. Dyson Haig. Later he was the rector of a church in Brantford, and then was called to St. Luke's in New Brunswick, where he has spent the past nine years.

When the retirement of Canon Paterson was announced last fall a committee of the lay delegates and church wardens was held, and Mr. Filer was the unanimous choice of that committee. His arrival in Peterborough is expected three or four days before the 9th of next month, but the date for his induction has not yet been set.

British Sweep Half Up Somaliland

Capture Port Of Brava Only 150 Miles From Colony's Capital

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 25.—(AP). — British forces were reported to-day to have captured Brava in a sweep up the Italian Somaliland coast more than half way from Chisimaio to Mogadiscio, the colony's capital and chief port.

Brava marked a gain of 160 miles beyond Chisimai, the beginning of the seaboard highway, and put the British forces within 160 miles of Mogadiscio.

(These may have been troops from the Gold Coast or from Nigeria who previously have been reported fighting with the British armies in East Africa.

Whether British forces which seized Chisimaio had spanned the whole distance up to Brava was not clear. The forces occupying Brava may have been landed from ships in the Indian ocean, as others have been in that area, or may have cut across from inland. The Juba river, the strongest natural Italian defence line in Somaliland, has been breached by the British forces in several places, giving them access to a network of roads).

Madrid, Feb. 25 (AP)

THE Spanish press noted today "the belief of many Frenchmen" that all French North Africa would swing over to Gen. Charles De Gaulle if the British drive across Libya should reach the border of Tunisia.

The newspaper Arriba, commenting on the speeches of Mussolini Sunday and Hitler yesterday, said a decisive blow should be struck in the war quickly to avoid what it called the "Asiatic menace." The newspaper did not define this.

Churchill Snubs Jap Offer To Mediate In Britain's War With Nazi Germany

LONDON, Feb. 25—(AP).—Prime Minister Churchill has told Japan that Britain rejects any mediation in her war with Germany, the Government announced today.

Winston Churchill

The announcement was made in the House of Commons by R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

"In a recent communication to the Foreign Secretary (Anthony Eden) the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs (Yosuke Matsuoka), after referring generally to the European war, observed that Japan was fully prepared to act as mediator or to take whatever action was calculated to restore peace and normal conditions not only in greater East Asia but anywhere in the world," Mr. Butler told the House.

"The Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs in subsequent public statements—made, he said, after consulting Germany—has indicated that his words were not to be regarded as an offer of mediation in the European war.

"In any case the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs has been informed by the Prime Minister that in a cause of the kind for which we are fighting—a cause in no way concerned with territory, trade or

Aid Foes Talk Filibuster

Warning Issued Administration Of Night Sessions Tried

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—(AP)—Fresh talk of a filibuster circulated in capital corridors today as two more senators—James E. Murray (Dem.-Montana) and W. Warren Barbour (Rep.-New Jersey)—presented their arguments for passage of the British aid bill without further delay.

One opposition senator, asking not to be quoted by name, told newsmen:

"There will be a filibuster."

Other of the opposition group asserted that no plans for a filibuster are being considered, but Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Montana) declared that if the administration leadership 'tries to push the night sessions we will find means to make our record."

Murray and Barbour, in speeches prepared for senate delivery, declared that enactment of the British aid measure is necessary for security of the United States.

"The bill undertakes to insure us against involvement in the war by empowering the President to give material and effective aid to those countries whose defence is necessary to our defence," Murray declared.

Loss or capture of the British fleet, he declared, would "place upon the unprepared United States the sole and complete responsibility for the defence of the western hemisphere."

Opposing the bill in a broadcast last night, Senator Hiram Johnson (Rep.-California), ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that "this is a question of war or peace."

If the bill is permitted to pass, he said, the people would find themselves in war.

Alf. M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee of 1936, also attacked the legislation last night in an address at Lawrence, Kas. He called it the most dangerous proposal ever brought before Congress.

Claim Hepburn Offers Services

TORONTO, Feb. 25 — (CP), — A Toronto paper said in a newspage story to-day it had learned at Queen's Park that Premier Hepburn had offered his services in any capacity to the British Government.

There has been no indication whether the Premier's offer has been accepted, the paper said.

The paper said it learned that Premier Hepburn cabled Lord Beaverbrook on Sunday after the British Minister of Aircraft Production broadcast from England, urging Canadians to do everything to aid in sending supplies, ships and munitions.

Mr. Hepburn received a reply from Lord Beaverbrook, but the contents of his message or the reply have not been made public. The Premier was not available immediately for comment on the story.

J. P. Bickell, Toronto mining financier and a close friend of Premier Hepburn, has been associated with Lord Beaverbrook in England since shortly after the Canadian-born peer was appointed to his present post.

Saint John Fire Hits Militia

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Feb. 25 (CP) —Most of the old Saint John exhibition buildings, used by the department of national defence, were destroyed today by fire.

First to go was the main building, where the fire started in an orderly room. Then the flames spread to the exhibition restaurant and office building, and to an old wooden drill hall where ordnance equipment was kept. The agricultural building was outside the path of fire.

Firemen and soldiers concentrated on trying to save a new military hut. Military garages near the armoury were expected to be lost.

Docks Blasted On Pattern Of Coventry

Biggest British Bombs Rock Raid Port For Over Two Hours

LONDON, Feb. 25 —(CP)—The Royal Air Force bombed a German cruiser of the Hipper class at Brest last night, the air ministry announced today.

The bombers attacked the docks "in all directions by many sticks of bombs" despite "very heavy anti-aircraft fire."

The air ministry news service said "it was a very dark night, but there were no clouds over the port and a very heavy load of high explosive bombs fell in an area" where the cruiser was berthed.

"Some of these were among the most powerful bombs used for a target of this kind," the news service said. "In all the raid lasted nearly two hours, beginning at about 8 p.m. This most westerly of French ports and an outpost for German attacks on our Atlantic trade was vigorously defended and our aircraft had to penetrate a fierce barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

"Searchlights on this occasion were particularly intense."

The raid was the second on Brest in as many nights and the 41st since the port was taken over by the Germans last summer. It followed by only a few hours Hitler's speech in which he announced plans to step up undersea attacks on British shipping in March and April.

Because of its strategic location as France's western-most Atlantic port, Brest is an important advance base for German submarines, as well as a potential "invasion port."

Last night's attack was said to have been patterned after the Nazi assaults on Coventry and Swansea —a concentrated raid on a single selected point.

Disaster Says UK Of Banting Loss

LONDON, Feb. 25—(CP Sable).—London's morning newspapers paid tribute to Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, killed in the crash of an airplane that was taking him on a mission to Britain, as a man whose death will be an irreplaceable loss to the medical profession.

Two Shot Dead In Beer Room

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 25—(CP).—Gunner James B. McGuffin, 23, member of an active army unit training at Petawawa, was remanded without plea to March 3 on his arraignment in City Court today on two charges of murder, arising from the fatal shooting of two civilians in a hotel beverage room last night.

The remand followed after Crown Attorney Norman Newton explained that the family of the accused is arranging to obtain counsel.

Police continued investigation today of what appeared to be crimes without a motive. McGuffin, they said, was not acquainted with neither Kennedy or Stonehouse, but a brief conversation among them preceded the burst of firing from a small revolver.

There were various versions given of events surrounding the shooting. Police said they found five bullets indicating a revolver had been emptied in the shooting and they said that when McGuffin was taken into custody in a nearby store soon afterwards his revolver was empty.

Police said that Stonehouse, a part-time waiter in the beverage room, and Kennedy, veteran of the first Great War, had asked McGuffin to leave after he allegedly created a disturbance. Another version was that an argument was started when Stoneham noticed a revolver sticking out of McGuffin's pocket.

Three Bodies Are Taken Out 10 Miles

Pilot Slightly Hurt Is Flown To Airport Hospital

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 25—(CP Cable) — Bodies of Sir Frederick Banting and two companions, killed when a military plane in which they were en route to England crashed, were taken to Musgrave Harbor, Nfld., last night, according to information reaching here to-day.

It was understood here that Sir Frederick, co-discoverer of insulin, was alive after the plane crashed, but died shortly afterwards. His two companions, Navigator William Bird of Kidderminster, England, and William Snailham of Bedford, N.S., were killed instantly.

10 Miles From Town

A search plane from Doting Cove located the wreckage of the plane, 10 miles from Musgrave Harbor. Musgrave Harbor is about 20 miles northwest fo Cape Freels and approximately 145 miles by air northwest of here.

Capt. Joseph C. Mackey of Kansas City, pilot of the plane, was also taken to Musgrave Harbor. He was not seriously injured. A Newfoundland plane, a Fox Moth, flew to Musgrave Harbor last night and according to information here, landed him at the Newfoundland airport at Gander Lake.

Arrangements for taking the bodies from Musgrave Harbor back to Canada were not known here but it was presumed they would be picked up by two Royal Canadian Air Force planes which left Moncton, N.B., today.

Information here was that the plane crashed last Thursday night. Other planes located the wreck on Saturday and flew over Musgrave

Budding Bandits

Echo Lake, N.J., Feb. 25 (AP)

POLICE held today two 14-year-old Paterson, N.J. boys and accused them of firing hundreds of shots at 3 officer and a number of State Troopers during a five-hour "siege" of a summer bungalow before they were dislodged by tear gas.

The shooting began when Capt. John Moeller of the West Milford township police attempted to enter the house in a search for looters.

Because they are minors, no charges were placed against the boys but juvenile authorities will take over the case.

Moeller said he discovered several bungalows had been looted. As he attempted to raise the window of one, a shot was fired.

120,000 Spies Over Europe

No Big Money Now So Many Resort to Blackmail, Burglary

By CHARLES B. FOLTZ
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.— (AP).— Conservative estimates place the number of spies in Europe at something around 120,000. That includes spies in the business for pay, patriotism and play.

Few can make a living at it and have to go in for something on the side such as blackmail or burglary.

Those of the group who are in the business for patriotism's sake especially complain that nobody listens to them—not even the governments for whom they work.

The story goes that the British secret service and military intelligence divisions prepared for the invasion of the low countries and French defeat, even though few of them dreamed it would come to pass, by scattering civilian agents throughout these territories.

I met just one agent who had had been placed in preparation for the invasion. He was and is still in a great city now under German rule. He was a national of the invaded country and had no association with British firms or British people prior to or during the war. Now he risks death to keep London informed of Nazi military preparations.

It is known now that many of those early war flights by planes of all belligerents concerned "flying spies"—perhaps the riskiest game in the spy business.

German spies, some of whom used parachutes despite the danger of night landings, were particularly fond of landing in French Burgundy or the western slopes of the French Jura just west of the Swiss border.

Last April three German noncoms were forced down by engine trouble after their spy had bailed out of the bomber at dawn near

Blockade Really Squeezing

Conquered Nations' Supplies Gone—Jap Leak Main Supply

LONDON, Feb. 25 (AP) — Britain's blockade of Germany is "fully as effective" now as it was before the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries last Spring, economic warfare experts declared today.

Supplies of the occupied nations have been exhausted, said these British informants, and Germany "already is feeling a pinch in oil, cotton, copper, rubber and nickel, despite a major leak through Japan."

An increasing amount of products of small bulk, but high value," these sources said, is passing through Japan from South America and the United States, across the Yellow Sea to Port Arthur and Dairen, and thence by rail through Manchoukuo to the junction with the trans-Siberian railway at Chita.

The leak has been swelled, they declared, by exports of United States manufactures from the Philippines to Japan.

"These, for various reasons, do not come under United States licensing restrictions," the economists said.

Germany, it was indicated, at present is relying almost wholly upon Rumanian oil and gasoline and synthetic substitutes.

The experts said, however, they did not believe any shortage of oil would halt German plans for offensive action against the British Isles this Spring.

"Indeed, that shortage probably will spur them on," said one.

LONDON, Feb. 25—(CP). — Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, told a luncheon gathering of the English-speaking Union today that "the many wrecks around enemy coasts and many half-submerged masts testify to the successes" of the Royal Air Force in laying mines from the air.

In speaking of British attacks, the Minister quoted from a letter which he said had been written by a person living a mile from a German airdrome to a member of the Free French forces.

"You can congratulate your English colleagues," the letter read. "I observed the precision of their bombing. They destroyed 14 air-

No 'National' Regime For Lapointe

Will Divide Dominion Not Unite It Says Cabinet Veteran

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—(CP)—Formation of a national government would divide Canada rather than unite it, Justice Minister Lapointe told the House of Commons last night.

The veteran cabinet minister, who reminded the House he had just completed 37 years in Parliament, delivered what was generally interpreted as the government's answer to renewed suggestions for the formation of an all-party ministry.

In effect, he said such a ministry would be without representation from the Province of Quebec and could not be formed at all without a general election, which was unthinkable at the moment.

Speaking from his place beside Prime Minister Mackenzie King with whom he has been associated as principal spokesman for Quebec Liberals since Mr. King became leader of the Liberal party, Mr. Lapointe said: "The Prime Minister has no mandate to form a national government. Indeed he has a mandate against it."

The province of Quebec was opposed to union government; the mere mention of the name "brings forth painful memories which it is almost a crime to resurrect at this time." Mr. Lapointe said he did not feel he could represent his province in such a ministry, and he did not believe any other man forces.

He also informed the committee that almost all the material heretofore transferred to Britain had been "obsolescent, deteriorated or surplus." He said the transactions had been advantageous in enabling the United States army to order the latest type equipment.

Discussing United States' air strength, Stimson said the strength of the army corps is now approximately 4,000 planes. He said the regular army air corps now has some 3,700 planes and the National Guard about 300. Slightly less than half are tactical planes, bombers and fighters. The remainder were classified as trainers.

A Turkish Government spokesman said: "I can give no statement now."

Mr. Eden and eGn. Dill presumably will fly from Egypt to Palestine, then to Adana, avoiding Syrian territory.

The newspaper Ikdam said Saracoglu's latest statement showed that those who "thought Turkish-British friendship was cooling were greatly mistaken."

"If it is necessary that Turkey help Greece we can, without regard to Bulgaria, because we have a common frontier with Greece," the paper said. "We can also do it by sea, where the British are masters. But we prefer thoughts of peace to these warlike thoughts."

Discussing the position of Russia toward the Turkish-Bulgarian declaration of non-aggression, the newspaper Cumhuriyet said it did not doubt "that there were friendly suggestions to both countries from Russia."

The Balkans are the natural safety zone of Russia, and Russia must be interested in any possible war in them. It also was reported that Russia was advised that Bulgaria's claim of an outlet to the Aegean Sea was not discussed between Turkey and Bulgaria. Russia understands that if there is an actual attack on our boundaries we shall have to fight."

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of letting these conditions become chronic. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store or any druggist, a package of Hem-Roid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hem-Roid is highly recommended, is easy to use, and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk a chronic pile condition when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.—(Advt.)

Stonehouse Shot First.

According to stories told to police McGuffin whipped out the revolver and shot first Stonehouse and then Kennedy. Dr. A. R. Routledge, chief coroner, said the bullet that struck Stonehouse caromed from his left elbow and entered his head, killing him instantly.

Kennedy was shot in the chest and stomach, dying on his way to the hospital.

Police said McGuffin left the beverage room, still holding the revolver in his hand, and went into a store down the street. Detectives, arriving soon afterwards, entered the store and, after allegedly grappling with him for the revolver, arrested him.

McGuffin was said to have been silent and morose after his arrest. Police said he fell asleep within two hours after he was booked at police headquarters and that he was not drunk although he showed signs of previous drinking.

McGuffin, who enlisted soon after the outbreak of war, was home on leave. His mother and two brothers reside in London. Another brother is in the Canadian (Active) Army.

The search party arrived at Musgrave Harbor last night bringing the three bodies and Capt. Mackey.

Mackey received treatment there from District Nurse Parsons for bruises and slight injuries about the head.

Sir Wilfred Wood, Commissioner of Public Utilities, said the bodies would be removed from Musgrave Harbor as soon as weather conditions were favorable. A Newfoundland Government Fox Moth plane probably would be used for this purpose, he said, and it was expected the bodies would be taken to Newfoundland airport and from there to Canada.

No Canadian Probe

OTTAWA, Feb. 25—(CP).—An investigation into the cause of the crash of the military plane which carried Sir Frederick Banting and two others to their death in Newfoundland will be made by British or Newfoundland authorities, Munitions Minister Howe said today.

Defence Minister Ralston also said his department would take no steps to conduct an investigation.

"The plane did not belong to us and crashed outside Canada, so we are not taking any steps to investigate," Mr. Howe said.

Officials here thought Newfoundland authorities would hold an inquest and the British authorities conduct the military investigation.

Official sources said Klavthey understood the ill-fated plane was in communication with the Newfoundland air station late Friday, telling the station the plane which had set out for England was returning to land. It asked for a bearing. The bearing was given and that was the last word received.

Mrs. Mackey arrived here to-day from the United States to meet her husband.

Funeral End of Week.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—(CP).—Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto, said to-day that funeral services for Sir Frederick Banting likely will be held here Thursday or Friday. He said the day would be set definitely after the remains reach here from Newfoundland.

Dr. Cody said the service will be held in Convocation Hall at the University. He said it would probably be a combined military and University ceremony with himself, Dr. Cody delivering the sermon.

Banting Pilot, Stunt Flier Of Charmed Life

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 25.—(AP)—An anxious mother is finding it hard to agree with friends that her stunt pilot son is leading a "charmed life."

Mrs. B. C. Mackey said today the knowledge that her son, Capt. Joseph C. Mackey, alone had survived a plane accident in Newfoundland was a great relief but that she still was greatly concerned.

"I can't believe he escaped without a scratch," she said.

Mrs. Mackey said she learned from her daughter-in-law in Montreal by telephone that Mackey had been rescued and taken to a unidentified airport but that Sir Frederick Banting and two others in the downed plane had been killed.

(No official word has come from Ottawa that Mackey yet has been rescued and it was believed possible Mrs. Mackey misinterpreted advice from her daughter-in-law that her flying son had escaped alive from the crash.)

Mackey's wife, the former Francis Rudd of Miami, Fla., said she did not know her husband's condition.

Friends of the internationally-known stunt pilot expressed confidence, however, that Mackey's luck had held and recalled several of his "close calls."

Some of His Escapes.

One was in 1935 during a flight near Daton when a piece of cowling knocked Mackey unconscious, but he recovered in time to regain control of his ship.

In 1936 at Findlay, O., where he operated an airport for four years, a piece of tubing jammed controls of his stunt plane while in a barrel roll only 200 feet off the ground, but somehow Mackey managed to land.

During the Thompson Trophy race at the 1939 Cleveland Air Races, Mackey was piloting one of speed flier Roscoe Turner's ships when a piston blew out, but he stayed in the race and finished sixth. Turner, who described Mackey as one of the best pilots he has seen, expressed amazement that Mackey escaped a crackup.

Although fond of taking great risks, Mackey's control of his ships was so complete that he is numbered among winners of the Freddie Lund Trophy for precision stunt flying.

He was an accomplished sky writer and turned out a book on the subject.

Born here 33 years ago, Mackey attended Ohio State University two years before becoming a stunt flier in an air circus. After leaving Findlay he was an Army instructor at Kelly Field, San Antonio, and a test pilot at Kansas City before going to Canada last year to ferry bombers to England.

Mackey's last visit with his mother here was February 3 on a hurried trip from Montreal. Mrs. Mackey said her son told her then he had made several successful Atlantic crossings by air.

planes on the ground. The Germans carried away the wrecks of these planes and I was able to count them."

British, Australian and South African airmen operating in Greece and Africa have destroyed more than 1,000 Italian planes, Sir Archibald said.

Noting that the R.A.F. has to fly three times as far to Berlin as the Germans have to cover to get to London, he said that, in spite of winter storms, the R.A.F. has battered Hamm 82 times, Hamburg 62, Cologne 55, Mannheim 35 and Berlin 35.

Describing repeated attacks on the Mediterranean island of Malta, Sir Archibald said that the spirit of the people there was "unquenched" and that British fighters, although severely tested, had driven back and vanquished German and Italian aces alike.

"On three gruelling days in January when a mass German attack was launched on the island, 90 German dive-bombers were destroyed," he said.

"We shall see during the next 12 months whether the same bombs which destroyed German factories and communications will not also shatter the faith of the German people in Adolf Hitler," he added.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Where is the army of the Nile? In the face of a threatening Nazi invasion of the Balkans to bolster a stumbling Italy, this question is of vital importance as the war in the Mediterranean approaches a climax.

Two weeks ago Sir Archibald Wavell's troops captured Bengasi in Libya, ending a triumphant sweep from Matruh in Egypt. The threat to Egypt and the Suez Canal was dissipated.

The following day British units were reported moving west of Bengasi on the road to Tripoli, 450 miles distant across a forbidding desert. But since then no word of the movements of the army of the Nile has been given out. Hints came from Cairo last week that big things may be expected soon about Tripoli, last Italian stronghold in Libya.

In the meantime Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has reached Cairo for conferences with the Middle East Command. German infiltration of Bulgaria, probable prelude to an attack on Greece, has begun. Turkey and Bulgaria have signed a non-aggression pact—boomed by the Nazi propagandists as indicating the Turks will not fight if Germany strikes through Bulgaria.

Thus the whereabouts of the Army of the Nile is extremely important. The announcement that Britain is mining the narrows of the Mediterranean, cutting Tripoli off from home support, possibly indicates Gen. Wavell has decided to move the major part of his force elsewhere. It is not large enough to be split between Africa and the Balkans; an invasion of Italy is hardly likely at present.

Likely destinations are Salonika, key Greek port on the Aegean Sea, and Rhodes and Leros, two of the Italian Dodecanese Islands off the coast of Turkey. For Britain must be tempted strongly not only to aid the Greeks but to defend the entire Eastern Mediterranean-Balkan area, as well as seeking to open up a new front in southeastern Europe to divert Hitler from the main attack on the British Isles. This would force Hitler to fight on two fronts, which he has striven to avoid throughout the war.

A strong British force in the hills surrounding Salonika could offer effective resistance to any Nazi drive on Greece through Bulgaria or Yugoslavia. Seizure of Leros and Rhodes would give Britain excellent bases for offensive action throughout the Eastern Mediterranean and the Balkans.

Inspect Boilers In Old School

Property committee of the Board of Education held a lengthy meeting on Monday and discussed the new heating system for the South Central school and new lighting at the Collegiate.

It was decided to have the boilers now at South Central tested to determine if they would stand up under the new heating system. The boilers are large enough but have been in use for several years at this school, and for 20 years at the Collegiate before being transferred to their present location. When this information has been obtained tenders will be called.

There was a long discussion on the merits of fluorescent lighting in connection with the proposed improvements in lighting at the Collegiate. The final decision was to obtain tentative estimates on equipping two rooms with this type of lighting and when these figures are before the Board, they will give further consideration to the project.

Miscellaneous smaller items were approved and these include, work on an office at South Central school for the school dentist, rebuild part of fence at King Edward, erect partition for doctor's room at King Edward, repair air ducts on the roof of Prince of Wales school, and do some minor painting and insulating at the same school. Cement work will be done at Central, and a hot water tank installed. Ventilators at Queen Mary school are slated for needed repairs. At King George school, a new lawn hose will be purchased, shrubs will be placed at the south side of the lot, and some cement work will be done. At Queen Alexandra school, the window sills will be cemented and necessary repairs will be made to the eave-troughs.

Greeks To Fight Through Albania

ATHENS, Feb. 25 (AP)—Greece is determined to carry on the fight against Mussolini's legions "until the Italians are out of Albania," a government spokesman said today.

(That formal statement was the first hint from Athens on the possible Greek attitude toward reported Nazi pressure to come to a quick truce with Italy or risk German onslaught.)

The statement came as a detailed reply to Mussolini's speech in Rome Sunday representing Greek losses as heavy and Italy's as "a few thousand, mostly wounded."

The spokesman said 20,000 Italians have been captured in nearly four months of fighting in the Italian invasion of Greece and subsequent Greek counter drive into Albania.

"Our losses have not been serious, but rather slight if one takes into consideration the way we've been forced to fight on these mountains."

Medical Wizard on Way To England With New Knowledge

OTTAWA, Feb. 25—(CP).—Royal Canadian Air Force planes sped towards Newfoundland today to pick up Captain Joseph Creighton Mackey and the bodies of Sir Frederick Banting and two other men who died in the crash of a military plane en route to England.

Sir Frederick, key man in army medical science in Canada, was "proceeding to Britain on a mission of high national and scientific importance," Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons late yesterday.

Indirectly responsible for Sir Frederick's death was his insistence to get back to the United Kingdom with new medical knowledge from this side of the Atlantic "and to be there of Germany launches an invasion attempt," Dean C. J. Mackenzie, acting president of the National Research Council, said later.

Only Captain Mackey of Kansas City, pilot of the plane, escaped death in the crash which presumably occurred last Friday, when the machine was last heard from.

Sees 12 Rescued After Torpedoing

(By HAROLD DINGMAN.)

LONDON, Feb. 25 — (BUP). — My introduction to war didn't wait until I reached England.

Instead, I found it in mid-Atlantic when the Norwegian freighter on which I was heading for England rescued twelve men of the thirty-six who had been aboard a sunken freighter.

It was 4:30 o'clock in the morning when our look-out sighted a single lifeboat. Visibility was so poor we nearly ran the craft down. The look-out only saw it bobbing in the white waves of the wake of our ship.

Our ship circled, came alongside, and we threw down a rope ladder.

The men had been adrift in the open boat in icy seas for thirty hours, and looked it. They were suffering from extreme cold and exposure, yet nine of the twelve were able to climb the rope ladder to safety. The other three were almost dead and unable to move.

The chief officer of our ship heroically jumped into the tossing boat and made it fast with three ropes. After that the men were hauled aboard without incident.

Wet clothes were stripped from the exhausted men. They were given rub-downs, wrapped in blankets, and given whiskey and cigarettes. Their recovery was amazing.

They said their ship had been delayed by a boiler-room fire. One night at midnight, with flames belching from the funnel, she was forced to stop for repairs in a heavy sea, thus becoming the easiest of targets for a submarine.

Ex-T.N.O. Head Dies In Lt.-Col Lang

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. Malcolm Lang, chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway from 1934 to 1940, veteran of the first Great War and former member of the Ontario Legislature, died in hospital here last night after an illness of nearly a year. He was 67.

Enlisting as a private in 1915 he received a comission in the 159th Battalion, formed in Northern Ontario, and he went overseas in 1916, serving with the Canadian Forestry Company on his return to Canada he carried the rank of major.

Active in political affairs before going to the war, Lt.-Col. Lang was elected provincial member for Cochrane on his return. He resigned his seat in 1923, unsuccessfully contested the Federal riding of Temiskaming South in 1925 and was elected to that seat in 1926. He was defeated in 1930.

Lt.-Col. Lang commanded the Algonquin Regiment from 1924 to 1928. Surviving are his widow and three daughters. Dan Lang, Toronto lawyer, and A. W. Lang of Timmins are brothers.

Lt.-Col. Lang had been active in many Northern Ontario developments and was interested in numerous mining projects.

In March, 1940, he resigned as chairman of the T. and N.O. Railway, the Ontario-owned system, and said at the time his resignation had been demanded by Premier Mitchell Hepburn. The Premier said Lt.-Col. Lang had been offered the post of industrial commissioner for the railway.

Lt.-Col. Lang was born at Eagle, Elgin county.

EDWARD JAMES

TWEED, Feb. 25.—(ENS)—Mr. Edward James, an aged resident of Elzevir Township, died suddenly about 9:30 p.m. Saturday. Coroner M. G. Dales of Tweed, was summoned and after an investigation found that the deceased had suffered from a heart attack which had resulted in his death.

Mr. James, who was in his seventy-first year, had gone out of doors at his home about 9 o'clock and was found by his wife in an unconscious condition shortly afterwards. Before medical help could be secured, he passed away. He is survived by his widow and several children.

MRS. EMELINE THORNE

MILLBROOK, Feb. 25.—(ENS)—The death of Mrs. Emeline Thorne, which took place after a year's ill health, on Saturday, at the home of her son, Lieutenant-Colonel A. V. Thorne, in her ninetieth year, removed one of the oldest, best-known, and most highly-respected citizens of Cavan, and one whose long life was a link with pioneer days in the township.

She was born at Morrish in Hope Township over eighty-nine years ago, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Kinsman, early settlers in Hope. She was the last surviving member of a large family.

Seventy-one years ago, in December, 1869, the marriage of Emeline Kinsman and George Thorne took place, the latter predeceasing his wife by nineteen years. A member of the Anglican communion, Mrs. Thorne was faithful in attendance at St. Thomas' church until the last few years, when failing health compelled relinquishment of this lifelong habit.

Devoted to the interests of her home and family and known as a kind and helpful neighbor, Mrs. Thorne leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother three daughters, Mrs. R. A. Henry of Hope township, Mrs. Amos F. Strong of Cavan and Mrs. John Lunn, Millbrook; and eight sons, John H. and William of Omemee; George of Smith township, Robert F. of Reaboro, Joseph, Austin and Arthur V. of Cavan, and Reginald of Ohio, U.S.

Friends and neighbors gathered in large numbers for the funeral, which took place on Monday at 2 p.m., with Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson conducting the service, assisted by Rev. C. R. Spencer of Bowmanville, formerly of the parish of Cavan.

The many beautiful floral tributes were evidence of the affection and esteem in which Mrs. Thorne was held, and the pall bearers were five sons: William J., Robert F., Joseph S. and Arthur V. and one cousin, Robert J. Thorne of Reaboro. Interment was in the family burial plot at St. Paul's cemetery.

Two Ice Cutters Credit Pal For Rescue Role

MONTREAL, Feb. 25 — (CP). — Exhausted by struggles against an icy current, two men told today how a companion rescued them after their truck plunged through the ice-covered St. Lawrence River, bringing death to nine others.

From hospital beds, 19-year-old Benoit Leduc and 23-year-old Marcel Senecal both credited the efforts of Ovila Prevost, one of five men rescued, with saving their lives.

"I was in the water for about 20 minutes before I was able to swim to firm ice," said Leduc, whose feet were frozen. "I didn't have enough strength to lift myself up when Prevost saw me. He pulled me out of the river just as I was about to lose my hold on the ice."

Senecal, whose brother was among those drowned when the truck went through the ice after crossing the river to take the men to their work of chopping ice-blocks, also said Prevost was his rescuer.

Swam 20 minutes

"I was half out of the water after swimming for about 20 minutes," said Senecal, "but didn't have enough strength to lift myself clear. I screamed 'Save me' and Prevost came running up when it seemed I could hold on no longer. Then he left me lying on the ice to save Leduc."

The truck was going along about 500 feet from the shore to their working place near suburban Longueuil when "it seemed as if it was running downhill as the ice sank beneath us and the water rose on both sides."

"The men screamed and cried for help as the truck fell away beneath them," said Senecal. "We were sitting down and we fought to free our selves as it went lower and lower beneath the water. It seemed as if my lungs would burst when I finally reached the surface.

"It was dark like night and I could make out the figures of some of the other men, but I couldn't tell who they were. One man was swimming right near me, I think it might have been my brother. He shouted, 'I'm sinking.' and I went to grab him, but he suddenly disappeared."

Sitting up in their beds, both men were able to joke a little at times—until a friend came in to tell Senecal that his 18-year-old brother was dead. His body shook as he broke into tears.

Wouldn't Run Out

KITCHENER, Ont., Feb. 25 — (CP). — Mrs. W. J. Brown said today she has received cabled notification that her son, 23-year-old Fo. Marvin K. Brown of the Royal Air Force, was killed on Friday "in an aircraft accident" in England.

In a recent letter, Brown had told his mother he turned down a chance to return home to Canada as an instructor because "I can't see running out on them at this time."

Wounded last year in an air engagement during the Battle of France, he was moved three times to different hospitals in France before being moved to England just before France fell.

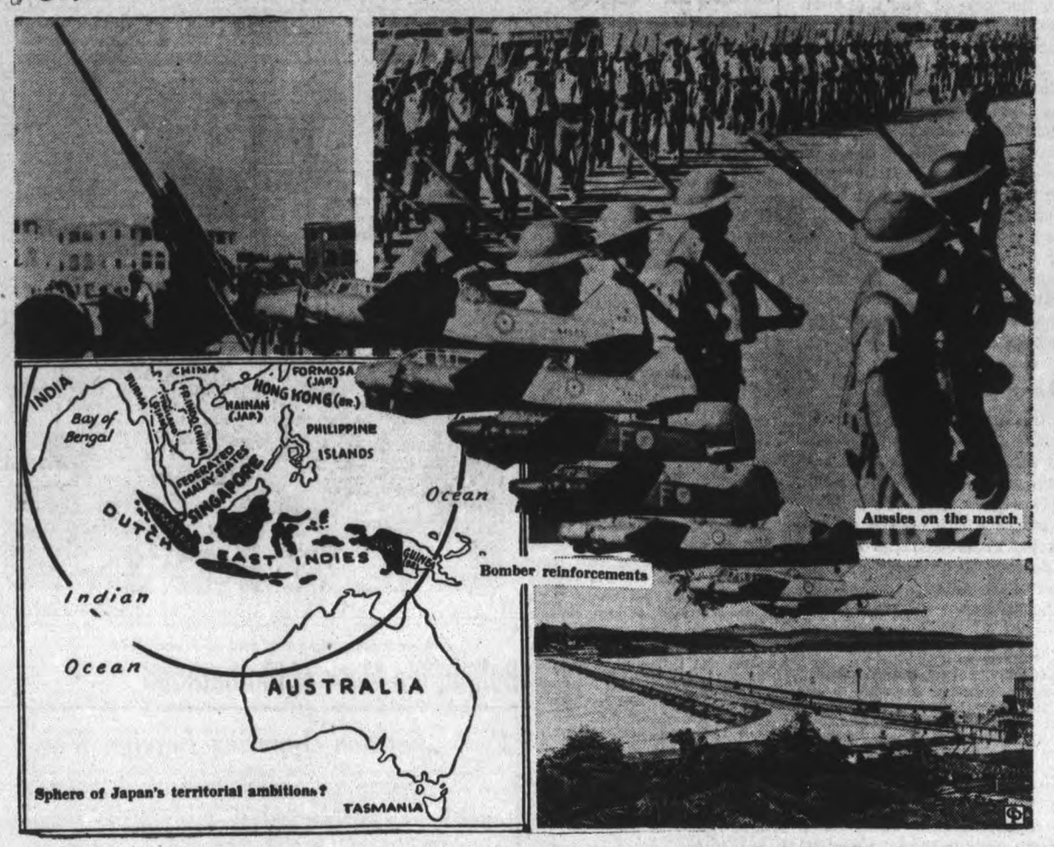
Singapore Gives Britain Firm Grip On Far Eastern Situation



Great Britain's "Gibraltar of the East," the strongly fortified island of Singapore, is now reinforced by several thousand Aussies after a surprise move by Great Britain to shift the balance of power in this area away from Japan, whose threatening gestures precipitated the move. The Aussies arrived with the latest in mechanical equipment, including large-calibre anti-aircraft guns, seen at UPPER LEFT. In addition, it is reported from general headquarters in Singapore that the British flying force has received powerful reinforcements of modern bombers typical of those pictured ABOVE. At the LOWER RIGHT is seen the vital causeway connecting Singapore with Malay Peninsula, now one of the most heavily guarded roads in the world. Portion of map in circle shows sphere of Japanese military influence in the Far East if the British should lose their position at Singapore.

Hitler's Munich Speech Shows Air Blitzkreig Failed Badly

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—(AP).—Hitler, in his speech to the Nazi faithful at Munich yesterday, painted a picture of a spring war-to-the-death against Britain at sea. It would be more impressive, however, if he had painted it before. It was almost exactly the same picture he presented in January, although it had added details as to the scope and timing of the Axis victory drive.

The Munich version tends to heighten expectation that a prolonged campaign of attrition against Britain's lifeline in the Atlantic, probably paralleled by a stepped-up air attack on the British Isles, is to be expected rather than any early attempt at invasion. It is a tacit admission that Nazi air power, Hitler's original major weapon in risking the war, has signally failed to achieve or to promise decisive results.

Blockade Pinches Axis.

Even the overwhelming German air superiority when the Battle of Britain started more than eight months ago has proved inadequate to cope with British sea power. Between the lines of the Hitler speech at Munich and of Mussolini's outgiving from Rome Sunday can be read the admission that the British sea blockade is gripping the Axis allies even tighter on all sea fronts than it did eight months ago. That is certainly true in the Mediterranean.

Hitler's reference to "new type" Nazi submarines to be thrown into the counter-siege of Britain in March and April seems to refer to pocket U-boats. A neutral naval source recently estimated that the Germans might have as many as 600 undersea craft, all told, available in the spring. It has been figured that half of that force, some 300 U-boats, might be kept constantly on sea vigil about the British Isles as the weather improves.

Whether that is correct or not would depend on several limiting factors. The cruising radius of the new-type vessels and the distance of their Continental bases from the British shipping bottlenecks in the Atlantic off the Irish coast would be controlling circumstances.

Plants R.A.F. Targets.

The Nazis probably have been forced to resort to small submarines by the necessity of pre-fabricating them to a large extent in Germany, then shipping them by rail to selected assembly bases on the Norwegian, Low Country and French coasts. It would have been difficult to turn out full-scale U-boats of long-range effectiveness by such methods. British air patrols haunt the Continental coastal regions looking for just such targets as plants for big submarine construction.

There is another aspect of both the Hitler and Mussolini speeches, however, that might be more significant than the new intimation from the Nazi leader that it is upon submarines rather than air power that Germany is relying to match British sea power. It seems clear beyond question that both speeches were intended primarily for home consumption. It is also within the realm of reasonable speculation that it was to bolster Italian morale, badly shaken by defeats in Albania and Africa, that the Axis mates deemed it expedient to recement their bonds of fellowship and unity in public.

Make Graziani Goat.

Hitler scornfully dismissed suggestions of wavering within Germany. Mussolini seemed less sure of the effect in Italy of his admission that the Fascist army in Africa had been smashed by the smaller British force. Both dwelt most of all upon the indissoluble nature of the ties that bind them.

It is unquestionable that Mussolini's figures for the size of the Italian forces in North Africa before Britain struck and the details of its powerful equipment for battle were calculated to meet criticism at home. Those figures flatly contradict the explanation of Italy's first African defeats—an explanation given out in Rome and credited to the Italian supreme commander in Africa, Marshal Graziani.

He then contended it was lack of adequate motorized equipment, air forces and reinforcements which led to disaster. He also said the British forces had achieved great numerical superiority, a statement which impugned the effectiveness of Fascist air and naval forces.

The Mussolini figures on Italian military strength in Africa before the British onslaught started seem a flat challenge to the Graziani explanation of defeat. It appears to be an effort to make Graziani the goat. He might find it more comfortable in a British prison camp than to return to Italy in the face of that.

Britain Tempts Hun Move In The Balkans

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—A pertinent fact about the Battle of Britain is that Britons, after enduring months of siege, are in an offensive, not a defensive, mood.

If there is doubt in Britain of her ability to weather a spring tornado of German attack, whatever its nature or scope, British strategic moves fail to show it. Britain has not only all but blasted Italy out of Africa, but London has deliberately challenged Germany to action rather than words in the Balkans. It has served a stop-look-and-listen notice on Japan, Axis partner in the Far East. The signboard erected at Singapore bristles with Australian bayonets.

Observers at Singapore report that enough battle planes to ensure British air mastery in the Malayan Peninsula area also have been landed there. It was British ability to seize air control from Italy in North Africa that prepared the way for the smashing victories there which have shaken Italian prestige.

The siege of Britain has cost more civilian lives than soldier casualties, but the aggregate has been below British expectations when the fight started. Britain has learned new defensive technique quickly against air attack.

Nazi Casualties 7,000

The most recent British reports credit her with shooting down more than 3,000 German aircraft against 800-odd Royal Air Force ships lost over Britain.

Better than half the personnel in downed R.A.F. ships escaped, many of them to fight again. The London recapitulation said nearly 500 airmen reached the ground safely. It placed Nazi air casualties at more than 7,000. Only 1,000 survived and were taken prisoner.

The air-loss ratio over Britain is important because it furnishes a key to what ratio of fighter and bomber planes the Germans must provide if they are ever to achieve daylight air control over Britain—a necessary factor for invasion.

The ratio would seem to mean a sharp limitation upon the scope of any daylight bombing attack Britain need expect. It probably means continued and perhaps hit-and-run Nazi bombing in the lengthening days ahead. It means more, but shorter, dreadful nights for British citizenry; but far less potential damage to Britain's war industries.

Shipbuilding Speeded

Night bombing still is more or less of a hit-or-miss business, except in most favorable weather with bright moonlight to aid target-spotting.

There have been estimates that the aggregate effect of months of German bombing on the scheduled British war goods output has not exceeded a 5-per-cent slow-up. The fact that these factories have produced much of the equipment for British forces in Africa, in Malaya, in other British Empire outposts and for 4,000,000 or so Britons under arms at home testifies to a relatively low industrial impact of the siege.

Britain and the Empire are straining every nerve to step up ship tonnage output, naval and merchant. There is much to indicate that destroyers, anti-submarine light craft and merchant tonnage are beginning to come off the ways at an accelerating pace. It may be Britain's salvation.

Nazi Conditions With Occupation

LONDON, Feb. 25. — (CP). — What German occupation means.

The Ministry of Economic Warfare provided this summary of conditions that followed the march of the Nazi forces across Europe:

Poland.

Whole agricultural system destroyed by removal of farm workers to Germany and lack of raw materials for farming. All industries taken over by Germans, Polish armament works taken over by German Goering works. A deliberate and ruthless policy by the Germans of destroying all forms of Polish national life. A food situation much worse than in Germany and likely to remain so.

Czecho-Slovakia.

Much the same as in Poland but slightly better. Here, as in Poland, there is a much greater degree of national unity against the Nazis than in the western occupied territories.

Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium.

Extreme shortage of raw materials and foods of all kinds, intensified owing to German looting but also due to the cessation of normal imports. General deterioration of the whole economic system which is being deliberately pushed on by the Germans. These countries supply a great range of foodstuffs for the German armies of occupation.

Unemployed are put on defense works, roads, airdromes. German rationing system introduced everywhere. Price are rising and although they are controlled on the Nazi model, administration is lax and there are black markets everywhere. Standard of living down by 20 or 30 per cent. compared with before the invasion.

France.

Tremendous amount of short-time working in almost every industry. The average worker in occupied France is probably working three or four days a week. Some shopkeepers have benefitted momentarily by large German garrisons. Feeling generally strongly anti-German.

See Duce Talking To Ease Fearful

LONDON, Feb. 25 — (CP Cable). —Mussolini's week-end speech to the Italian people was described here yesterday as "entirely on the defensive" and it appeared to authoritative circles as if the Duce was trying to defend himself against criticism within the country.

His speech also was regarded as an effort to bolster morale by boasting of German prowess to convince the Italians they had nothing to fear, thanks to Italy's powerful partner.

Some observers wondered if the speech containing severe admissions of losses, was timed to precede yesterday's Hitler address, thus giving the Fuehrer a chance to reiterate support of his battered ally.

RATS MEAN MONEY

LONDON—(CP).— A rat-catcher can make $89 a week, a woman told a Clerkenwall magistrate, complaining her husband, who is of the craft, did not give her enough money.

Y Housing Plan In Bombed Areas, Popular

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—So successful is the housing scheme for "bombed out" victims now being conducted by the Y.W.C.A. in London's West End, the centre is being used as a model for other similar schemes and the Y.W.C.A. organizer in charge of the plan is lecturing every week to new groups who plan to establish this type of semi-permanent billeting, according to a report just received by the National Council Y.W.C.A. from the British office.

The "Y.W." community centre is located in Belgravia, and consists of four large houses which were requisitioned by the authorities and turned over to the "Y." Each of the four houses has a large general sitting room and in addition each family has at its disposal one private room wherein to keep private belongings and hold family discussions. Dormitories have been constructed in the large basements and here families sleep in comfort and safety. Communal meals are arranged, a doctor attends twice weekly and regular recreation events are held in the large reception room.

Four Y.W.C.A workers staff the community centre. Household duties are alotted on a definite rota to the women residents. Every effort is made to maintain private family life. Communal feeding is arranged because it is simpler and more economical especially for housewives who have lost all their kitchen utensils in recent air-raids, the report states.

Evacuation of children, mothers and old people to the country is arranged wherever this is to the advantage of the persons concerned and their places at the centre are quickly filled by working people.

A second Y.W.C.A. community planned on the same lines is now undergoing completion at Paddington. At Taunton the Y.W.C.A. opens its clubrooms each morning for women evacuees to sew, mend and iron. These women are sleeping in church halls.

At Newcastle the Y.W.C.A. has opened a rest room beside its central railroad station. Between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. many men, women and children are very thankful for the comfortable deck chairs and light refreshments obtainable while waiting for connections between buses and trains. More than 3,000 women and children have spent the night or part of it in this rest-room within recent weeks; these have included many women visiting sick or wounded soldiers, wives of sailors going to join their husbands for a brief time in port, and members of the women's uniformed services. One evening 250 evacuees from London passed through on their way to relatives in the country, the British report states.

Y.W.C.A.'s all over the world are striving to contribute toward the upkeep of the British Y.W.C.A., which is bearing a vey heavy financial burden in the maintenance of war-time relief work. Contributions to this work can be made through any branch of the Y.W.C.A., or sent direct to the National Council office in Toronto, Miss Louise Gates, national general secretary, points out.

No Dancing

BERLIN, Feb. 25—(AP).—A German propagandist, reminded of reports that dancing again would be forbidden in Germany March 1, said today:—

"Do not take that as an indication that an offensive will begin on that date, although it is customary to abstain from dancing during major operations."

Brazil is increasing its shipments of precious stones to other countries.

Pilots Greeted After Ferrying Bombers

Every day bombers are flown across the Atlantic, the supreme test of their strength and ability. The machines are brought over from America to Britain by Canadian and American pilots. In this picture Air Vice-Marshal R. P. Peck, C.B., O.B.E., assistant chief of air staff, is seen greeting some of the American and Canadian pilots (Americans in civvies) after they have flown aircraft in to an airdrome "somewhere in England."

Red Cross Euchre Attracts 40 Guests

HASTINGS, Feb. 25—(ENS). — A delightful community euchre was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Fowlds, when between 40 and 50 guests from the south side of the bridge were present.

Mrs. Fowlds, who is secretary of the local Red Cross, was responsible for the social event from which $13 was realized for the Red Cross Society. Ten tables of euchre were played and prizes in war savings stamps were won by Mrs. J. Brinklow and Mr. Milton Beavis.

Mrs. Harry Fowlds of Campbellford, delighted everyone with her selections on the violin, after which a dainty luncheon was served. Before the close of the very enjoyable evening all joined heartily in singing "There'll Always Be An England."

Sending Cigarettes.

Arrangements were made to send 300 cigarettes to each of the seventeen Hastings boys overseas as a gift from the local Red Cross.

The Hastings Public and Separate school are presenting a school concert in the Hastings town hall on Friday evening, Feb. 28th and the proceeds will be given to the Red Cross.

Arrangements were also made for the holding of a public bingo in the town hall on Friday, March 7th. A great deal of enthusiasm was shown and many prizes have been donated and it is hoped as many as possible will attend as the society is in need of funds. A shipment for headquarters will be made by the society on Tuesday, Feb. 25th.

Mussolini Talks In Rome

Mussolini made a speech in Rome, the first utterance in a public way since November, and the time-keeper records that it lasted 44 minutes. The strange feature of that address is that Mussolini told part of the truth even if it was something which had been laid bare and wide open to the world weeks ago. His Tenth Army had been smashed by the British and the Fifth Air Corps had received treatment much similar.

Mussolini also revealed that the trouble in Africa came because Wavell had struck too soon. Graziani was all set for another great drive against the British, but he had waited too long before letting it go. Graziani had previously blamed the air force for not keeping him informed regarding troop movements in the desert country, and after that he had also placed blame on another Italian general (killed in action) because he did not retreat quickly enough.

Mussolini read out figures to show the extent of preparations which had been made for the campaign in Africa. His list was:

396,356 soldiers.
1,924 cannon, many of them new.
15,386 machine guns.
11,000,000 rounds of shells.
1,344,287,275 rounds of small arms ammunition.
779 tanks, some of them large.
9,854 trucks.

That makes an army of 410,358 officers and men and Mussolini says "it was dedicated to the defence of Libya." It was dedicated to nothing of the sort. It was sent out to attack and capture Alexandria and secure control of the entrance to the Suez Canal, and it fell back to Libya in an effort to escape the Wavell drive.

"Dedicated to the defence of Libya" may sound well in Rome because Libya has been the most highly-prized possession of Italy, but the one and only reason for the enormous amount of equipment placed at the disposal of Marshal Graziani was a direct attack on the Suez Canal.

How much of that long list of equipment is today in the hands of the British we do not know, but they have helped themselves liberally. How many of those soldiers are prisoners cannot be stated to the exact figure, but the count must be about 125,000. Nor was there anything stated to show the number of killed or wounded.

It must have been bitter for Mussolini to have to stand on his hind legs and tell his people about it. For 17 years he has been shouting and beating upon his chest about his unconquerable legions. Today his one bit of rejoicing comes not from his own army and its strength but because his Axis partner Adolf is strong and can come to his rescue. Meantime the world wonders why he has not done so.

It Was Made In Germany

There have been columns printed about the food situation in Europe. About the hunger of the people and the prospects of them having or not having sufficient to eat. There have been statements coming from Berlin saying that any lack of food is due to the British blockade, and there have been independent writers who claimed that Germany was responsible for having removed the food to her own land.

Dr. Frederick Strauss, economist of the United States Department of Agriculture, has prepared a report on this question, and it will be placed before Congress. Fortunately this document has the earmarks of having been written by one who undersands the gathering of information and its final presentation in a form which is readily understood. Coming from such a source it also carries with it a degree of authority which cannot be shoved readily to one side.

Dr. Strauss, dealing with Norway, says: "German troops occupying Norway consume enough to keep a fourth of the Norwegian population from mainutrition."

That means if the Germans had not seized Norway the people there today would have no food problem at all. It is a German-made shortage and the shortage is actually acute.

Dr. Strauss says Norway, Holland, Belgium, Denmark and France are much in the same position. The trouble is that Germany is adjusting the agricultural economies of these countries to the food needs of Germany, and their industrial machinery and transport systems to the war effort of Germany.

France has been largely stripped of railway cars, and for that reason the means of forwarding food to various sections has broken down. Germany has been "extracting from the conquered area all the food she needs for the maintenance of her war effort." Of course "extracting" is a nicer word than "stealing," and that is exactly what has been going on.

Dr. Strauss notes that the argument has been raised about the large imports which used to enter these now-conquered lands. It is held if they were essential before the war they are needed today. The answer to that is very direct: "But these peace-time imports were needed largely to produce food surpluses—meat, dairy products, eggs—for export." If these imports were now possible the resultant surplus would go to Germany.

In this report we learn that by the middle of 1941 the German supply of fats will be exhausted, with Denmark and Holland unable to supply any more.

The conclusion is that the food situation has been a German-created one, and that is the official finding of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Few Of His Calibre

There appears to be no doubt that Sir Frederick Banting has been lost. For a while there appeared to be some doubt and when there was doubt there was hope, and if there was hope there would be one man for whom it would flicker long and die hard—Sir Frederick Banting. The reason is that he was great; his work was not finished and research workers of his size and capacity do not come often.

There was nothing much to mark him as outstanding when he took up practice in London, Ont., following the war. It is correct to say that he opened his office and few (if any) came to make use of his services. Possibly a good many young doctors and young lawyers have passed through that same experience in the days of their start.

It may have been that experience which turned Banting to the field of research regarding diabetes. There had been others working in the same field, but there had been no success. The medical world at that time accepted it as correct that a young person could not live past the 20-year mark with diabetes, and the older individual had a better chance to keep going a while longer by paying strict attention to diet. Of cure, medical science agreed, there was none, nor is there one today. Insulin is used to combat the disease, but it does not cure it.

When the present war started Sir Frederick Banting was in it. There were problems in connection with the health of men of the air force which needed solution, and to this he turned his talent. He made his way frequently between Canada and England, conferring with leaders there and informing them of what was being done in Canada.

Research men of his standing are not of frequent occurrence. Sir Frederick Banting was at his best when he was in the laboratory with the door locked and where there was no one to bother him. He was most uncomfortable when he was at a dinner in his honor where he would be required to make an address. He was not a speaker and he knew it, but as a man of research, one with the unknown quantity seeking to elude him, he was as one who walks on high ground separated from his fellows. Trace of him may never be found, but in the days of his life he made a tremendous contribution.

An Acre Of Farm Land

The average value of farm land in Canada decreased $1 per acre during 1940. The figure now is $23 per acre, and that marks a total decrease of $17 per acre from the 1921 figures when an acre was down at $40. The average yearly cash wage paid to farm help in 1940 was $275, highest since 1930.

By provinces the value of the average acre of farm land for 1939 and 1940 is reported by the Bureau of Statistics:

Province.	1940	1939
Prince Edward Island	$32	$35
Nova Scotia	28	33
New Brunswick	24	29
Quebec	44	44
Ontario	46	46
Manitoba	16	17
Saskatchewan	15	15
Alberta	16	16
British Columbia	58	60

One could quite readily take it for granted there was something like a fixed value to farm lands. An acre is as large one year as another and it does not move. It looks substantial and therefore should retain its value.

But the figures show that an average acre of farm land in Canada today is worth $17 less than it was in 1921, which year created an all-time high record. On a farm of 100 acres that means a drop in value or price of $1,700.

There is actually nothing very complicated about it because the value of an acre of ground depends entirely on what ons can secure out of that acre. And that in turn brings it back to markets and selling prices. If the produce from an acre is bringing a good return then the value of that acre of land is greater. If the prices are low then the land value runs the same way.

A farm is actually a business and should be so regarded. If a store for instance does a good trade and keeps its accounts collected it can make money, and its selling price would be based on the amount of the profit. If the same store ran into a poor streak and failed to make money then a sale would be put through for a lesser amount.

A farmer with his acres of ground is not in a preferred position. The value of his holdings goes up and down with the price he receives for what he produces from his acres.

Not a Liberal War

As a rule the actual operations of wartime are left in the hands of those who understand what needs to be done and who also have a fair idea of how to do it.

An exception has been made in London, Ont., where the president of the London Liberal Federation has written to Prime Minister King suggesting that a contingent of Canadian troops should be sent to the Far East.

Col. Clifford H. Reason in his letter to Mr. King stated:

"At a special meeting of the London Liberal Federation, of which I have the honor to be president, it was requested I write to you and call your attention to the desirability and the advisability of sending a Canadian Expeditionary Force to the Far East to serve with and augment the Australian and British troops in that area."

And that does not seem to be quite right, or even partly right. The gentlemen in London were gathered together as Liberals, and because they were Liberals. They represented no other section of belief. Also they were dealing with something about which they have little information, and dealing with something which Mr. King would readily admit he did not control. Nor would he desire to do so.

We are not accusing the Liberals of London or their president of anything in particular apart from saying we believe they stepped away out of line in writing a political letter to a Liberal Prime Minister telling him how to run the war.

NOTE AND COMMENT

POETRY

Mussolini made a speech,
I know what 'twas about;
His men marched into Africa,
And then they got chased out.

A small frame house in Kentucky, in which lived mother and father and eight children, was visited by the stork, and four more were added. The stork is a busy bird but he does not seem to possess the necessary brain power. His idea of discretion is just plain awful.

Robert J. Boltz, aged 54, of Philadelphia, defrauded people out of a million dollars, and goes to prison for from 20 to 40 years. There are also 102 other charges against him, but they will know where he is if it is considered necessary to follow them through.

People who burn war stamps or securities may mean well, but they are likely to cause the government a headache at some later date. Money must be provided for the redemption of all these, and burning leaves that out of consideration. Much better to return them to the government and ask that the burning be of an official nature so the accountants will know how much to strike off.

COUSIN EZRA

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When Ezra was a delegate, he travelled at a happy rate, he was a happy gent; he shook hands here and more hands there, and ducked around most everywhere, made friends each place he went.

¶ He had a billet in a home, where every kindly act was shown, and Ezra was impressed; they saw that he had everything, to wait on him they'd pop and spring, they did their level best.

¶ And Ezra's thanks were most profound, I guess they made a pleasant sound, words I can easy guess; he left his business card with them, just like the leading business men, and wrote in his address.

¶ He told them if they came his way, that was the place for them to stay, a welcome waited there; his home was theirs to visit in, 'twould be a happy time for him, his friendship was quite rare.

¶ Well three of them came yesterday, don't know how long they're going to stay, they sent no word ahead; and Ezra's wife was much surprised, indeed she was nigh paralyzed, for they were short a bed.

¶ I heard about the thing last night, when Ezra took a hurried flight, looked like he'd rather creep; could he have lodging for the night, for they were packed in there so tight—there was no place to sleep.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

TODAY is Shrove Tuesday, the last day before the beginning of Lent and a day of merry-making in countries where the Church of Rome is the chief religious influence. It is also a fast-day, and the Monday which precedes it used to be called Collop Monday, as it was the last day before Lent when it was permissable to eat meat. Our ancestors before the Reformation used to cut up and salt their meat about this time to preserve it until after Easter, and on Collop Monday the usual dish was collops, (that is, slices) of bacon, eaten with eggs.

C & B

The special dish for today is pancakes, and it is often known as pancake Tuesday. The word Shrove is derived from Shrive, the old Saxon word meaning confession. It was obligatory to go to confession as a preparation for Lent, and the priests waited in the churches all day for this purpose, and the bells tolled continually. With that odd mixture of devotion and irreverance which was characteristic of the Middle Ages this signal for confession became known as the Pancake Bell, as pancakes and fritters were prepared in all the kitchens. An old poem, written in 1534 tells how every stomach on this day—till it can hold no more,

Is fritter-filled, as well as heart can wish;
And every man and maide doe take their turn,
And tosse their pancakes up for feare they burne;
And all the kitchen doth with laughter sound,
To see the pancakes fall upon the ground.

C & B

The pancake custom is still common in Canada among Catholics and Protestants alike; we continue many old observances in this country which have died out elsewhere. We have an excellent excuse, of course, for we dress our pancakes with maple syrup, and surely there is no equal for that to be found anywhere. The custom of eating pancakes before Lent used to be universal, and in Russia such gorging was gone in for that several deaths used to result every year.

C & B

INNUMERABLE customs are associated with Shrove-Tide. It is, of course, the Mardi Gras, or "Fat Tuesday," once a popular holiday in France, and also in New Orleans on this continent. The allusion in the name is to the fat ox which used to be paraded through the streets on this day. The New Orleans festival is one of the most prolonged now in existance, extending from the New Year to the beginning of Lent. It began so long ago as 1702, when the French soldiers at Fort Louis seized on this opportunity for sport. Nowadays Mardi Gras in New Orleans is celebrated with a magnificent parade of floats, mounted and masked figures in gay attire, and bands. During the day the city is under the rule of "King Rex," and a group of courtiers known as the Mystic Crew of Comus. In the evening the revel is crowned with a masquerade ball.

C & B

In Scotland, as might be expected, fortune-telling and peeping into the future were a part of the Shrove-Tide celebrations. In the Highlands a special dish called "crowdie" was served on this day and a ring was mixed with it in the making. The unmarried man or girl who got the ring was thought to be the next one to marry. "Salt - bannocks," or "dreaming-bannocks" were also distributed. These cakes contained a certain amount of soot, and it was essential that the cook who made them should remain absolutely silent while doing so. If these cakes were placed under the pillow the sleeper was sure to dream of his or her sweetheart. Readers of this column may remember that I spoke of several similar customs in connection was Hallowe'en; a great part of our ancestors 'time appears to have been spent in dreaming of their sweethearts and trying to find out when they would be married.

C & B

It is today, also, that many of us, Catholics and Protestants alike, decide to deny ourselves during the approaching Lenten season. Some instances of self-denial are more amusing to the watchers than chastening to the practitioners. I used to know a lady who inclined to stoutness, and for several years she gave up sugar in her tea during Lent. It seemed to be fixed in her mind that by so doing she was propitiating the wrath of whatever power it was that made her fat. Alas, it would have taken a more Spartan regime than that to regain her lost proportions. This year, of course, we need none of us be in any doubt as to the direction our self-denial may take. The campaign for the sale of War Savings Certificates gives us all an outlet for our inclinations in that direction.

Behind the Mask of Motherhood

...Petition Opposing Foreign War...

Exercising the right granted every American citizen under our Constitution, I respectfully petition the President of the United States and Members of the Senate and House of Representatives, to oppose all steps which may tend to involve this Nation in Europe's or Asia's wars. I urge you to use your influence against every proposal that might ultimately cause American blood to flow on foreign soil.

Name .....

Address .....

Petition blank issued by "Pink Slip" Winrod, the Jayhawk Nazi, and circulated among the organized mothers by Mrs. Elizabeth (Red Network) Dilling.

BACK of the embattled mothers in Washington now making their sentimental plea against the aid-to-Britain bill, H. R. 1776, stands a supporting array of discredited agitators whose names would not strengthen a cause but whose hatred for positive democracy has been shouted at each recurring issue created by rampaging Nazism.

Mother is the name on the crusading banner of opposition. The face is the face of motherhood. But the voice is that of Coughlin, Winrod, Hudson—the America-in-Danger man from Omaha, Mrs. Dilling, the German-American Bund, the Silver Shirts, the Christian Front and the whole familiar roster of backstage influences. Hidden behind the skirts, the pressure boys are turning on the heat, and this present effort to drag in motherhood for such purposes stands as an all-time low.

At the head of this column is reproduced a sample petition form, a copy of the slips being distributed for signatures by the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, the Nazi-admiring evangelist of Wichita, Kan., and Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling of Red Network fame. The minister, "Pink-Slip" Winrod, is a veteran at such synthetic blizzards on Congress, the one variation being that these slips are yellow and orange.

Mrs. Dilling also sends out mimeographed postcards advising that "Bill 1776 gives FDR Nero-like power to supersede all law...." She begs her correspondents to keep on "until our doom is sealed or the bill killed. The Mother's Action Committee will have hdqts. at the Dodge Hotel, Washington, to aid you and everyone who is anxious to save our country from war and dictatorship."

Organizing a mothers' march through her Mothers Crusade To Defeat Bill 1776, Mrs. Dilling turned up in Washington last week with some 500 mothers from the Middle West. And, according to the Chicago Tribune, other mothers' groups which met and decided to act in unison "included the Paul Revere Sentinels, the Women's Neutrality League of New York and the Mothers Crusade."

Father Coughlin's Social Justice publicized the movement with a front-page headline: "American Mothers To March on Washington," and likewise carried a list of rallying points for recruits, with addresses, including: Detroit and Chicago, the Mothers' Crusade; Cleveland, United Mothers of America; Detroit, Mothers of the United States of America; Milwaukee, Mothers Mobilizing Against War.

Charles B. Hudson of Omaha, right-hand man to the wide-eyed General George Van Horn Moseley, in his weekly bulletin last fall advised the precise technique being followed:

"Now visualize what aroused women can do to a Congress that, being men, is not afraid of men. Man fears nothing like he does the militantly aroused female. Cash in on that fact. The National Guard and Army could be used against a Male March on Congress, the controlled press and radio claiming that such men were 'rebels,' 'bolsheviks,' etc., regardless of the truth—but a Mothers' March on Washington would tie the hands of those who could and would frustrate men."

Another of the crusade's supporters is Dr. Homer Herman Maerz, a former admitted smasher of windows in Jewish-owned stores in Chicago, former leader of Silver Shirts, Bund and German-American Alliance. As editor of a small propaganda sheet, the Dispatch, he urged "that as many of our readers and their friends as are able to get behind Hudson so that he may be able to carry out this plan"—the Mothers' March on Washington.

These names, listed here, are some of the chief propagandists, organizers and agitators now exploiting the mothers. The mothers go to Washington and demonstrate before the Senators. They sign petitions. There's no name more compelling than Mother, and the mothers, of course, are entitled to it. But back of the mothers and making use of them, it ought to be known, is a sordid crew which—more than any others — has been spreading the worst elements of Hitlerism in America. Naturally, they are fighting H. R. 1776. This method is unspeakable.

Unpaid

A little man was tearing down the street as fast as he could go, and behind him toiled the landlord of the local inn, in pursuit. At the corner a policeman stood regarding the scene with a smile.

"Why don't you help me catch him?" bellowed the landlord, as he drew alongside the man in blue.

The policeman looked surprised.

"He told me that you were racing him for the price of a drink," he said.

"So I am," shouted the landlord. "He hasn't paid it!"

All Serene

The younger of the two brothers was the brains of the business, and it was a shock to them when he was ordered to present himself for medical examination at the nearest recruiting depot.

James, the elder brother, accompanied George when he went to be tested, and waited anxiously in the next room. Presently George reappeared, his face aglow with excitement.

"Hooray!" he cried. "Our business is saved! I've only got one lung!"

Rather!

Teacher: "Willie, which would you rather have been, Shakespeare or Charlie Chaplin?"

Willie: "Charlie Chaplin. Miss, 'cause he ain't dead!"

Disgraceful

"Was it not disgraceful, the way Smiggs snored in church today?"

"I should think it was. Why, he woke us all up!"

She Remembered

Husband: "Come back for something you've forgotten, as usual?"

Wife (brightly): No, I've come back for something I've remembered."

THIS KING JUST 21

THE King of Egypt is young, flabby, willful. At night, when he cannot sleep, he loves to set off the air-raid alarm, watch his courtiers scurry to the shelter in their night clothes. He eats pounds of chocolates daily. He drives big, sleek, red and green cars—15 Packards and ten Rolls-Royces—and steers them, according to his chauffers, better than anybody in Egypt. He is even surer of himself when running his country's affairs.

This he has done since he was 18. By the time ailing Fuad I died in 1936, the Wafd and other constitutional nationalists had finally wrung a return to parliamentary government from him. Before Farouk had been King two years he took advantage of a Wafd split and nominated his own ministers. Soon afterward, with the support of religious leaders and impoverished fellahin, he made Egyptian policy his own. One day it looks pro-British; another, pro-Italian; but it is always pro-Farouk.

Last week, to celebrate his 21st birthday, handsome, whimful Farouk gave £2,000 "for the purchase of shoes for the barefooted." Loyal Queen Farida, Queen Mother Nazli and the King's four hazel-eyed sisters scraped together £750 for the same good cause The King held a reception, too, but he didn't attend. He had jaundice. —Time.

OSHAWA JUNIORS SMOTHER THE PETERBOROUGH COLTS 12 TO 2

Fights, Penalties Feature Game

Peterborough Colts, playing about their worst game of the season were beaten 12 to 1 at Oshawa last night in the third game of the group play-off series in a contest marked by many penalties and several fights.

As a result of the debacle Oshawa and the Petes will have to play the fourth game here Friday night. The Petes now lead the series 2 games to 1.

Last night's game was just one of those things. The Petes could do little that was right while the Oshawa kids found everything clicking. They ran in six goals without a Colts reply in the first period; there wasn't a goal scored in the second and then in the final twenty minutes Oshawa scored half a dozen times while Joe Rochetta got the only Peterborough goal. An Oshawa report says:

Oshawa Bees came storming back into the contention for O.H.A. Junior B group No. 3 honors here last night by trouncing Peterborough Colts 12 to 1 in the third part of their best-of-five series. Peterborough still has a one-game lead having won the first two games by scores of 7-6 and 9-8.

Tweed Whips Madoc By 5 to 3

TWEED, Feb. 25—(ENS).—Meeting their old rivals from Madoc on local ice for the first time this season Tweed handed them a 5-3 trouncing, reversing the previous game in which Madoc pounced on the Tweedsters in Madoc 4-1.

Shanques opened the scoring for Tweed on a pass from Long only to have Hill tie the count in the last two minutes of the first period.

The local boys went into a two-goal lead in the second frame with Porritt scoring from centre ice, and Long taking a pass from Arber and D. Meraw for the third counter.

Penalties were handed out freely in this period, with Smith, A. Palmateer, Hawthorne, and Murphy going to the box for tripping.

In the opening minutes of play in the third frame, Embury shot from the blue line to tally the second Madoc counter. Porritt tallied for the fourth counter for the Tweedsters with Shanques tallying the final goal on a scramble in front of the Madoc nets for the final counter of the game, final score: Tweed 5, Madoc 2.

The lineups:

Tweed—Goal, McElroy; defence, Porritt, R. Palmateer; centre, Arber; wings, Long, Shanques; subs, L. Meraw, D. Meraw, D. Palmateer.

Giant Hopes Rest On Bill Jurges

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 25—(AP).— The story of the New York Giants is wrapped up inseparably with the story of Shortstop Bill Jurges.

Until the day last Summer when Jurges was struck back of the ear by one of Bucky Walters' fast balls, the Giants had fared unexpectedly well in the National League race. They were up in the running.

From the moment their infield star was carried off the Giants never looked the same. They started skidding and wound up sixth.

Now Jurges is back in training camp here, trying to conquer the effects of the injury that had him in and out of medical clinics most of the winter. The whole camp is watching his every move, realizing that the club's chances of getting out of the second divisions in the coming campaign rest upon Bill's complete recovery.

About all that can be reported at this early stage is that Jurges is working hard and is cheerful about his condition.

If Jurges doesn't make it—if the dizzy spells return and he is forced to hang up his cleats—then the Giants will be a pretty hopeless outfit.

Tomorrow night's senior battle with Kingston at Brock St. Rink should be the hardest-fought argument of the season. After the dogfight the two clubs staged in Kingston last night when the Petes set up an early lead of two goals and then were finally beaten by a last period rally by the Combines who ran in three goals in the final session, the Wednesday night affair at Brock St. Rink looms up as the toughest struggle of the whole campaign. Both clubs will give all they have to win. The Petes have to grab a victory to stay in the running and send the series into five games; on the other hand the Combines can take it all by winning here tomorrow night so that every thing is at stake. That it will be a close, hard tussle is obvious from the first three games played between the two clubs. The Petes took the first game in Kingston 2 to 1; the Combines won the second argument here 6 to 4 after being behind ten minutes before the final bell and last night's tussle was another close battle won by Kingston 4 to 2 after the Petes had led over most of the journey.

* * * * * *

Last night's setback means that the home talent must not only win here Wednesday night to sew up the series but must go back to Kingston Friday and hand the Combines another licking on their own ice. Handicapped by the absence of Jim Ellis, Joe Blewett, Don Crowe and Jack Gardner last night the Petes finally succumbed after a most gallant fight and after throwing a big scare into the ranks of the winners. It was a close, hard struggle and for a long time it looked as if the Peterborough crew were going to pull off an upset at the expense of the cocky Combines. To lose out after such a gallant stand was the toughest kind of luck but the Petes are still in there punching. They are confident they will take the Wednesday night fixture here and tie up the series and then they will go all out Friday night to snatch the fifth game right in Kingston and grab off the group title. The series is not over until the final whistle has sounded in the fifth game, the Petes declare and they are going to climb up on even terms with Kingston here tomorrow night every manjack in the Peterborough camp asserts vigorously. The battle here should be the most exciting tussle of the current season.

* * * * * *

Last night's game at Kingston saw the Petes badly outplay the Combines during the first two periods only to lose out on the strength of two quick Kingston goals early in the last session. The final Combine goal, making it 4 to 2 did not come until the final minute of play when Jack Jopling was serving a penalty. The Petes were handicapped by the fact that they had only three defence men available, as Don Crowe could not make the trip, and Jack Gardner was under the weather. Eddie Starr dressed and borrowed a pair of skates to play but he is just recovering from an attack of the flu and could be used only sparingly so that the visitors without Ellis, Crowe, Gardner and Blewett and with Starr handicapped were working under great disadvantages. Under the circumstances their stand against Kingston last night was most creditable.

Tonight's Important Games

With only a point separating the Leafs and Bruins and both clubs in action tonight there is unusual interest in the Tuesday night N.H.L. bill-of-fare. Boston with one game more to play than the Leafs, have a chance to make their unbeaten record run to twenty-four games, one half the whole schedule, if they can defeat or at the worst secure a tie with the more or less uncertain Rangers. The New Yorkers had a chance a short time ago to prevent the Bruins from breaking their own mark of nineteen straight games without a loss but they muffed the opening and the Boston club has gone three more games since then without lowering its colors to the opposition. Now Rangers have another opportunity and if the law of averages means anything the New Yorkers are just about due to stop the Bruins. Leafs play the battered Americans and should not find Red Dutton's men a very tough proposition—although hockey can be as uncertain as elections and horse races.

Claud Tice of the Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer and Bill Walshe of the Kingston Whig-Standard were here for the Kingston battle Friday and their views are interesting to local fans. Says the Belleville scribe: "The Petes fresh from their victory in Kingston carried a one-goal lead into the third period but the "Combines" started an avalanche and before it stopped they rattled five counters behind a bewildered Harding. Kingston just had too much power last night and are holding a distinct edge right now in the playoffs with the third game on their home ice on Monday night. Walter Gerow, born and bred in this city, was the outstanding player on either team, he scored two goals and played a hard checking game on his wing. Doug White really sunk the Peterborough craft when he soloed through the Petes to beat Harding cleanly. The Kingston team had a slight edge in the first frame, were outplayed in the second and really beat the drums in the third. For Peterborough, Mortimer was the pinch hitter de luxe with a pair of tallies. Peterborough was not disgraced in the loss by any means and it will still be a merry old battle between these two fine clubs for the group honors. Drake Jopling and Don Crowe took part in the game but the Petes missed the back-checking of Blewett and the zip of "Smoke" Gardner, who was playing but who should have "stayed in bed" with an attack of the 'flu. Eddie Starr was also missed as was Jim Ellis. This should not take anything away from Kingston in the brilliant win they scored for Kingston skated as fast as the Petes, their plays were smarter inside the blue line and they backchecked all night."

* * * * * *

Bill Walshe contributes the following: "From a stylish, fancy passing team the Combines changed their game to a two and one man rush system with a flock of forwards keeping up a steady offensive pressure. To make the defeat more stinging Kingston gained the win in the last period when the Petes usually smothered all other rivals. Peterborough, now famed for its last period power, was hit by a ball from its own cannon when the Combines crowded in for scores and won going away after being behind in the closing session. Kingston not only changed its style of play but also its players. Coach Wally Elmer put Mel Williamson, play-making centre ice star, on the defence all during the last period, moved Bob Neilson to centre and with Doug White, the only regular rearguard on the ice in the closing twenty minutes, the reorganized Combines produced a new power with players getting goals who had only been parts of a machine in former games. Peterborough fans were shocked at the result. They did not think it possible for their pet Petes to be bumped off, especially after the win in Kingston two days earlier and the fact that Don Crowe and Drake Jopling had rushed from Toronto to join the team. The two Toronto travellers were given a great cheer when they arrived late for the game but they did not do much although filling in wide open gaps on the Peterborough lineup caused by the absence of Joe Blewett, Ed Starr, Jim Ellis and Ralph Jopling, who are all on the casualty list."

Juniors Battered

Peterborough juniors report one of the roughtest games in years in Oshawa last night. Manager Archie Weir states that the Bees worked in a couple of new players and that they laid on the gad most unmercifully. Referee Jock Bennett handed out a flock of penalties but he could not hold the players under control. Leonard, Rochetta and other Peterborough stars took quite a beating during the night and came home with visible signs of the conflict. Scoring was only incidental to the rough stuff according to the Peterborough squad. The teams meet here again Friday night in the fourth game of the series and the Petes can take the round by beating Oshawa here. They are determined to do that very thing.

Southern Training Camp Briefs

PASADENA, Calif., Feb. 25.—(AP) Manager Jimmy Dykes has everything under control except the weather department. Muddy uniforms were all his Chicago White Sox players had to show for yesterday's first drill in California "mist." Dykes said "we look as though we'll be all right this year."

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Jeff Heath must deliver this year. The Fort-William-born Cleveland Indian outfielder, a disappointment the last two seasons, has been offered a contract which officials say makes 'it possible to earn as much as he has been earning, "but only if he can deliver as we believe him capable of delivering." Heath signed the contract last night.

MIAMI—New York Giants have roped in three more signed contracts—those of First Baseman Babe Young, Outfielder Joe Moore and Buster Maynard, rookie outfielder—leaving five players unsigned. Yesterday practice was limited to batting and fielding drills.

HAVANA, Cuba—Chuck Dressen's "Whites" beat Red Corriden's "Grays" 9-4 yesterday as Brooklyn Dodgers played their first intra-camp game of the training season. The Cubans didn't see much major league baseball as the Corridens made eight errors and gave away seven unearned runs.

Van Lingo Mungo pitched two innings for the Grays in impressive style. He allowed only one solid hit and showed excellent control.

SARASOTA, Fla.—Before opening Boston Red Sox's training season, Manager Joe Cronin outlined to his young pitchers the clubs' dire need for winners and warped that the battle for berths would be a "survival of the fittest."

The only pitcher missing was Oscar Judd, a native of Ingersoll, Ont., who was reported detained at the Canadian border.

TAMPA, Fla. — Hurler Johnny Hutchings was a little premature in donning a uniform for Cincinnati Reds. He put it on before agreeing to terms for 1941. Manager Bill McKechnie ordered him into "civvies" and to the sidelines until he was ready to talk turkey.

A few minutes later, Hutchings signed—and returned to the field with other pitchers and catchers for a brief, easy workout.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Manager Billy Southworth is seeing to it that the Cardinals take their pep pills daily. It's his job to pass out the Vitamin B1 tablets furnished by Boss Sam Breadon. The Cards will get three tablets a day for the first 10 days, then two a day thereafter. Breadon is so sold on the idea he's ordered 25,000 more of the pills to send every team in the Cardinal organization.

Swedish Boxer Dies After K.O.

The 22-year-old Minneapolis heavyweight was knocked off his feet last night by Lou Thomas of Indianapolis in the seventh round of their schedule 10-rounder here. One hour and seven minutes later the youth was declared dead.

Dr. Paul Schmitt, coroner's physician, said that an autopsy disclosed that death was due to a heart attack and that the boxer suffered from an enlarged heart.

Thomas, who at 202 pounds outweighed his rival by 12½, said that he and Anderson clinched in the seventh round. He explained that immediately thereafter he shot a short right to Anderson's chin, the latter reeling backward and striking his hard on the canvas. He never moved again.

Anderson came to the United States in July, 1939, from his native Stockholm where he had won fame as a rugged battler.

He had won the amateur heavyweight title of Sweden while in the army there, later capturing the professional title. But his ring efforts in this country had met indifferent success.

Remember When—

Spiegel Meets Castilloux Tonight in "Rubber" Tilt

TORONTO, Feb. 25 (CP) — A gimpy-legged little man who never has lost a fight of more than 10 rounds will brace himself on his stiff left leg tonight against the long-punching effectiveness of another tough little man in the third match of a winter lightweight series which is square at one each at present.

The man with the lame leg is Tommy Spiegel of Uniontown, Pa., and his opposition in a 12-round bout will be Dave Castilloux of Montreal, a match that Toronto has liked enough so far this winter to support heavily for two fights, with Spiegel winning the first and Castilloux the second, both by decisions.

Spiegel has had nine winning 12-round and 15-round fights and has shown in each of them an ability to come from behind and get points where they usually count most in the eyes of the judges—during the last few rounds. His particular style of infighting gives him an advantage over any fighter whose defence relaxes as he tires.

Castilloux won the second of the previous bouts by a long-punching method that kept Spiegel from using the technique with which he is most effective. This time the Montreal fighter has told reporters he thinks the fight will end before 10 rounds are over. However, in the two previous fights, neither man showed punching power enough to make a knockout probable in this rubber match.

Quaker Aces Beat The Y Gym By A 34-10 Score

Quaker Aces, currently riding high, wide and handsome over all opposition in the ladies' senior city cage race, added another victory to their growing-string by downing 'Y' Gym 34-10 at the Y.W.C.A. last night.

Aces gained a long stride over 'Y' Gym, their latest victims, and Westclox, with which two teams they are engaged in a dog-fight for top place in the league by last night's victory. They played the fast passing, sharp shooting game again last night, that has carried them to the fore in recent weeks and were never in much danger after the opening minutes. They took a 13-4 lead in the first half, and late in the final period cut loose again to build up their decisive final margin. The losers battled hard all the way but Aces' steady, clever defence plus fast passing and accurate shooting was too much for them and they fell gradually behind. Aces made three of their four tries from the line, while the losers missed their two free tosses. The clever work of the Aces' guards was a highlight in their win with the defence staff setting up most of the scoring plays. M. Duncan, P. Lawless, E. Alexander and E. Kirn starred for them, and R. Ellis, R. Sullivan and D. Ackford were prominent for 'Y' Gym. The teams:

Quaker Aces (34)—J. Fowler 4, M. Duncan 8, E. Alexander 13, D. Weese 4, H. Howden 2, P. Lawless 1, V. Wood, E. Kirn 2.

N.H.L. Fans Cheer For Bruin Win

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

A startling transition has occurred in the public mind with regard to the string of consecutive unbeaten games now in such a state of industrious construction by the National Hockey League's most industrious constructors, the Boston Bruins.

The fever peak was reached about the time some team still had a chance to knock over the Bruins before a new all-time record would be set. During that period, hockey fans would sit in corners and hope fervently that: 1. New York Americans or some similarly lowly contempory would beat Bruins; or 2. Bruins would keep on winning. The record-for-Boston society had no greater membership than its no-record-for-Boston counterpart.

But whatever the fans wanted, they were all serious about it. Now that Boston has gone 23 straight games without a defeat, interest lags. Bruins have won or tied four games more than the previous record unbeaten streak set by Rangers last season. They are within one game of a most unique achievement — 24 consecutive unbeaten games, or half a season's schedule without so much as a rousing scare in the defeat department.

The opposition for Bruins tonight is New York Rangers, who haven't had any spectacular success against Boston this season. But who has?

In the other contest tonight, Toronto at New York against the Americans, the scene will be one familiar to anyone who watched Manitoba junior hockey last season. Three of the players Dutton plans to use against Leafs tonight played in the Manitoba junior south division last season, Bill Benson and Andy Branigan with Winnipeg Monarchs and Bus Wycherley with Brandon Elks. Benson and Branigan were recalled from Springfield yesterday.

Bill Moorhead High Score Of 933

A new season's record for 5-pin bowling on Duffus' Alleys was hung up on February 18 by W. J. "Bill" Moorhead of the Agnew-Surpass team in the Mercantile League. Counting 933 pins for his three-game total, the genial Bill reeled off 296 for a starter, he slipped a little in the second game to 236 but in the third he really got in motion. Ten strikes out of his twelve times up gave him a hefty 392 which is second only to Irvin Hanes 427 single of the year.

The former high three mark was held by "Bud" White when he hit 931 for the City League while only five men all total have bettered the 900 mark to date Jack Platt had 915, Leo Martyn 909 and George Walton 903.

Coca-Cola winners for high singles for the past two weeks are as follows: Miss B. Fitzgerald 319, Jack Barnes 380, Miss M. Timm 296 and W. J. Moorhead 392.

Preparations are on the way for the advent of the six-team Ladies' City League which may commence a short schedule next Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. This loop which should bring together a lot of the best women bowlers in the city will take the place of the ladies' challenge match which was staged each week for the past three months. There is no limit to the number of players each team may have but players cannot be transferred to other teams if they start on one team.

Miss Gerry Payne of the Outboard Marines has five girls ready and Miss Lahring Parsons of the Lucky Strikes will enter a team. Brintons, Westclox and C.G.E. along with one more aggregation yet unnamed should round out a crowd who can really toss the pins around.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25— (AP). — Lefty Gomez was in better physical shape than any of the Yanks who reported to Joe McCarthy at St. Petersburg on Monday....Biggest job confronting any big league manager is Joe McCarthy's—he must re-make an entire ball club.

To-day's guest star.

Dan Daniel, N.Y. World-Telegram: "Everywhere I am asked the same old question....How much is Monte Pearson likely to help the Reds?....The general opinion is that Larry Macphail pulled a boner in not availing himself of the first call on the former Yank."

Pro and con.

Is Joe Louis on the skids or is he the same old Joe Louis?....Herewith we give you the opinions of two of the smartest minds in the sports writing profession:

H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News, says he isn't. He says it is foolish to expect a guy to knock out an opponent in the first two or three minutes, as the public has come to expect of Louis. On the other hand Dick Cullum of the Minneapolis Times has a different slant. He says:

"Great as he is, Joe has and always has had his vulnerable points ....When a man comes along who can make Joe miss and can punch back, he may suddenly find where Joe is not the man he used to be—and suddenly is exactly the word."

Greg Rice, the record-breaking distance runner from South Bend, Ind., says he's three years away frim his peak....The way he's been going lately (he broke two-mile and three-mile world standards the last two weeks) he'll probably wipe off all the distance marks left in the book by then.

KINGSTON GRABS LEAD, WHIPPING THE SENIOR PETES BY 4 TO 2

Combines Rally In Third Slipping In Three

KINGSTON, Feb. 24 (Special)—Coming from behind in a thrill-filled game Monday night at the Jock Hardy Arena, Kingston now leads Peterborough two wins to one in the O.H.A. Senior B eastern group three out of five finals. Repeating their play of the game they won in Peterborough last Friday the Combines put on the pressure in the last period to wipe out a Peterborough lead and win by a 4-2 score. It was the best display by the Combines before a home crowd which was thrilled by the tingling speed of the first ten minutes, depressed by the failure of the Combines to collect goals and then overjoyed when the Blueshirts opened up on an aggressive offensive charge that clicked for winning scores.

Peterborough outplayed Kingston at the start but faded from the racing pace, just as they did when they lost in Peterborough. In all three final games the teams have been almost deadlocked after two periods of play. In the first they were tied and the Petes picked up the winning score, in the second game the Petes were a goal to the good only to have it wiped out by the Combines' reserve and power and the same happened last night, but the game was not definitely decided until the last minute when Peterborough was given its only penalty and the Combines charged for an extra goal.

High Speed Play

The game was a brilliant exhibition of high speed play with the Petes fast breaking rushes, consistent checking and alert play breaking up the Combines famous combination plays. In the latter part of the game Kingston changed its style of play, just as it did in Peterborough, with Mel Williamson going on the defence and Bobby Neilson was the centre ice spark plug that sparkled for the important scores.

While Kingston had a good margin at the finish and seemed to grow stronger, the Petes will always claim they were more outlucked than outplayed when they stampeded around the Kingston cage and were deprived of what seemed sure scores by Buck Burrows' brilliant playing goal. In the second period the Petes peppered 18 shots on Burrows and all were kept out of the cage, while Kingston had 10 shots on goal and scored on one.

Only in the last period did Kingston outshoot Peterborough. In the first period Peterborough drilled 21 shots on Burrows and scored on the eighth and twenty-first, while Kingston failed to score on 14 shots. In the last period Kingston had 13 shots and scored on the second, seventh and thirteenth, while Burrows blocked all of Peterborough's 11 shots. Burrows was one of the outstanding stars in a game of stars, while Ray Harding in the Peterborough pen was also exceptionally good, having little chance on the shots that beat him.

Tied Up Game

Mel Williamson, although a trifle slow for the high speed pace when he patrolled centre ice lane for the Combines got his magic stick working for scoring plays when the Petes slackened their racing pace in the third period. Mel Williamson worked with his little partner, Bobby Neilson for the tying score after a minute of play in the third period while he set up Doug White with a perfect pass for the goal that put Kingston in front. Walt Gerow, Len Lane and George Hood worked a triple pass for the last goal in the last minute when Jack Jopling was serving for charging.

Perhaps the thrill goal of the game for Kingston was the lone score of the second period when Bobby Neilson worked his way behind the Peterborough defence and pulled Harding out of his cage. Neilson was in twice on three previous occasions only to be beaten by Harding, but he did not make any mistake. The goal came after 32 minutes of play with Peterborough in a good position with a two goal lead.

Peterborough got both its goals in the first period. Doug Mortimer netted the first when he drilled an ankle high shot through the Kingston defence and it deflected off Burrows' skate into the cage. The Petes worked a pretty play for their second score when Les Burton tricked the Kingston defence to one side and passed to Art Heal who went in on Burrows unchecked for a well placed shot. The second Peterborough point came in the last ten seconds of the first period and Kingston fans were really worried about their team during the intermission.

Doug Mortimer was again the hero for Peterborough with his sniping. He clicked for the score that beat Kingston in the first game of the final, got two scores against Kingston in the second game and he drilled in the first score last night with his snap shot. Honey Tompkins, with his clever stickhandling that carried the puck deep into the Kingston goal zone, Red Creighton with his consistent checking, Bun Kingdon, Art Heal, Les Burton and Jack Jopling were others prominent in the Peterborough play.

The game was played on a fast sheet of ice that suited the style of both teams and they really turned on the speed, but in the racing play Kingston's strength was the deciding factor. In previous games the Petes have had the extra power in the final periods but in the last two tests it has been Kingston that was travelling the faster at the finish and pressing for scores.

The teams will continue their final fight tomorrow in Peterborough with a Kingston win giving the Combines group honors and the right to advance in the provincial playdowns while a Peterborough victory will tie the score, force a fifth and deciding game in the Kingston arena next Friday night.

Kingston — Goal, Burrows; defence, J. Neilson and C. Williamson; centre, M. Williamson; wings, R. Neilson and Hepburn; subs, Lane, Hood, Smith, White, Radley, Gerow.

Barrie Ties It With The Sound

BARRIE, Feb. 25.—Barrie Colts had to come from behind twice here last night to gain a 7-7 overtime deadlock against Owen Sound in their scheduled O.H.A. Junior B meeting. It was a wild, loosely played contest, with Referee Norman Collings handing out 18 minor penalties.

After leading 3-1 half-way through the first period, Barrie was trailing 6-3 at the end of the second throughf ive straight Owen Sound markers. Barrie scored the only three goals of the third period to tie the score, and after the Sounders went ahead in overtime Borden Wheeler deadlocked matters again. Mexican Cagers Win 8 On Tour

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 25—(AP).—Ten tired University of Mexico athletes, playing a 29-game basketball schedule on a 12,000 mile tour of the United States are on the final leg of their marathon jaunt.

They have won only eight games since they launched their invasion against Mississippi College on January 7, but H. Cardanas Barrios, coach of the Mexicans, said the trip had helped established a better relationship and understanding between the two nations on the campuses visited.

The Mexicans staged a 12-game tour of the west coast a year ago and authorities of the university of 15,000 students, established in 1553, felt that it was so successful from a "good will" standpoint that they granted permission for the squad to spend its entire two months winter vacation period on the road this season.

Marlboros Oust Oshawa In 2-1 Struggle

TORONTO, Feb. 25 — (CP). — Toronto Marlboros stand to-day awaiting an opponent in the final of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, assured of a few days of rest before the exacting championship series begins.

Marlboros reached the final by winning four straight games through quarter-final and semi-final series after losing their first quarter-final game. The march was completed last night with a 2-1 victory over Oshawa on Johnny Inglis' goal 33 seconds from the end of a close-checking game. In the other playoff game of the night, St. Catharines Saints beat Hamilton Dofascos 5-3 at Hamilton to take a 3-2 lead on the best-of-seven semi-final. The sixth game will be played in St. Catharines on Wednesday.

Marlboros started their quick charge through the playoffs with two straight victories over Niagara Falls Brights after Brights had won the first game of a best-of-three quarter-final. Then followed a 3-1 win over Oshawa in Oshawa on Friday, and last night's win here.

The Pay-off Men

Johnny Inglis of Marlboros and Red Reynolds of Saints were the pay-off men in the two games last night, each with two goals. Inglis counted Marlboros' first goal in the first period, but Jerry Cooper tied the score with a goal for Oshawa early in the third. Inglis' game-winning counter was on a play with Frank O'Brien.

Reynolds scored twice in the final period at Hamilton, his first breaking a 3-3 tie in which the teams had finished the second period. Late in the game Hamilton withdrew Goalie Jack Eley and threw six forwards into the game in an attempt to tie the score, but Reynolds fired his second goal into the vacant net to cinch the decision.

Roy Hastie counted two of Saints' first three goals, Paul Mundrick getting the other. Dillon Brady, Bill Woodward and Micky Miocinovich scored for Hamilton.

More On Bren Gun

The Lapointe statement was one of a number of digressions from the subject before the House—estimates for the Department of External Affairs. Other purely domestic topics introduced were the Bren Gun contract, on which Munitions Minister Howe alleged a campaign of misrepresentation was carried on, and centralization of power in Ottawa at the expense of the provinces, against which John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, protested.

Mr. Lapointe told the House that France fell because the people were divided by enemy propaganda and warned against tendencies to divide the Canadian people. He pledged himself to combat such tendencies in the years that were left to him as a member of the House. He said he had told the people of Quebec that offensive statements made in certain quarters did not represent the views of the people of other provinces and urged other members to do the same about certain statements which might be made in Quebec.

"I believe, indeed I hope, that the great struggle through which we are passing, the sacrifices we are all sharing, may have the effect of welding us into an enduring and stable nationhood," he said.

Overseas Defence Chief

Herbert Bruce, Conservative-Toronto Parkdale, urged the Government to reconsider the advisability of appointing an overseas defence minister. Such an official would find a useful place in London and would relieve the Government, particularly the defence ministers, of some of their heavy responsibilities.

Karl Homuth, Conservative-Waterloo South, said the Government's lack of frankness with the House had brought criticism upon it. He warned that from now on the opposition would force the Government to give it the information it wanted, "if we have to stay here until Christmas."

Mr. Homuth complained that the Opposition was not being told what was going on behind the scenes of government.

"Are we simply pawns in this game?" he asked. "Have we no responsible place in this House?"

He protested that when questions were being asked in the House last November and December about the Bren gun contract and production figures, the contract was being entirely revised, but no member of the Government offered to tell the Opposition what was happening. Nothing was known about the new contract until it appeared in a newspaper in January.

A Hardwood Deal

Mr. Homuth said an order for hardwood for planking for submarine chasers being built at Midland, Ont., had been given to a Toronto dealer, who had passed it along to another, a former milk dealer. The result was, he said, that there was yet not enough timber to floor one boat.

In reply, Mr. Howe said the original contract was fair, but it provided for an annual production of only 5,000 Bren guns. The company now was under contract to produce annually 97,500 automatic guns of different types. This production required a different type of contract, on the management fee basis, and the fee was fixed at about three per cent. of the cost of the equipment to be produced.

The Minister said attacks on the contract, made "for political judos," had an adverse effect on the morale of the company's staff.

The day's discussion started with a speech by Conservative House Leader Hanson. He suggested the post of Canadian representative at Washington be raised to an ambassadorship, that an outstanding Canadian, not necessarily a career diplomat, be appointed to it and that an outstanding industrialist be sent to assist him in connection with war supplies.

Mr. Hanson advised Mr. King not to close the door on an Imperial War Cabinet as it might be important that Canada have a voice in deciding the plan of campaign to be followed after the Battle of Britain was won.

While Mr. Hanson questioned the wisdom of sending ministers to the South American countries, M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House Leader, favored that course.

Cultivating Brazil.

Later in the discussion Mr. King said the Government had taken both points of view into consideration in deciding on an exchange of ministers with Argentina and Brazil. He said the Government felt South America would become increasingly important and Canada should not leave representation there to other countries.

Mr. King informed the House the Government had hoped to send Major-Gen. Victor Odlum to Tokyo as Canadian Minister to Japan, before he was appointed to command the Second Division.

The post had not been filled because the services of Gen. Odlum and some others who might have been suitable were required in other spheres, but Canadian interests had not suffered as the Legation was in charge of a competent Charge d'Affaires in D'Arcy McGreer.

Mr. King declined to reveal details of negotiations with the United States on the St. Lawrence Waterway. He refused a request from J. S. Roy (Con. Gaspe) for production of correspondence with the Quebec Government on the subject.

In answer to direct questions he said negotiatons with the Governments of Quebec and Ontario were in progress and the Government intended to settle matters affecting those provinces before making a final agreement withe the United States.

Aiding Canadians in France.

Efforts are being made to assist Canadian nationals in unoccupied France to get out of the country, Prime Minister King told the House.

He said some difficulties were encountered in obtaining exit permits, but the chief difficulty was to get transportation and permission to cross Spain.

United States authorities had been authorized to pay up to $45 per month to assist Canadian citizens in France who were in need.

Approximately 60 individuals or families were receiving assistance in this way.

Canadian nationals in occupied France, along with other British subjects of military age, were interned by the Germans. The Government had been informed about 90 Canadian men who were interned near Paris.

2 Ski Planes

went on this morning at 6.15 a.m. E.D.T.

Only meagre information was available here, and at St. John's. Reports to St. John's said the cracked-up machine did not seem badly damaged from the air. The search plane which found it dropped instructions at a nearby community and it was believed ground parties had left to bring in Captain Mackey and the bodies.

A Newfoundland plane was scheduled to leave Newfoundland Airport today in an attempt to land near the crash scene and give assistance to the lone survivors.

First word that the plane had been found was given to members of the House of Commons by Munitions Minister Howe, but at that time there was no definite word of survivors, although writing in the snow beside the wreckage had been seen.

Not until just before the House rose for dinner at 6 p.m. did Defence Minister Ralston announce that further news had been received. The snow message, written by Capt. Mackey, had disclosed that Sir Frederick and the two others were dead.

Col. Ralston read the House a message from Wing Cmdr. Gordon, in charge of search for the missing plane:—

"The pilot Mackey is alive—the others are dead. Two trappers are at the aircraft. Aircraft dropped more emergency rations to party. Moth ski-plane en route from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Newfoundland airport.

"The Moth ski-plane will proceed to the scene of the crash as soon as possible. Two ski-planes from Ottawa air station are also proceeding to Newfoundland to bring out the pilot and deceased."

Then, on behalf of the Defence Department, Col. Ralston expressed the "deepest regret" at Sir Frederick's death.

"He has been rendering invaluable professional services to Canada," the minister said, "and he has also been serving the country by devoting his outstanding abilities in research—not merely abstract research but research of a practical kind.

"In fact, the trip he was making had been necessitated thereby."

Benefactor of Mankind.

Prime Minister King described Sir Frederick as a "great benefactor to mankind." His discovery of insulin, which brought him the Nobel prize, had brought "new hope to the suffering and the promise of life to many who were doomed to early death before his researches were crowned with success."

Since the war began he had organized a "particularly important branch of medical research," dedicating himself to solution of the new medical problems associated with aviation, and the speed, height, and low temperatures involved in the operation of modern aircraft.

"Already his work has proved of inestimable value," the Prime Minister said.

Opposition Leader Hanson, John Blackmore (N.D. Lethbridge) and Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) expressed tributes in behalf of their parties. Dr. Herbert Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale), associated with Sir Frederick at the University of Toronto, said "generations yet unborn will give their gratitude to such a man."

Dean Mackenzie, close associate of Sir Frederick in his research into wartime medical probelms, said the Toronto scientist was the principal co-ordinator of information gathered throughout the Empire, particularly in connection with aviation problems.

The trip to Britain which brought his death was similar to one he made in 1939 to visit research centres and report on progress made in Canada and how to link it with British developments.

Sir Frederick had sought means to counteract the heavy strains imposed on humans by mechanized warfare.

"We cannot go into details about what he discovered but when the time comes and his contributions can be adequately assessed, it will be clear that no one had done more for our cause," Dean Mackenzie said.

"I have no hesitation in saying Canada could have suffered no greater individual loss."

First Section Of Bridge Dedicated

The first permanent steel section of Rainbow bridge which will span the Niagara River was dedicated by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario's Minister of Highways and chairman of the Niagara Falls Bridge Commission, in a brief ceremony at the base of the 130-foot gorge. Workmen perched on the 65-ton grillage look on as Hon. Mr. McQuesten broke a bottle containing water taken from the Canadian and American shores of the river.

2 Greek Ports Bear Brunt Of Bombings

SALONIKA, Greece, Feb. 25. — (AP). — After nearly four months of Italian bombings, which the Greeks report have destroyed less than one per cent. of this nation's military objectives, the civilian population still stands up to the aerial pounding with the courage if not the nonchalance of British city dwellers.

Actual monetary loss is rarely high, for Greece is not a wealthy country and the houses are largely of clay and stone.

This, in a measure, accounts for the lack of Italian success in the matter of military objectives. There are few industrial sections to be bombed, because Greece is not a manufacturing country. There are no huge oil depots, refineries or munitions factories to serve as targets. War materials are imported and used almost as fast as they arrive.

Greece, with a sea tradition, has many ports, and none has been seriously damaged as yet.

Communication lines ashore are the principal military objectives.

Salonika and Patras have borne the brunt of the raids on cities. In more than 20 raids, 1,100-pound bombs have blasted down large sections of the Salonika business district and have crashed right through inadequate shelters.

TWEED, Feb. 25.—(ENS).—John Wesley Fox died suddenly at his farm in the 1st Concession of Thurlow township shortly after eleven o'clock Monday morning. Mr. Fox was engaged in assisting in loading hay from a stack to a wagon; a sudden jolt of the wagon caused him to lose his balance and he fell to the ground, sustaining injuries to his head and neck which resulted in his death almost immediately.

The sudden passing of John Fox will bring sincere feeling of regret to a large circle of friends.

Mr. Fox, who was in his 67th year, was born at Ivanhoe, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fox. He lived in the Ivanhoe district until twenty years ago, when he took up residence on his present farm.

Surviving to mourn his loss are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Sarah Wood; one daughter, Miss Rachel Fox, at home; Gordon Oliver, at home, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Ellen Jones.

50-Cent Mongrel Hollywood Ace

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25—(AP).—A couple of years old, he was just a nondescript mongrel with a cold nose pressed against a pet shop window.

Now Daisy (and don't let the name fool you, he's really a he) is the champ of Hollywood dogdom, winner for the second straight year of the canine counterpart to the Motion Picture Academy's "Oscar."

Rennie Renfro, a dog trainer, bought Daisy from the pet shop for 50 cents. These days, it costs a studio $750 a week to add Daisy to its payroll, and Renfro has him insured for $25,000.

Daisy walked off with the 1940 award—a bronze fire hydrant—at last night's annual tailwaggers' banquet.

He won the award for his work in "Boom Town."

Mother Not to Blame for the Children's Colds

Despite all the mother can do the kiddies will run out of doors not properly wrapped up; have on too much clothing; get overheated and cool off too suddenly; get their feet wet; kick off the bed clothes, and do a dozen things the mother cannot help.

Half the battle in treating children's colds is to give them something they will like; something they will take without any fuss, and this the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, a remedy used by Canadian mothers, for the past 48 years.

Price 35c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.

Thieves of Liberty

A message from
The Newspaper Publishers Committee
HON. W. A. BUCHANAN, CHAIRMAN

A HUNDRED thousand years ago a man built a bright fire in front of his cave — to keep out other men and animals who would disturb his security.

You, today, are still tending that flame. You do not live in a cave, perhaps, and you feed no actual logs into a literal bonfire. But the dangers to your security, the risks of your freedom are just as real even though their forms may have changed.

If you quit reading your newspaper, you'd soon lose touch with what is happening outside your home. You'd lose your perspective on world events, or local problems. Without it you would sense no dangers from any corrupt practice in business or government or schools or on social fronts. You'd miss the good things, the advances of civilization, too.

Furthermore, if you quit reading newspaper advertisements—which are, of course, only news about the goods and services and values that make your home secure and comfortable—you'd soon lose your sense of value. You'd not know how many dollars and pennies you needed to keep you warm and safe until more dollars came in.

In short, without news—both kinds of news, that of what is happening and that of what good things are in the market place—you'd be unable to exercise the judgment a self-governing citizen must have today.

But suppose your newspapers quit serving you! Suppose they refused to open their pages to storekeeper Smith when he had a bargain for you or refused to let in storekeeper Brown when he met Smith's competition with something newer and better?

Suppose your newspapers gave you no news, only lies and manufactured propaganda, always favourable to the man or the clique in power.

This happened in Italy. And all the Italians became the dupes of Mussolini, who joined Hitler while Hitler privately scoffed at the Italians but publicly praised Mussolini in his controlled German newspapers. They've starved, stood in line, marched to disaster in futile pursuit of conquests, those Italians. They've lost their liberty. And lost what little chance they had to gain the world's respect—all because they didn't know.

It's easy to tell you why your newspapers won't quit serving you, why they will go on keeping you the best informed men and women in the whole world.

You won't let them quit. You are the dictator in this democracy—you, the "ordinary" citizen. When any paper displeases you, fails to live up to what you demand of it, you simply quit reading that paper. Others follow you; soon both Smith and Brown realize they must try another way of telling you about their goods. They quit advertising in that newspaper and it dies; another and better one rises to take its place.

* * *

Newspaper men have a job. They are working for you. You are the boss and they know it. To keep their jobs they must please you. And the vast increase in Canadian newspaper circulation in recent years is evidence enough of how well satisfied you are.

The next time you hand a newsboy a few pennies for your paper, say to him, "Sonny, here's another log for the fire that keeps out the thieves of liberty."

He probably won't understand what you mean but you'll know and he'll have his chance to learn, because you're guarding his freedom also!

MAIN STREET TOPICS

CANARY DISPLAYED.

The canary, cage and stand being raffled in aid of the British War fictims Fund is on display at the Peterborough Pet Shop. Tickets may be bought there or from any of the many workers who have them throughout the city.

ON COMMAND

B.S.M., J. V. Weyer, of the 4th Field Battery, C.S.M. Harold Burrows of C Company of the Prince of Wales Rangers, and Pte. Frank R. Pammett, of Battalion Headquarters, are on command at M.T.C. No. 31, Cornwall, taking two weeks of instruction courses.

NO POLICE COURT.

There was no session of the police court to-day. The only prisoner locked up in the cells was a member of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, who was arrested by local police at the request of the military authorities for being absent without leave. He is being held for a military escort.

FROM DEBERT.

According to information received by the Examiner, a broadcast will be heard from Debert, N.S., at 8.00 p.m. this evening over station CBL. It is said that troops will be interviewed on the air. Many men from Peterborough and district are with the forces stationed there at the present time.

WISE MOTORISTS

The mild weather of the last few days has turned the ruts on city streets into water channels and the water splashing up on cars has caused trouble. At night, when the temperature drops, the water freezes, gumming up brakes and clutches. The wise motorist can save trouble by straddling the ruts, and he will thus get away from the splashing and help to reduce the shoulders of ice.

LENT STARTS WEDNESDAY.

Many people today are giving serious consideration to different plans for abstinence and fasting as the Lenten season draws near. The usual number plan to give up smoking for the 40-day period and this seems to be the most popular resolution. Tomorrow, Ash Wednesday marks the start of Lent and rules to be followed in daily living during that period were explained from the pulpits of Catholic churches on Sunday.

INFORMATION NEEDED

On Saturday The Examiner carried an article dealing with a letter written from England, by Lance-Sgt. Shaw of the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment in England. In the letter, Sgt. Shaw tells of enjoying the news from home. The Examiner wishes to use his picture but more information is needed, and his sister whose name is not known is asked to telephone the City Desk and advise what his initials are and where he lived in this city.

CHOIR MEETING.

The annual meeting of St. John's Church choir was held last Thursday evening. In the absence of the president, Griffin Young, who is now with the R.C.A.F., W. W. Gray presided. As many of the members are absent on active service, it was decided to continue the present slate of officers, with W. W. Gray as acting president. Eighteen men who have served as boy choristers or choirmen are now in the Canadian Active Forces, and in all 78 men from the parish are so serving. At the close of the meeting refreshments provided by the C.W.A. were served.

MUST BE IN GOOD STANDING.

Several members of both the Prince of Wales Rangers and the 4th Field Battery who are in the 21-year-old group to be called for the four-month training period which will begin in March, have received their notices. However, they will not be obliged to answer the call if they are in good standing with their respective units. The ruling handed down states that such men, if they have been serving since before August 15, 1940, the date previously set for the curtailment of enlistment in what was then the Non-Permanent Active Militia, and have been regular attendants since, need not be recruited in the establishment of the training camps.

HALF-HOLIDAY.

From January through to October 31 the Peterborough Doctors are observing Wednesday Afternoon as a Half-Holiday, with three doctors on call. Those on call on Wednesday Afternoon of This Week are: Dr. Agnes Moffat, Dr. R. J. Young, Dr. J. A. Morgan.

Council Cuts Tax Rate Half a Mill

Review Budget In Committee For Two Hours

Peterborough's municipal tax rate for this year was adopted at 32½ mills, a reduction of one half a mill from last year, at a special meeting of the Council Monday night.

Dispensing with its usual procedure of business, the Council, with all the members present except Alderman Gordon, accepted the rate recommendation as it came, in substance, directly from the Finance committee, which had spent more than two hours in final review of the 1941 budget.

Actually, the committee proposed a few salary "adjustments," amounting to $1,240, on Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman Sullivan.

The sum of $1,240 was further reduced by $305 in Alderman Swanston's statement that Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the City Trust Commission, had informed him that the Commission would assume the cost of keeping clean the Market Hall, and specifically the washing of the floor, for which the Property committee had undertaken to buy a machine for that job, costing $305. The net increase to the estimates from that ultimate stage of revision was $935.

In the final deliberation of salaries, which had been "tentatively" mentioned last week, the committee passed over all the heads of departments, applying the "adjustments" to employees who, it was agreed, should not be overlooked.

The Salary Changes.

The immediate effect of the salary revision was as follows: James Burgess, street commissioner, from $1,800 to $2,000; increase $200.

Guy Quartermaine, draftsman in the Board of Works department, from $1,300 to $1,500; increase $200.

R. M. MacPherson, sanitary inspector, from $1,450 to $1,600; increase, $150.

M. R. Sloan, assistant assessor, from $1,500 to $1,550; increase $50.

B. C. Graham, assistant assessor, from $1,300 to $1,400; increase $100.

H. G. Kelsey, technician in the Provincial Laboratory, from $1,300 to $1,400; increase $100.

Robert Jackson, junior technician in the laboratory, from $600 to $720; increase $120.

Wrong Impression.

At the opening of the meeting of the committee Alderman Cotton, chairman, said that a wrong impression had gone abroad among the public from the publication of the "tentative" suggestions which were made a week ago. He said there was nothing settled or determined about a committee meeting, that its proposals could be and often were changed before they were passed by the Council.

In this instance, the chairman said, the committee had under consideration and by application, at its last meeting certain requests for salary increases which involved a survey of the entire list of departmental heads. He said he had emphasized the fact that they were only suggestions, made "tentatively" and with the prospect of revision at a subsequent meeting of the committee. Some citizens had formed the idea that they were actually being adopted and were even likely to affect the tax rate.

Alderman Cotton said he had hoped the Council might be able to reduce the rate this year by nearly two mills, but the Board of Education had reported an increase in their requirements equivalent to 1¼ mills, which they found they could not avoid, and although the City Trust Commission's demand was $20,000 less, there was an adverse difference of $9,000.

"If we take off half a mill this year, I think we are doing very well," Mayor Hamilton said.

"I think so, too, under present conditions," Alderman Cotton remarked.

Alderman Bradburn suggested that another one-quarter of a mill reduction could be made by drawing down the miscellaneous account, leaving it at $4,000, but that margin seemed too slight to most members, as provision for meeting unforeseen expenditures which might have to be met during the year.

Paying For Grader

Prior to the passing of the by-law, striking the rate, it was proposed that the miscellaneous account could be amplified by borrowing $6,000 to buy a new grader for the Board of Works.

"It is a fine thing to buy it outright," Mayor Hamilton said, "but a machine like that is good for ten years, and the payments could be spread over that period."

"A machine that would not last more than five year or less ought to be paid for in cash," Alderman Bradburn commented.

"That kind of grader can be used for ten years," Mayor Hamilton said.

The Council decided to transfer $6,000 from the Board of Work appropriation to the miscellaneous account, and issue debentures for the proposed grader, on Alderman Cotton's motion, seconded by Alderman Curtis.

This action reduces the allowance for the Board of Works from $100,000 to $94,000, and increases the miscellaneous account to $12,000.

Salary Raises At City Hall Are Tossed Out

In season, that is around about this time of the year, and out, which may be any other, summer or fall, the council has been trying to classify the city hall employees and others on the same payroll, set them minimum and maximum salaries with yearly or otherwise periodic increases, thereby avoiding the bother usually connected with the budget when eventually this matter of salaries steps into the spotlight.

It has been going on for years, the last six or seven, probably more than that, this talking about a salary schedule which is designed especially for the secondary employees, not the department heads. It has got more or less attention already this year, but at the last moment the Finance Committee on Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman Roy, appointed a sub-committee composed of Aldermen Cotton, Bradburn, Sullivan and Sands to obtain information from other municipalties comparable in population with Peterborough, in regard to their officials and salaries, and prepare a report for consideration some time when the council has time on its hands.

Fixed By By-law.

Heads of departments are all in Class "A" of that proposed schedule. They are the men whose salaries, fixed by by-law, are subject to change only by resolution, and not by automatic up-jacking as time adds prescribed increment.

As the Finance Committee faced decision Monday night, Alderman Cotton said this schedule question had recurred many times in his experience, but one council after another had failed to bring about any progress and solution. As chairman, Alderman Cotton said he was simply in the position of asking the committee what it wished to do with this question.

"I'm not anxious about seeing any schedule go through," he said. "Anything that is done is of course done by the council as a whole and not by any one member, and it has to be what they want as a whole. We ought to do one thing or the other, either prepare a schedule that everybody agrees to, or let the whole thing go, and leave wage increases to be given by the council when it sees fit."

"If the schedule had been adopted five years ago we would not be in this position tonight. It would be in effect," Alderman Dutton remarked. To Alderman Swanston he explained that the adoption of a schedule did not necessarily require that it should be adhered to rigidly in the matter of annual increases. That phase of it could be indefinitely suspended, depending on circumstances and condition of the times, but the schedule would be still operative.

Not Interfere With Schedule.

"You might experience conditions which would not permit salary changes for even ten years, but that would not interfere with the schedule," Alderman Dutton said.

Alderman Swanston said that as one of the new members he did not like the position of "having city employees come with their hats in their hands asking for increases." He found that it embarrassed him a great deal.

What happens in the council precincts, invoking the salary schedule is briefly something like this. When the budget is being prepared, one or more employees ask for an increase in pay, and then somebody thinks of the schedule, which was drafted five or six years ago, and presumably still serves for consideration or just looking at by aldermen who come and go. Then if one department head happens to be mentioned, the suggestion is heard that "the others will be looking for it, too," and that is the salary schedule matter which obstinately refuses to jell.

Alderman Sullivan said as a new member he felt assured in having as chairman of the committee, Alderman Cotton, dean of the council. This was one of the most difficult years in the history of the British people, and the council had an obligation to perform to the ratepayers, and do what was just and right to everybody. He declared that he was opposed to any general increase of ten or twelve per cent in salaries, but was willing to consider any "adjustments" which he felt should be made in some cases.

Heads Not Suffering

"I don't think any of the heads of our departments are suffering," Alderman Bradburn commented.

Alderman Sullivan suggested that the "schedule" business be referred to a small committee.

"I think it is the responsibility of the whole council," Alderman Roy said, "and we might as well go on with it here."

"From some remarks I have heard of late some people seem to think that the members of this council do

Dies In Military Plane Crash

Board To Set Price Of Milk

Milk producers and distributors failed to arrive at a new price agreement in a conference of nearly three hours on Monday afternoon. Their alternative is to refer their differences to the Ontario Milk Control Board at a session in Toronto for which the producers are to make application.

The meeting was largely attended. Ed. Butler, president of the Producers' Association, was a conciliating chairman, and the atmosphere throughout was friendly, but it did not accomplish anything in harmonizing divergent attitudes.

It transpired that local dairies have separate arrangements with their respective producers in regard to payment for surplus milk, and apparently in each instance the relations are agreeable and satisfactory. However, it is understood that a proposed "quota plan" is involved in new price applications, a point which will be referred to the Milk Control Board.

V. S. Milburn said he had asked the Board to come to Peterborough, but their answer was that they had so many applications on their hands that they would have to hear the Peterborough appeal in Toronto.

Knox C.G.I.T. Contributes $28

Canadian Girls in Training at Knox Church topped the list of donors to the Peterborough British War Victims Fund this morning with a contribution of $28 and the total climbed to $9,450.19 coming ever closer to the $10,000 figure, and this despite the fact that the Fund is less than three months old.

Interest throughout the disrict is growing every day and more and more church organizations are making preparations to hold social affairs which will bring more money and much needed aid to the victims of aerial warfare in the cities of England.

Cobourg And Peterboro Police Will Clash Tonight In Game To Aid War Victims' Fund

With Cobourg and Peterborough police clashing at Brock Street Rink tonight in a game in which the proceeds will go to the British War Victims' Fund, the last report from the rival camps is that both teams are in the pink of condition and raring to go.

That may mean everything or nothing; anyway it is given out as the final before-the-battle bulletin.

The outfits have been feuding off the ice for some days owing to the fact the Cobourg constabulary have made a raid into Peterborough territory and drafted Provincial Constable Jack Rogers of Havelock for their team tonight. Peterborough on the other hand is ranging outside the county boundaries to bring in reinforcements from Lindsay and Omemee.

R.C.M.P. Constable Lockwood was here yesterday from Cobourg and flatly declined to give out any details as to the lineup of the Cobourg outfit. The battle array is to be a complete secret until the invaders take the ice tonight.

The Peterborough starting lineup will be as follows:—Goal, Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure; defence, Provincial Constable McBrien, Lindsay and Chief Baker, Norwood; forwards, Constables McGillen, Sexsmith and Mesley, Peterborough; subs, Constables Hardy and Trennum, Chief Pitts Omemee, Chief Hendren, Lakefield, Constable Reeves and Provincial Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton, Lindsay.

A huge crowd will be in attendance when the battling cops take off at 8.30 o'clock tonight. Hundreds of tickets have been sold for the affair. There will be three door prizes for three lucky customers, an electric clock, donated by the Western Clock Company, half a ton of coal, donated by the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company and a prize furnished by the Canadian Department Stores.

It will be a real night's fun and the best part about it is that it will raise a substantial sum for the British war victims.

Students Set New High In War Savings

Collegiate pupils continued to set an amazing pace in the sale of War Savings Certificates and Stamps today with a report that tops by a big margin any weekly effort since the school campaign was inaugurated.

H. Toole, general chairman of the school committee, reported today that sales for the week ending Monday of this week amounted to $880.00 which tops by $160.00 the record set up last week. This is more than three times the weekly objective. Another feature was disclosed when the sale of War Savings Certificates for cash was made known. This is a comparatively new venture at the school, but was introduced to meet a demand and this week the sale of Certificates alone, above the amount of stamps sold, amounted to $660.00. This particular branch of the school work is assuming big proportions, and each week a report will be given on the sale of War Savings Certificates as well as the sale of the 25 cent stamps.

Westclox Goes Over Top

The Western Clock Company, one of the larger industries in the city, and one with more than 500 employees reported to the War Savings Committee rooms this morning that the employees had signed up 100 per cent to buy War Savings Certificates regularly. And just to add another pleasing touch to the whole picture the report indicates that individual savings are in excess of five per cent of the payroll. The next largest factory to enjoy the honor of being in the campaign hall of fame is the De Laval which also reports 100 per cent coverage.

Total Now at 6,200.

This morning the big thermometer on front of the committee rooms, which is used to indicate progress in the drive to obtain 7,000 regular war savers, had been jumped from 5,000 to 6,000 and at three o'clock this afternoon the red column moved up to the 6,200 mark.

It was explained that the original objective set down by the Government for the City of Peterborough was 4,900, but they pointed out at the same time that as Peterborough was an industrial centre the figure should be higher. Acting on this suggestion the local committee raised the objective to 7,000, and while they realize that this is a high objective representing about 35 per cent of the population, when obtained will be a real credit to the city.

80 Per Cent. Obtained

The drive is now on the home stretch and with 6,200 subscribers already noted it means that 80 per cent of the total has already been obtained. This is a favorable report when compared with that of Toronto, where the morning paper indicates 106,000 subscribers out of a desired figure of 200,000. Incidentally 200,000 is only 25 per cent. of 800,000, so the Queen City is lagging a little both in speed and percentage.

The last 800 pledges are going to be the hardest to get according to campaign leaders, and every worker in the drive is urged to bear down within the next few days to see if it is at all possible to push the drive over the top by Friday of this week. As many reports as possible should be in on Wednesday night so that a complete report may be available by Friday evening.

The women taking part in the city-wide house to house canvass made progress reports through their team captains and ward chairmen last night, and this morning the report given is most encouraging. They turned in 122 bank pledges, 350 honor pledges, and 45 one-payment pledges, many of the latter being for the maximum total available to any one person for a year.

This morning a man walked into the War Savings Committee room and asked what the amount was that a person might buy in a year. He was told a man could pay down $480.00 and this would mature in 7½ years at $800.00.

"How would you like to pay for the Certificates," asked Doug. Hammond.

"Spot cash," was the answer and this came as a surprise to Mr. Hammond, as the man was not togged out like a successful business man, but he is, and he is retired.

Four more hundred per centers were named today when reports came in from Uptown Silk Shoppe, Pattenicks, Capitol Grill and the Bank of Toronto.

Summer Visitor At McCracken's Gets Gilt Cross

The sequel to a rescue story dating back to August, near McCracken's Landing, has been enacted in Toronto, when Gordon Scovell, 14, of the 138th Toronto Troop, was awarded the Gilt Cross for Heroism of the Canadian Boy Scouts' Association. The award was made in conection with the rescue of Stanley Zinston when his canoe overturned and the lad was nearly drowned.

It was in the midst of the regatta season, and six youngsters, some of them summering on the shores of Stoney Lake, and others the sons of natives of Peterborough County, decided to hold their own program. Three canoes were procured, and the six paired off, the Scovell boy and Russell Carveth of Peterborough County, in one canoe, while Zinston and Roy Little, both natives, were in another. The race began after Zinston, who is about 13 years of age, and Little, were given a head start because of their seeming inexperience.

Boat Overturned.

The race progressed as planned, with the Zinston canoe well in the lead, until a point opposite McCarthy's Island, was reached, and here disaster overtook the foremost boat; it overturned, spilling both of its occupants into the water. The Zinston boy could not swim, and Little was not proficient. Scovell and Carveth paddled furiously to the rescue.

Upon reaching the unfortunate lads Scovell plunged into the water, followed by Carveth, who called for help. Scovell tugged the desperate Zinston to the support of the canoe and kept him afloat until help arrived in the form of a motor boat from McCracken's Landing. Meanwhile the Carveth boy aided Little.

The award to Gordon Scovell assures him a place among the immortal with the Scouts in Canada.

The Gilt Cross is a distinction placed with not more than five or six Scouts annually. Circumstances surrounding events leading up to the honor are always fully investigated, and then, on the recommendation of the Provincial Board of Awards of the Boy Scouts' Association, the Dominion Executive authorizes the presentation.

The Scovell boy is the son of an Anglican clergyman, Rev. Godfrey Scovell, rector of the Church of the Resurrection in Toronto. The family summers on Stoney Lake, near McCracken's Landing.

Nerves Are Sentinels of Health

Nerves transmit messages to and from the brain in accordance to the needs of the various bodily tissues. They warn of danger and their warnings when heeded often save us from disease and accidents. The sensations of taste, smell, sight, hearing and feeling are all transmitted with utmost speed. Cranial and spinal nerves work harmoniously together to control our activities. Extraordinary physical and mental efforts are the result of abundant nerve-power.

THE SPINE

has a controlling influence on the supply of nerve energy to all parts of the body. Our spinal manipulative treatments aid in the proper distribution of this energy and help to increase the strength and vitality of weakened tissues.

Brown—Rowland

MILLBROOK, Feb. 25 — (ENS) — St. Andrew's United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding at 2.30 p.m. on Saturday when Anna Agnes, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland, became the bride of Stanford Wesley, elder son of Mr. Wesley Brown, and the late Mrs. Brown; Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., performing the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Estella Hetherington, wearing a wedding gown of white satin, with full skirt and slim bodice, caught at the neckline with rhinestone buttons. Her floor length veil was of embroidered net, with coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of red Bettertime roses, and she wore silver slippers.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Howard Brackenridge, who wore orchid crepe, with full skirt of floor length, long sleeves, rhinestone clips at the neckline, corsage of yellow Briarcliffe roses, and silver slippers. A holo of taffeta in a matching shade was worn on her hair, with orchid silk net falling gracefully from the back.

Miss Ruby Fallis was the bridesmaid, her dress being of turquoise blue taffeta, made in bolero style, on princess lines, with matching halo and veil in similar style to that of the matron of honor. She also wore silver slippers, and carried dark red Briarcliff roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Frederick Brown, and the ushers were Johnston Rowland, brother of the bride, and Newton Brown, the groom's cousin.

Baskets of golden daffodils, interspersed with green, were on tall standards at either side of the chancel, and the guest pews were marked off with bows of white satin ribbon. During the signing of the register, Misses Marjorie and Beatrice McDowell sang, "O Father All Creating."

Over one hundred guests were present for the wedding ceremony, and afterward a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Rowland wearing a becoming dress of moss green crepe, with matching hat. Also assisting with the receiving of the many guests was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. David Johnston, who is in her 93rd year, remarkably well preserved as to health and faculties, and who was present for the church ceremony as well.

The bride's table was lovely in a color scheme of pink and white, carried out in the large white wedding-bell over its centre, from which ruffled pink streamers went to the four corners, the tall pink tapers burning in silver holders, as well as the pink runners on the white damask cloth. The handsome three-storey wedding-cake on the central reflector was a gift to the bride from intimate friends, Councillor H. D. and Mrs. Bigelow.

A buffet luncheon was served, the girl relatives of the bride who assisted including: Misses Ruth and Helen Rowland, of Bethany; Keitha Rowland, Millbrook; Eleanor Bigelow of Peterborough, and Margaret Larmer of Millbrook. Shortly after six p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Brown left by motor for their wedding trip to Toronto and points east; the bride choosing for travelling a becoming dress of rose crepe with matching hat, and topcoat in soldier blue with brown fur trimming, black accessories completing an attractive costume.

Welfare League Has Tea and Community Bridge

A community bridge and tea held Monday afternoon to further war work of the Junior Welfare League was an outstanding success. Mrs. R. H. Parsons, 104 Douro street, had graciously opened her home to the tea guests, Mrs. D. A. MacTavish, vice-president, receiving with her.

In the living room bowls of snapdragon and freesia were charming notes of color, and in the tea room, where Mrs. D. B. Falkner, Mrs. J. A. Dewart, Mrs. W. Blackwell, Mrs. Keith Lech and Mrs. Herbert Bradburn presided in the afternoon, silver candelabra flanked by silver candlesticks holding red, white and blue candles created a strikingly patriotic effect when grouped on a silk British flag. League members assisted in the tea room.

Mrs. Parsons drew for bridge prizes won by Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. S. L. Smoke, Miss Olga Westbye. Bridge hostesses were Mrs. J. Dewart, Mrs. T. Gentles, Mrs. H. Bradburn, Mrs. R. Honey, Mrs. H. Simpson, Mrs. H. Waddell, Mrs. W. J. Gordon.

Many Fine Gifts Received For Overseas Bundles

Dropping in at 397 Water street where clothing is received for shipment overseas, a reporter was impressed with the quality of articles received. Not only were many of the garments absolutely new, but used coats and other warm clothing had been carefully cleaned and repaired before donation was made. From ladies of the Cobourg Road, Hastings, a neatly packed box received contained two pairs of cosy boys' pyjamas, a complete baby's outfit; two girls' skirts; two boys' shirts, a pair of warm bloomers, and three bright little dresses that any girl would love to wear. A sum of $9.60 from Mrs. C. H. Ackerman, which included donations from friends, will be used for purchasing new clothing, and a box of brand new shoes from the general store manager at Keene was a thoughtful gift which is warmly appreciated. A box of beautifully made layettes, a number of new children's stockings and a sweater or two, were articles greeted with pleased ejaculations by ladies of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. in charge of this appeal for evacuee clothing, and were sent by the Star of Bethlehem Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, of which Mrs. Cecil Johnson is Worthy Mistress. New quilts and dresses have been received from the women of Gilmour Memorial Church congregation, and ladies of George Street Church have given valuable aid in making over quilts that needed lining, etc.

Although most of the clothing is in good repair, many articles must be taken home, washed and pressed by busy I.O.D.E. members, who, in some cases, must also sit down with a needle and make tedious repairs—as if the task of collecting, sorting and packing clothing for shipment is not enough. Surely those of us who are eager to send donations in will realize that it would be most unfair to ship garments overseas that have been neither cleaned nor repaired. The least we can do is see that the donation reaches our British brothers and sisters in the same condition in which we would like to receive it had we been in the place of these brave, suffering people fighting for our welfare across the water.

U.S. Women Help To Aid U.K. On Many Fronts

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Always noted for their ingenious ideas, American women, aided by American children, from Los Angeles to New York are turning their attention to piling up comforts for shelter-dwellers, air raid victims and Britain's homeless. Ships filled with clothing and medical supplies are a high mark of their effort.

From Boston British War Relief Society comes the story of an appeal for mats, rugs and small bedside comforts to be used in women's billets of army territorial services. Through the Boston representatives in London, this suggestion came from Queen Elizabeth herself when asked what Boston could do.

"Women are called out of their beds to answer alarms and service calls constantly," said the Queen's message. "These rugs would provide a bit of cheer and comfort for them and cut down the number of colds from sudden chills."

Gotham's Effort

"Young America wants to Help" is a New York organization of children under the direction of Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt. Valentines of the shape of warm baby clothing, overcoats and medical supplies are being bought through their efforts to be shipped abroad to British babies.

Girls in 37 New York public and high schools are sewing for Britain. They have already forwarded more than 2,000 garments through the American Red Cross, the material being supplied this organization.

Garments include dresses, nightgowns, panties and slips. They are made for children from six to eight years old. In one school small girls crocheted 10 woollen afghans which now are in use in London shelters. Another high school made 50, six by four feet in size. A third group had made 350 woollen coat dresses which were sent to England as a Christmas present and more are on the way.

Dover to Dover

Women have started "namesake" funds in many cities and towns. Dover (Hell's Corners), England, has been adopted by Dover, Mass., and thousands of dollars sent to aid the victims of air raids and long-range shelling.

But there are more than 2,000 such "namesakes" in the United States and most of them are busy raising funds. In one city representatives from more than 30 such funds met for lunch and the monies raised were cabled to England at the end of the meal. Among them were represented Ipswich, Newark, Annapaolis, Norfold, Lynn, Greenwich and Cambridge.

"Bundles for Britain," an organization operating from coast to coast, has its name on articles ranging from "eau de cologne" to "victory" stockings. Recently they shipped 15,000 items of clothing, 9,150 knitted garments valued at $40,000. Articles from this group include many comforts for men air raids precaution workers, fire fighters and observers.

The British War Relief Society is selling brooches and clips with the "lion rampant" on it for $1. The pin costs 30 cents and 70 cents goes to the fund.

Other forces are not forgotten. This organization in New York spent $70,000 for a complete mobile hospital unit which now is serving General de Gaulle's forces in Africa.

The "Aid to French Wounded" have forwarded more than $18,000 to Britain, while the Polish Associations of two small cities, Worcester and Chelsea, Mass., alone have sent $12,000 to aid Polish refugees.

No Tablet Diet Is Sufficient

LONDON, Feb. 25 — (CP) — Most of this talk about feeding people by tablet alone is without foundation, R. A. Bacharach said in his presidential address to the Pharmaceutical Society on Nutritional Problems.

"At present there is no short cut to this business of taking enough food in tablets to supply sufficient nutrition," Bacharach said. "It is practically impossible to construct any kind of diet unless on the basis of one pint of liquid milk per person per day."

As an example of an "iron diet" he listed one pint of milk, eight ounces of wholemeal bread, eight ounces of potatoes, four ounces of oatmeal, two ounces of meat or fish, two ounces of carrots, one ounce of vitaminized margarine, one ounce of sugar, and one orange.

Soldier's Hint Is Making Good

OTTAWA, Feb. 25 — (CP) — During the First Great War a bit of a jingle was written by a soldier to a well-meaning if inexpert young knitter. It ran something like this: "Thanks, dear lady, for the socks you knit. I wear one for a helmet and one for a mitt." That gave an idea for emergency work in the present war. Groups of Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire workers and Junior Red Cross units have found that old socks can be turned quite effectively into "helmets" and mitts.

Home and School Association News

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL

Problems confronting the Children's Aid Society as a result of the war, and suggestions as to how these problems may best be overcome in order to "create happier homes and makd of Peterborough a better background for our children" were spoken of by Miss Rachael Young, superintendent of the organization, at a Founder's Day meeting of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association Monday afternoon in the Kindergarten Room.

A candle-lighting ceremony, traditional with the celebration of the founding of Home and School Associations by Mrs. A. C. Courtice, was an interesting feature of the meeting. A white candle representing a child was lit by Joan Lynch, a red candle for a mother was lit by Mrs. W. Constable, and the school principal, Mr. G. S. Mattice, lit the blue candle representing the head of school.

The president, Mrs. S. S. Harrison, opened the meeting by repeating the aims and objects of Home and School Associations, followed by words of welcome to the large gathering of parents and friends.

Mrs. R. Parnell, president of the Home and School Council, was present and spoke briefly, congratulating the members on the fine display of articles donated to the layettes for babies born in the bombed areas of England.

Delightful solos were sung by Mrs. L. Mitchell, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. H. V. Dobson, and Mrs. H. Northrop, with Mrs. S. Shields as accompanist. A humorous reading by Mrs. George Rowe completed an enjoyable program. Tea was served by the social committee at the close of the meeting.

Lone Husbands Enjoy Hostels

LONDON, Feb. 25 — ((CP). — A hotel for lonely husbands, where they can get their socks darned, their suits pressed, and two hot meals a day, has been opened at Hoxton, in London's bombed East-end.

For husbands and young working men whose homes were broken up by the war, the hostel is the first provided by the London Hostels' Association. Mrs. Winston Churchill spoke at the opening.

Amenities include hot showers, steel lockers for each of the 60 men who can be accommodated, reading, writing and games rooms, a radio, and, in addition to the hot meals, sandwiches for the men to take to work. The fee is £1 ($4.45) a week.

Mrs. Churchill said she hoped evacuated wives would feel now that their men were being looked after and would remain in the country.

Soldiers Requests Amazing at Times

LONDON, Feb. 25 (CP)—Canadian servicemen, in hospital because of injury or illness, are receiving personal attention from a small army of volunteer women workers of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

A private on leave, injured in a black-out accident in a town far from his camp and his friends, can be sure of receiving cigarettes, candy, books and other incidentals that help make hospital life more pleasant, providing his name reaches the society. And there are few Canadians in hospital who haven't received this home attention. Red Cross cards have been placed in 372 hospitals in Great Britain where Canadians have been admitted.

One of the busiest Canadians in England is Mrs. Leonard Hancock of Montreal, who is in charge of this service. It applies not only to men in the Canadian forces but to Canadians in the British army, navy and air force. She has a staff of close to 400 Canadian and British women. For many of them the Red Cross is a full time job. Their work extends into many fields.

Records are kept of the prisoners of war and the missing. Requisitions for hospital supplies, comforts, books and games are filled for Canadian military units and hospitals. Convalescents are billetted at country estates and cottages.

"We run a regular grocery store," Mrs. Hancock said. "Cigarettes are foremost in the lists of requests that come in and so far nearly 1,000,000 have been distributed."

Other things Canadians like are delicacies that are typically Canadian. Maple syrup products and corn are the soldier's favorites and they usually can be provided."

"You would be amazed at some of the requests we get," Mrs. Hancock said. "Some were for Polish books while another—and this was filled too—was for a Mormon Bible."

It sometimes takes time to get what the soldier wants, but he rarely is disappointed.

Pupils Display Talent In Excellent Piano Recital

Pupils of Isobel M. Brain, who presented an interesting piano recital Monday night in the Recreation Room of the Y.W.C.A., reflected in their work an excellent grounding made possible through the definite knack possessed by their instructor in understanding and handling younger children. The program was happily chosen with regard to contrast, and the works of classic and romance composers proved well within the scope of the young artists, who gave a finished performance that is not often usual in a recital of junior students.

Proceeds of the program, amounting to $7.00, were in aid of the British War Victims' Fund. Miss Jean Millard, pupil of Miss Caroline Littlefield, in a Scottish tap dance and costume, later in a clever tap dance and wearing a dainty white ballet costume, assisted. The singing of "O Canada," with Miss Ruth Curtis at the piano, opened the recital, which closed with, "There'll Always Be an England" played by Ernest Darling and "God Save the King" played by Margaret Jane Loucks. Miss Jean McTavish, one of the pupils, unable to take part because of illness. Nnmbers were announced by Mrs. Brain.

Numbers included "Jolly Roger" (Eckstein) played by Jane Hall; "Sonatina" (Kohler) Margaret Walker; "The Fiddler" (Diller and Quaile) "Scotch Folk Song," duets played by Ruth Curtis and Mrs. Brain; "Sonatina" (Clementi), Ann Young; "Canadian Folk Song" Margaret Jane Loucks; Boccherini's "Minuet," Ernest Darling; Ecossaises (Schubert), "The Juggler" (Thompson), Elizabeth Blackwell; Kuhlau's "Rondo," Judith Clarke; "Prelude" (Bach) and "Sonatina" (Clementi) Jacqueline Ballantyne; Chopin's "Waltz in G Flat" Bill Allen; "Musical Moments" (Schubert, and Brahms' "Waltz in A Flat" and "Allegro from Sonata in D" (Haydn) Nancy Scotheran; "Fantasia" (Mozart), Ruth Gaskell.

Boys and Girls Should Not Rush Into Marriage. Young Folks Should Be Well Prepared to Meet the Battles That Always Come Later in Life

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl of 17, very much in love with a boy of 19, who wants me to marry him at once. He earns $20 a week. Can we live and be happy on that? His mother is a widow who earns $20 a week, and there is a younger brother My finance has had one year at a junior college and plans on putting himself through college. I, too, had planned on having a college education, but he objects to that, as he says it would put me out of his class. He does not want me to date any other boy or go out of town. Says if I do, I will go out of his life forever. Would it be wise for us to marry secretly now, or wait until we finish college? If I married him now, would I add to his burdens? ANNA.

ANSWER—One of the most pitiful things in the world, Anna, is that so many marriages that would have been gloriously happy are heartbreaking failures because the boy and girl lacked the courage and the wisdom to wait until they were prepared to marry. For it takes a lot of things beside love to make a marriage a success. It takes enough age for a couple to know what qualities they are going to want in their mates, and to be sure that their own characters and tastes are formed. It takes enough money to live in decent comfort, and not be harassed by wondering where the next meal is coming from. It takes adults and not children to meet the problems of marriage.

No girl and boy have these, and for children in their teens to marry is like assuming the burdens that strong men and women can bear with ease, but that crush babes when put upon them Don't try this hazardous experiment.

Education Is Important

You and your sweetheart both want a college education. Put off your marriage until you are both through school. By the end of that time you will know many things you do not know now. You will have met many different people. You will have changed your point of view on a thousand different subjects. And, above all, you will know whether you still want each other or not.

Perhaps you will. Perhaps you won't. But if you find you have lost your allure for each other, how much better to have found it out before marriage than afterwards. And if your love is not strong enough to stand a four-year's test, how could it endure the strain of marriage.

Never Marry Secretly

At any rate, whatever you do, never marry secretly. It always leaves a smear upon the girl who does it, for a sophisticated world never believes in the validity of a belated wedding certificate. Unless a man is willing to marry you openly before the world, do not marry him at all.

Perhaps if you are a wizard of a manager you can live on $20 a week and be happy on a diet of bread and cheese and crackers, but there will be no margin for extras in it and no chance to save up anything against a rainy day. And no one is sure against that.

Suppose you have sickness. Suppose a baby comes. Suppose your sweetheart's mother loses her job. Suppose even your boy friend should lose his job after marriage. What then? Can't you see what miseries you would be called upon to bear, what anxieties to suffer, and how you both would wish that you had waited to marry until you were prepared to meet its responsibilities?

The Problem of Second Marriage

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman of 37 with a little girl 10 years old. After one unhappy marriage and divorce and years of a terrific struggle trying to support my child, I fell in love with a man and six months ago we were married and established a little two-room efficiency apartment. I kept on with my job and put my earnings into supporting the home and paying all of my child's expenses, but in spite of my doing the cooking and housework, in addition to contributing to the upkeep of the home, my husband has grown dissatisfied and sullen and threatens to walk out on us. His excuse is my child, who, he says, is a sassy, fresh brat and that he hates the sight of her.

I grant she does answer back, because she has never known the proper discipline. I have worked since she was a tiny baby and never could be much of a mother or train her as she should have been. I am very unhappy over my state of affairs. I haven't the money to send her away to school. If I send her to her father and his parents back East, they would keep her and I would never see her again.

I hate for my second marriage to be a failure. I don't see how I could take it again and I don't know what to do about my child and am almost crazy with worry. M. R.

ANSWER — Surely no woman ever faces a more heart-breaking problem than the one who has to decide between her child and a second husband, and I pity you from the bottom of my heart and wish that I could tell you some happy way to solve your difficulty. But I know of none, because it is only in fairy stories that men change their natures and from having been cruel stepfathers turn into tender guardians of their stepchildren and real fathers to them.

You cannot count on that miracle taking place, or the child behaving tactfully toward your husband. So that situation will grow worse and your life will become a torment trying to keep the peace between them and shield the child from him. But it is up to you to decide which of the two is more necessary to your happiness.

Inasmuch as you admit that you have never had the time or the opportunity to be a real mother to the child, and give her the discipline she needed, or even make a real home for her, don't you think it would be best for her for you to send her to her grandparents for a few years?

This is the formative period of her life, and if it is spent in the atmosphere in which she is now, with her rebelling against the injustice of her stepfather and quarrelling and fighting with him and defying him and with you dragged into the domestic warfare and with no one to control her, it will warp her nature and make her one of the wild girls who know no law but their own wills and come to no good end.

It will require a great sacrifice on your part but, after all, her good is the paramount consideration.

Criminal Case Thrown Out By Grand Jury

No bill was the decision brought in by the Grand Jury in the only criminal case on the list of the Spring Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario which started in the Court-House Monday under Mr. Justice Chevrier. The case was a charge of dangerous driving under the Criminal Code against Fred Gall of Keene and arose out of an accident on Highway 7 near Downer's Corners on the morning of November 27.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., Crown prosecutor, assisted the Grand Jury in reviewing the evidence available and the Grand Jury returned shortly after five o'clock. T. J. Carley, K.C., had been retained by Mr. Gall.

There are three civil actions on the list, and one, a divorce action, hit a legal snag and is adjourned for the present. The only case which goes on is an action for damages arising out of a motor accident on Highway 7 in which a J. Petrie was killed. His widow is suing B. Strano for $10,000 damages. This case started this morning at 11 o'clock. The third action was laid over for the next sitting of the court.

In his address to the Grand Jury, Mr. Justice Chevrier outlined the benefits that exist for people living under British jurisdiction and sounded a note of warning that these institutions are in grave danger, and that we should be ready to make great sacrifices that they may be preserved.

"How many people realize today what it means that British justice can still be invoked in this world of turmoil? How many people have a word of thanksgiving when they wake in the morning, because the night has not been one of terror; they haven't been awakened by the shriek of bombs, the cries of agony, nor have they been called on to look on desolation?

How Long Will It Stay?

"Today British justice is still with us but how long will it stay. I can recall last June when the valiant deeds of Dunkirk were being enacted. At that time leading lawyers in the court at London, Ontario, said it will be the last time British justice will be invoked.

"Fortunately, by Divine will and the fortitude, courage and strength of will of the people in England, British justice is still being dispensed. It is our fervent prayer that this will continue until the end of the world.

"What does this mean? It means that we have preserved what is dear to all of us, namely, the right to worship as we please, freedom to speak our mind so long as we respect our neighbor and the authority of our land. It means that our wives and daughters will go unmolested.

Must Make Sacrifices.

"It is something worthwhile perpetrating. It is worthwhile making sacrifices that it may live.

"If we do our share in the prosecution of the war, we will assure maintenance of these institutions. Our brothers in England are making sacrifices for they realize the price that must be paid to preserve this heritage. History has never recorded more valorous deeds.

Fortunately we are not put to the same acid test, but there is no reason why we should not bend all our energies, use everything at our disposal, by action and by word in an endeavor to fulfill our part.

"There must be no indication of defeatism nor of despair nor even an attitude of smug complacency. At all times our hands and hearts must be bent in one direction to help those on the little island who are seeing to it that the British flag still flies.

No Bodyguard Needed.

"What does British freedom mean? Is there another country in this entire world where subjects are privileged to the same extent? There are no people who boast of the things we can boast of. We have at the head of this vast empire a man whose hand has held our hand, a man who has spoken to us and who has lost himself in the throng of his subjects without an escort or a bodyguard. He did have an escort—the love, admiration and respect of his subjects. That protected His Majesty the King when he visited us last year. Is there another country can boast of a woman like the Queen? She is a woman like your mother, or young wife. One who accompanies her husband through the terror-stricken districts of London, guarded only by the love and admiration of her loyal subjects. Probably these privileges are too great and we fail to grasp their proportion, and consequently fail to appreciate them but this does not detract from their preciousness.

Maintain British Ideals.

"You are British subjects and you are interested in the survival of British institutions, not so much for its own sake but because it is the last bulwark between civilization and darkness.

"Let us bend our knees in a prayer to Divine Providence that in God's good time with our help the final victory will come to British arms.

"The Grand Jury is part and parcel of the British constitution and it does not worry me if in other parts of the Empire, the Grand Jury has been done away with. It does concern me though whether in having frittered away some of the frills of British justice, the hand unskilled might cut too deeply into the fabric and thus ruin the British constitution.

"Let those whose desire it is to abolish the Grand Jury take care that they do not place an unskilled hand on unwritten law.

Frills Are Necessary.

"I question if it is a good move to dispense with the so-called frills that has graced the administration of British law.

"Democracy is on trial but is that any reason why we should starve it or stab it in the back? It is a mighty good thing to be thrifty, to save and to put money aside for one's older days, but how many actuated by these motives have become misers?

"One thing is uppermost in our minds, and that is if British justice is to survive it must have all the dignity, decorum and frills it now possesses.

"If British justice was administered as by a board of directors, devoid of respect, order and reverence that go with it, it would be misnomer.

"I say to those who try to improve matters, let not that be done at the expense of the respect and reverence that go with the administration of British justice. When that day comes British justice will have disappeared.

"You are a part of society and are selected to see whether in view of the fact that one of its members has been hurt, the party alleged to be responsible should be brought to trial and justice.

"The county buildings have been inspected within the last six months and therefore it will not be necessary to visit these institutions.

"When you return to your homes, ponder deeply on what you have seen, explain it to those around you but always ordain your thoughts with a view to maintaining duly constituted authority."

Sid. J. Black, foreman of the Grand Jury, advised the Judge that they had decided not to make any inspection of the public buildings because of the recent inspection by another Grand Jury, and the men were dismissed at 5.30 Monday night. Members of the petit jury were also dismissed as no other jury cases were going on.

Battledress For Women

Style gives way to comfort, women of the mechanized transport corps find the battledress style of uniform much more comfortable for their work than their previous uniform In this case a member of the corps is actually cranking a car, an operation that many of us thought went by the bye with the birth of the self-starter.

Salary Raises

not pay taxes," Alderman Roy said.

"And the city employees, too," City Treasurer Shaver interjected.

After these preliminaries to the main question, Alderman Ovens spoke words to the effect of: "Let's toss the whole thing out."

Alderman Sands said he believed public opinion was generally satisfied with the budget the council was bring down, but it was clear that people were not in favor of any increases to the heads of civic departments generally.

Alderman Roy said he had heard the criticism that the council was thinking of doing something for the "big fellows," but nothing at all for the "little fellows."

Not Get To First Base

"This is not the time to revise salary schedules," Alderman Ovens interposed. "I don't think you could get to first base with it right now."

Alderman Sullivan said there were several men whom he believed had been passed over in years gone by, and he felt some "adjustment" might be made in their salaries. He felt that the work of City Assessor Henry had not been adequately recognized, and he also said he considered that A. S. Couper, Tax Collector, was doing a fine job, not only in efficiency but also in his very pleasing personality in meeting the public.

"I feel that City Clerk Outram is deserving of some increase," Alderman Roy said, "but if you start with one, what about some of the others, and you are going against the general policy we are talking about."

City Solicitor Huycke gave the council the information that the opinion that Chief Gimblett had never received an increase was erroneous. He had chanced to look back through the bylaws, and noted that the Chief was engaged at $2,000 and had received two increases, although quite a number of years ago.

Alderman Cotton said he agreed that W. J. Henry had given the city the best of service as assessor. 'But, I was talking with him the other day, and he told me he was not looking for anything for himself, but he did feel we should do something for his two assistants, Max Sloan and Bert Graham."

Alderman Ovens said he agreed that some of the department heads should get consideration, and he considered that Chief Gimblett had served the citizens exceptionally well, but if that tended toward going over the whole list, he said it was best to let the whole thing alone.

Mayor Hamilton put in an exceptional plea for James Burgess, Street Commissioner, telling the committee that some time ago when Mr. Burgess had an attractive offer from some company "I asked him to stay with us, because I think he is worth every cent of $2,400 a year, to say nothing of the $2,000 I think he should get." His Worship said he felt obligated to Mr. Burgess and requested the members to approve an increase of $200 a year. His motion on that point was seconded by Alderman Dutton, and carried.

Combine Jobs

Mayor Hamilton also suggested that probably Mr. Couper might be able to look after tax collections outside his office. With improved earnings, he believed that property owners were in a better position to pay their taxes and that there was not the same demand for the special work S. H. Mitchell had been doing. The council might consider giving Mr. Couper $300 car allowance, which was being paid to Mr. Mitchell.

It was agreed that nothing should be donein that direction until both Mr. Couper and Mr. Mitchell had been consulted.

By ten o'clock this evening the finals in both primary and consolation events of the Neill Trophy will be reached. The playoffs, we expect, will be played to-morrow evening.

All the games played were of the real tight class—no big ends, no big scores. Everybody was out to make the best of their chances. As a result many of the games finished up with only one or two points difference.

The semi-finals are being played this evening at 7.30.

In the ladies' section the final of the vice-skips' 'spiel was just about one of the best games played by the ladies this season. It was nip and tuck all down the line and the break came during the tenth end when Mrs. Metcalfe, who was 2 up coming home, had the misfortune to play just a little heavy to raise her opponent's stone in for second shot, thereby causing an extra end, during which the play went all against Mrs. Metcalfe, but she made a real effort with her second stone only to lose out by a fracture of an inch.

Using that old phrase, "It was a hard game to lose, and a good game to win," it was just that. But the ladies, good sports that they are, took it as all in a day's play, and are back again this afternoon for more.

before they finally admitted defeat. Mariboros scored the only goal of the first period when Inglis registered just inside the three-minute mark and there was not further scoring until Cooper tied it up for Oshawa early in the third. They battled along at 1-1 until the last thirty seconds when Inglis scored his second goal of the game to win for the Dukes.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

CHAPTER 1

April Burnett held the telegram gingerly.

It was addressed to Ann Burnett, her sister, and Ann was 500 miles away.

Also away from home were Dad and Mother, not 500 miles, but almost as inaccessible as if they were.

"Looks like I have to do the honors," April said, throwing an appealing glance at Octavia, the brown and genial maid-of-all-work who loomed like a mountain in the doorway.

"Ah's always scared of dem things," Octavia observed. "Ain't no telling what sort of trouble they bring."

Slowly, with that mixture of bravado and heart-sinking with which all such envelopes are opened, April drew forth the message.

"Meet me 7:45 train tonight. Have three day leave. Love. Kent."

Kent was Kent Carter, Ann's sweetheart. April read the message again, this time aloud for the benefit of Octavia. It was Octavia who spoke first. "Miss Ann's sure going to be a heart-broken little thing, what with her sweetheart home from the army for three days and she way off there by herself in New Yawk."

But with the scared feeling gone, April wasn't thinking about her sister being a "heart-broken little thing." April was thinking about April.

"What am I supposed to do?" she demanded and saw that it was already after 6 o'clock with winter darkness thick outside the window.

Kent Carter arriving in about an hour and a half! Kent was a young officer who had been at Fort Dodd, a training camp, for several months, one of the first of the many who had since gone from Pattonsville as America rushed forward its defense plans.

"Yes," and now she was crumbling the paper, "he has a nerve to send a telegram like this at the last minute, expecting me to upset all my plans."

Octavia reminded her. "Seems like he done send it to your little sister and not to you. Prob'ly aint' no call for you to meet him."

Octavia knew, as everyone else did, that while April Burnett had dozens of men clamoring around her, keeping the telephone line busy and filling the house with flowers, the quiet, brown-eyed Ann had only this one shy suitor, Kent.

April considered, one hand fussing with the bow that fastened her quilted housecoat. "Yes, I'll have to go," she said crossly. "Ann would never forgive me and Mother and Dad would raise the roof. 'The idea,' they would say, 'of not sparing a few minutes to meet this young man who is serving his country, when he comes home on leave!'"

Octavia was persistent. "Ah reckon that old aunt of his up on the hill could get down to fetch him."

For a minute, April had a savage wish to go to the telephone and call Kent's aunt. But Kent's aunt, a great aunt she was, lived like a recluse in the rundown Carter estate on the hill.

"No, that's out," April said. "Auntie Carter, from what I've heard about her, wouldn't step a foot from her house, all-American hero or not."

• • •

Octavia was still looking baleful when April ran upstairs to her room. This was going to jam her plans for the evening! She'd have to dress first in street clothes to meet the train and then dash home and dress all over again for the dance at Casa Blanca.

She frowned into the mirror, and then remembering Octavia's brooding, worried look, began to smile. Everyone, even Octavia, always was on guard for Ann and leery of her, April.

The Burnetts lived on Elm street, Pattonsville. Dad was a lawyer and someday, when one of the older members on the bench retired, he'd no doubt be a judge in the county court. Mother was gray-haired and a grand, good scout. That's why she had gone off with Dad to their log cabin upstate for a winter weekend.

The rest of the family was made up of April and Ann, the sisters; Octavia—and never forget Nip, the wire-haired terrier. It was Nip, of course, settling in arm chairs and leaving stray dog hairs around on the pillows and rugs, that added just the right note of shabby, hominess to the Burnett house.

As for April and Ann, well, as the neighbors used to chuckle, if you were blind you couldn't tell them apart.

They had the same way of laughing and their voices when they talked were exactly alike. They were sisterly in size, also, both a trim and tiny five-foot-two and with that smallness of bone and feature which gave them the impression of being petite.

That was where their similarity ended. Ann was the plain one and April, the beauty.

Now leaning closer to the mirror and smoothing lipstick on lips that were already as smooth as flame velvet, April gave an approving glance to her reflection.

Her eyes were blue—and oh, the hidden poetic talent they had aroused in young men who had described them in color words which ranged from the sky to the sea and back again. And the lashes! April would always have a warm spot in her heart for the swain who had said her lashes were like black butterfly wings. That was sweet. She ran an experimental finger over their upcurl and then across her brows, dark and yet not too dark to detract from the eyes.

But if anything could be more beautiful than her eyes, it was her daffodil yellow, curly hair.

It had been the sight of this hair in soft, fuzzy ringlets that had made up her mother's mind to bestow the name of April on her first-born. Born in April, as fair as Easter lilies and with the daffodil thatch, there didn't seem to be any other name that would have suited.

April had lived up to the name, not only as far as loveliness but in every other way. She was capricious, maddeningly uncertain, first all sunshine and then all storm.

It was the storm side of her which was brewing now. Octavia could sense it as she lumbered into the room.

• • •

Octavia walked directly to the picture frame on April's bureau from which Ann's, small, uncertain-featured face looked out.

"Little?" April's voice had a bite. "Why are you always calling her 'little this' and 'little that'? Anyone hearing you talk would think Ann was a 12-year-old midget."

"No, Miss April," Octavia said placatingly. "Ah knows she's 20 come her nex' birthday. But seems like she's such a frail 'un, always delicate-like frum the day she was born."

Octavia should have known. Octavia had been present that day and ever since.

"There's nothing very frail about a gal who can march herself off to New York and battle with singing teachers and agents and auditions to get herself a job," April said. "It's funny thing Kent Carter doesn't know Ann's not at home."

Octavia's eyes became like big brown and white marbels. She was scared. "They had a little fuss, Miss April. Don't you go sayin' nuthing about it. Miss Ann done told me strictly confidentul. Ain't another soul knows."

"Oh!" said April. "Then why I am going to all this trouble? Let him wait at the station or take the next train back."

Octavia was beside herself. "Listen here, Miss April, you listen to your Octavia. Mr. Kent Carter and your sister's in love and this was nuthing more'n a lover's spat that don't mean a thing. See, didn't he say 'love' on that there telegraf he sent?"

"Why, yes, so he did. But what's that got to do—"

"You's going to march yourself to the train and 'splain to him how Miss Ann's away and never let on what Ah done told you about the fuss."

Grudgingly, April had to admit Octavia was right. Kent Carter, lean and dark and serious, meant a great deal to Ann. April, standing as she did as Ann's older sister—April was 21—and being the one who had had all the boy friends and the romance, realized it was up to her to do the sisterly thing.

"Very well," she said, reaching for a stunning blue suede windbreaker to wear with her sweater and skirt. "I'll go and cement the two bleeding hearts with my kind words."

"Never you mind doing any cementing," Octavia cautioned darkly. "You just meet him and fetch him up to his aunt's and then hurry yourself back here on account of them gentlemen friends coming for to take you dancing tonight."

April would have the last word. "Maybe I won't be back at all." She said it baitingly as she ran down the stairs.

But Octavia could never let this stand. "Ober my poor old body you'll be back,' seh said'. Then all maternal, she picked up a soft, plain-tailored camel's hair coat from the closet.

"Here you, Miss April! Wait a minute. That there skirt and bobtail jacket am mighty stylish, but youve' gone forgot it's cold outside. Ah's not going to let you go across town to that ole railroad station in no peacock feathers."

She tossed the coat over the stair bannister. April caught it on the run.

• • •

Ann's coat. April smiled again as she slipped into the sleeves, even patted it a little because it reminded her so much of the "little lamb."

What with the time she had wasted, fussing, fuming and admiring herself in the mirror it was after 7 o'clock. Traffic would be jammed as it always was on Saturday night in downtown Pattonsville.

She slipped behind the wheel of the roadster in which she and Ann shared ownership and started for the station.

Not in any too much time, either. With a mile detour and all the honking and stalling on Capitol street, she just managed to strike the bridge as the first warning whistle of the 7:45 sounded.

Out of her car and the platform, she saw the thunderous locomotive come in. She seemed to be the only one at the station tonight except for the usual hangeroners who sat on baggage trucks chewing and gossiping.

The express was a long one, with pullmans in the rear. April ran her eye down the length of the train and then started running as she saw a vaguely familiar figure being helped off by a porter.

Yes that was Kent Carter. She remembered his figure, rather tall, nice shoulders which were very erect in uniform. Her feet sped faster and then, suddenly, she had reached out for his hands.

"Welcome home, Kent," she cried. "It's wonderful to see you."

He put his bag down with a thud. "Ann—Ann darling," he said. His hands reached out toward her.

April Burnett opened her lips to speak and then closed them. For the first time, in the wintry dimness of the train shed, she saw that Kent work dark glasses and that while he was looking at her, he wasn't seeing her at all.

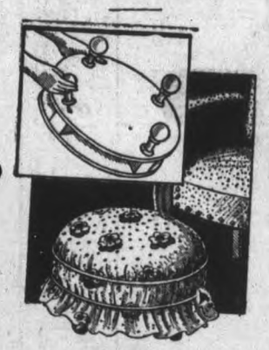
Gay Victorian Footstool From Lowly Cake Boards



Doorstops Are The Legs

A delightful overstuffed footstool for your favorite chair! No one could suspect you'd made it with cake boards and doorstops!

So perky it looks covered with flowered chintz and finished with a little frill. Or, if you'd rather be modern than Victorian, use black sateen and fringe.

Glue between your two cake boards four wooden blocks—equal distances apart. Cover with a heavy weight when the glue gets tacky. Next morning, screw underneath the blocks four doorstops for legs, and paint them to match your color scheme.

And now for the fun of stuffing and covering your footstool. Cut a fat circle of cotton batting the same size as the footstool and then a smaller circle and another still smaller. Place the smallest circle on the stool first, finish with the largest.

Next cover batting with a circle of fabric large enough to be tacked to the bottom board. Take up fulness with small pleats and tack down firmly, finishing with the pretty frill.

Exact details of making this charming footstool are described in our 32-page booklet. Also tells simple, inexpensive ways to make attractive screens, smoking sets, other decorative objects.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of DECORATIVE AND USEFUL OBJECTS EVERYONE CAN MAKE to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of Booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

PUNISHED BY SUCCESS

Most of us have heard the plaint of habitual racetrack bettors—consequently habitual losers—who blame their addiction on the fact that they won the first day they ever went to the track. If they only had lost every bet that day, they would have stayed away, or such is the tenor of their sobs. So it is also with some of the wild bidders we all see—fellows who try all sorts of crazy psychic bids and plays, with no apparent rhyme or reason to some of them. Investigation of their past usually will show that they got away with a crazy bid once upon a time, and are trying to repeat the feat. They are still being punished by their initial success.

A player in one of the New York clubs, whose sound bridge ranks with that of the best players in it, is a steady loser because he can't resist the temptation to try crazy and spectacular things. Only once in a blue moon does he get away with one, and in the meantime he takes it on the chin five times for every occasion that profits him. An old-time partner of his, who had been in the west for some years, came back the other day and solved the mystery of the wild bidder. He told about the hand which had made the madman mad. It is the one shown here, and his bidding was as given.

What a break of luck he got! In the first place, he was rather fortunate in having his partner leave the 6-Spades bid in, instead of taking out to 7-diamonds. Then look at the luck of the play. As the cards lie, his 6-Spade contract was "cold." The only trick East and West could get was with the trump A, after East led the diamond 8, for the club finesse worked and spade Q was caught in a finesse.

Ever since that day, according to his old partner, North has been trying to win points in similar fashion.

Find Murdered Woman On Church Lawn

MONTREAL, Feb. 25—Victim of a brutal attack, the partly clad, half-frozen body of Irene Flynn, 40-year-old unmarried woman of 2056 St. Antoine Street, was found on the lawn of St. Anthony's Church parish house, 1887 St. Antoine street, by churchgoers at 8 o'clock Sunday morning.

The snow under the body was stained by blood which had flowed from several head wounds. The face and forehead were battered and the hair matted. Wrapped around the body was a black fur coat, while a light dress had been disarranged. Some articles of clothing were missing. Police said the victim had been criminally attacked.

At the foot of the parish house steps and on the lower step itself detectives found a pool of blood, which showed that the victim had lain there for some time before being dragged through the sooty snow to the corner of the lawn.

It was under some bushes against a fence adjoining a billboard, a stone's throw from the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks into Windsor Station, that Mrs. H. Porter discovered the body as she left St. Anthony's after Mass. She immediately rushed back to the church, a few yards away, and notified Father J. J. O'Brien, the parish priest, who called the police.

At detective headquarters Sunday afternoon Deputy Director Armand Brodeur, who is actively leading the investigation, reported that the detectives had made some progress in the case.

According to police information the victim, dying from the brutal attack, was dumped on the parish house steps where she lay for some time before she was dragged to the corner of the lawn. Brodeur declared he was certain the assault had not taken place on the church grounds almost diagonally across the street from the Flynn residence.

Early Sunday night no witnesses to the tragedy on dark St. Antoine Street, a notoriously ill-lighted thoroughfare, had been traced, police reported.

Find Trace of Blood

Leading from the curb over the sidewalk, up three short stone steps to the terraced flag walk of the parish house, detectives found a thin trail of blood spots.

Reconstructing the circumstances of the killing, police were considering the possibility that she was attacked and beaten in an automobile and later carried to the parish house steps before she was dragged through the snow to the corner of the garden in the shadow of the railway embankment.

A preliminary investigation by Dr. Jean Marie Roussel, medico-legal expert, indicated that the victim died about three hours before her body was discovered.

No weapon was found in the church grounds, but the woman's purse, containing prayer beads and a national registration certificate, was found near the body.

Chief Brodeur said that the victime, with one of her sisters, was at the Buffalo Club, 1236 Crescent Street, early Sunday morning accompanied by several soldiers. The sister left at about 1:40 a.m., while Irene Flynn remained until about 3.30 a.m. when she left in the company of persons not yet identified.

"It was quite a shock," said Father O'Brien. "I know the family well and I knew Irene Flynn, too. She was a good home girl and kept house for her family. Her mother is aged and needed her help.

"She went out very seldom and some wretches took advantage of her. The signs point that she struggled strongly before she died," he said.

The victim was a daughter of James Flynn, long employed in the mechanical department of The Gazette.

Bombs On The Rock

Algeciras, Spain, Feb. 25 (AP).

TWO tri-motored planes dropped bombs on Gibraltar today.

Smoke was seen rising by observers here, across the bay from the British naval base, but the extent of damage could not be ascertained.

One of the planes circled the Rock, enveloped in clouds, while guns of British warships anchored in the strait joined land batteries in driving off the bombers.

Can Britain Be Invaded By Glider

Premier Winston Churchill admitted in his last speech that gliders might play an important role in any attempted invasion of Britain. ABOVE is an artist's conception of how such an invasion would look. Of course it would have to be done by night. Landing by day (shown by the artist to clarify operation) would be impossible. A report in Washington disclosed that an order for 1,000 super-gliders, capable of carrying 50 men at a time, is being turned out by a Praha factory. Other reports say the Germans have worked out a method of attaching several gliders to a single tow plane which would release them over the channel to permit a swooping, silent landing in England. No one has any reasonable suggestion as to how the tow plane is going to get its train of gliders off the ground in the first place.

Japs Taken By Surprise

Japan is reported to have been taken by surprise by several stragetic moves which it believes to have been motivated by joint consultations between England, the United States and Dutch East Indies, regarding the defence of the vital Malay Peninsula and the rich Dutch islands nearby. To the Dutch East Indies goes the job of patrolling its own waters against possible Japanese invasion. Had Weak, Nervous Stomach; Back, Limbs Ached Painfully!

Tells of Prompt Relief After 5 Years' Suffering by Taking Syntona Herbal Tonic. Nervousness and Sleeplessness Also Overcome.

MRS. HELEN TOMLINSON

"When a medicine will help a person like Syntona does, I think it deserves the highest praise," said Mrs. Helen Tomlinson, 28 Napier Street, Hamilton, Ont., in a recent statment:

"About five years ago my stomach began giving me trouble. I would get awful hungry feelings, but the food I ate only soured in my stomach and caused indigestion and constipation. The acids from my stomach must have gone all through my system, for I soon developed aching pains in my back and all through my limbs. Almost everything I ate disagreed with me and the pains kept me awake at night, so I felt nervous and miserable all the time.

"I tried first one medicine and then another, but nothing seemed to help me until I tried Syntona, but now, I am happy to say, I am feeling fine once more. My food digests well now without all that sourness and distress. The pains have gone from my back and muscles. My nerves are calmed, so I can get a good night's sleep, which I had not been able to do for years. Everything I do seems so much easier since I have been getting my proper sleep and my energy has returned."

Let this grand herbal tonic help you, as it has hundreds of other local men and women. Syntona is pleasant to take and it contains no harmful drugs or depressors.

Local men and women can get Syntona in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

French People In Depths Will Come Back

That France had reached the bottom of its humiliation and would eventually, be found fighting alongside the British in the battle against Hitler was the prediction made by Ralph O. Standish in a talk before the Peterborough Rotary Club [illegible] on the subject of "France."

Mr. Standish, who was introduced by Rotarian A. L. Killaly, studied in Paris for several years, and his address [illegible] was based on his own observations of the French people.

He dealt with his subject under four heads, the history of France, the character of the French people, the national pride existing in France and the inability of the French to co-operate with each other either as groups or as individuals.

Quoting a philosopher who said that whenever a great force was set up against another great force that eventually would overcome the first was created, Mr. Standish said, that the history of France was the history of warfare, both internal and with other countries, and it might be that the people of France had been paying within recent months for the violence that marked their history.

The French, he said, were bright, artistic, idealistic, but they lacked the steel in their makeup that was characteristic of the German and to a greater degree of the British. He emphasized the great pride French people had in themselves and in their country and pointed out how that national pride had been constantly nourished. Finally, the speaker stressed the lack of unity that was to be found in France, a condition that prevented them from working together either as groups or as individuals.

This great confidence in France combined with the disunity that existed had made France easy prey for the Germans in the present conflict, he maintained.

However, Mr. Standish predicted, that France would come back. The qualities that had existed for 2,000 years could not be always kept in subjection, he declared.

ARTHUR D. ARMSTRONG

CABAN, Feb. 25—(ENS).—Cavan Township lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens in the death of Arthur D. Armstrong, who passed away on Tuesday, in his 78th year, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard A. Wood.

Only a few months illness preceded Mr. Armstrong's death. He was the eldest son of the late David S. Armstrong, pioneer resident of Cavan Township, and his wife, Anne Jane Atkins, whose family also dated back to pioneer days.

In 1893 the marriage of Arthur Armstrong and Martha Isabel Lang, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Lang, took place, and for some years they lived at what is known as "Silver Creek Farm." His wife predeceased him by 35 years.

He was a staunch Conservative in politics, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and for some years kept up an active connection with the True Blue Loyal Orange Lodge. Interested in sport, in his younger days he was fleet of foot, and excelled in football. Wood of Millbrook; Mrs. George Woods, and Mrs. Dorothy Rorke of Detroit, Mich.; three sons, William D., of St. Catharines; John S. of Toronto; and Thomas A. of Woodstock; also four brothers, John M. and David L., of Cavan; James C. of Rocanville, Sask.; and Stanley of Sinaluta, Sask.; and four sisters, Mrs. Charles Thorndyke of Millbrook; Mrs. Mary Cann and Mrs. Elizabeth Brock of Peterborough; and Mrs. Harvey Fee of Alameda, Sask. Another brother, Alexander, died over twelve years ago.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place on Thursday at 2 p.m., from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. R. A. Wood, west of Millbrook; Rev. A. Reaburn Gibson, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, assisted by Rev. E. Mason, Anglican clergyman, of Bethany, having charge of the service. There were many beautiful floral tributes, the flower-bearers being three nephews, Jack, Earl, Kenneth and Gerald Armstrong, and one grandson, Melville Wood.

The pall-bearers were intimate friends and neighbors: Samuel Hamilton, Harold Hubbeard, M. McDowell, Fred Winslow, Howard Lancashire, and Irwin Hatherly; interment was in the family burial plot at the Presbyterian Cemetery.

Uniform Price Set For Tomatoes

TORONTO, Feb. 25 (CP).—George Wilson, chairman of the Farm Products Control Board of Ontario, announced Monday the minimum price for tomatoes produced and processed in the province will be $14.10 per ton. The average price last year was $11.65.

Last year 140,000 tons were bought for processing purposes.

This is the first year a uniform minimum price has been set for Tomatoes in Ontario.

The order of the control board establishing the minimum prices processors must pay growers also contains a number of other provisions respecting form of contract, conditions of sale, fulfillment of contract, grades of tomatoes, terms of payment and other matters.

Mr. Wilson said that in British Columbia and most of the tomato areas in the United States purchases were made on a ton basis rather than bushels and that the Ontario Board had deemed it advisable to change the system of buying here to simplify calculations.

Nazi Dromes Shot Up In RAF Raid

Day Bombing Increases Lone Pilot Hits 4 In Hour At One Field

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (CP). — A strong force of British bombers, guarded by waves of fighting planes, swept across the south-east English coast in the direction of France this afternoon, apparently following up a heavy night attack on the Ruhr industrial area and airdromes in Nazi-occupied France.

The skies were clear as the formations moved high over the sea, the fighters tracing their course with thin white trails of exhaust vapor. They headed in the direction of Calais and Cap Gris Nez.

Then observers on the coast saw another formation streaking toward Dunkirk, while a third group moved in the direction of Boulogne.

The attack on industrial Ruhr last night was announced to-day in an Air Ministry communique.

One Lively Hour.

The Air Ministry news service describing the Channel operations said a Blenheim pilot of the fighter command spent an hour over one airdrome last night and "hit and damaged several enemy bombers."

The pilot reported that he saw a Nazi plane landing and that since he was too near to machine-gun it, he dropped a bomb.

Five minutes later, the pilot recounted, he dived on another machine coming in and saw bullets entering the craft.

He said he stayed over the airdrome, firing bursts into a third German plane "which broke away very low and its lights went out," then fired into still a fourth Nazi craft and dropped a bomb in the path of a flare.

Just before leaving, the pilot added, he dropped two more bombs near a "troublesome" searchlight and put it out.

Observers along England's coast said the Royal Air Force attack on the opposite side of the Strait of Dover seemed concentrated upon the repeatedly-bombed Boulogne area.

Armament works, rail junctions and factories in the regions of Essen and Duesseldorf were believed targets of other raids.

Banting Bandages His Pilots' Injuries Creeps Off To Die On Bier Broken Boughs

TORONTO, Feb. 27 — (CP). — Sir Frederick Banting bandaged the injuries of Capt. Joseph Mackey before he died on a bier of broken branches beneath a crashed trans-Atlantic plane near Musgrave Harbor, Nfld., according to a copyrighted dispatch from Musgrave Harbor, published in a Toronto paper today.

The dispatch says that the noted Canadian scientist spent his fast-waning strength in caring for Mackey, only survivor of the crash, in which Sir Frederick, Navigator William Bird of Kidderminster, Eng., and William Snailham of Bedford, N.S., died. The dispatch continues:

"Only when he had done all he could do, both as a doctor and as man, did he leave the plane—to die. Sir Frederick died on a bier of broken branches from the trees into which the plane had crashed. . . There was no one to see Sir Frederick make his way to his bier."

The pilot, after surveying the country and seeking help, returned to find Sir Frederick missing from the plane, the dispatch said, continuing: "Then about 20 feet away he saw the scientist's body. Over it was spread his overcoat. Beside it, resting on the snow, were a wallet and some papers."

MONTREAL, Feb. 26—(CP).—Informed sources here expressed belief today Sir Frederick Banting actually had jumped by parachute from a crashing military plane

British Units Occupy Mogadiscio

Take 3,000 Captives In Interior As Lines Collapse

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Feb. 26 (CP)—British Empire forces pounding Fascist defenders of Italian Somaliland by land, sea and air have captured Mogadiscio, the colony's capital, on the sea coast and advanced 60 miles up the Juba River in the interior, an official announcement said today.

South and East African forces cooperating with Gold Coast regiments moving up the river, where strong Italian defences have collapsed, trapped the main body of Fascists by cutting their last road of escape.

A communique said that by a Conservative estimate 3,000 prisoners had been captured in the interior, in addition to many other Italians who had escaped to the bush country and are now returning and surrendering voluntarily.

With the capture of Mogadiscio, the empire forces have penetrated 400 miles into the East African Colony since launching their offensive into the East African colony a month ago.

British headquarters announced in Cairo today that Ethiopian insurgents supported by British troops had forced the Italians to abandon more posts in the Gojjam area of Ethiopia which lies northwest of Addis Ababa.

Mogadiscio has a normal population of about 30,000, mostly natives, but during the Italian-Ethiopian War, early in 1936, it boomed until its population reached nearly 100,000 for a time.

Since that time, however, the population of the city apparently fell back to normal, the latest estimates placing the number of residents at 29,000 to 30,000, of which about 800

Power Of Defence

New York, Feb. 26 (CP)

THE United States will have power, under certain circumstances, to defend the whole of Newfoundland and the seven other British islands in the Atlantic on which cites for air and naval bases have been leased from Britain.

Full power to assume military control of the islands was given to the United States in the leases projected by the British government, The U.S. would not only control the areas actually leased for sites but also would have the "right to assume military control and conduct military operations with any part" of the island as well as regulate certain shipping and communications.

This right was made known in Washington yesterday when Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, made public details of the Bermuda lease. He said its terms were typical of all leases.

ANKARA, Turkey, Feb. 26—(AP).—Within two hours after his arrival in the Turkish capital, Britain's Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, conferred separately today with J. V. A. MacMurray, United States Ambassador to Turkey, and with the Greek Minister to Ankara.

Both called on Mr. Eden at the British Embassy, where he went after an uproarous welcome from a cheering crowd when he arrived aboard President Ismet Inonu's special train.

Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, who arrived here with Mr. Eden, called upon Turkish military leaders almost immediately.

The British Foreign Secretary and his group are expected to remain in Ankara about three days.

LONDON, Feb. 26—(CP). — The Government said today that "all information suggests that the German preparations for an occupation of Bulgaria are now far advanced."

R. A. Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary who made the statement in the House of Commons, declared the Government is completely satisfied with the way in which Turkey is carrying out the Turkish-British alliance.

He said the London Government was kept fully informed on negotiations leading up to the Turkish-Bulgarian non-aggression declared of February 17.

Asked for a statement on the effect of the agreement on British interests, Mr. Butler said it specifically provided against prejudice to previous alliances. He also called attention to the Sunday statement of Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu that Turkey could not remain indifferent to "foreign activities" in her zone of security.

Hun Libyan Unit Routs British, New Rome Claim

ROME, Feb. 26. — (AP) — The Italian high command claimed today that German land troops had clashed with British armored forces in Libya for the first time Monday southeast of Agedabia.

In this first contact between "formations of the German corps in North Africa" and their foe, the communique added, "various enemy trucks and tanks were destroyed and prisoners taken without German losses."

(The German high command made a similar claim this morning but the action was not mentioned in British circles.)

The first intimation that German land forces had arrived in Libya was given by Mussolini in a speech Sunday.

LONDON, Feb. 26—(CP)—Informed circles in London said today they lacked confirmation of a clash between German troops and British armored forces in Libya, as claimed today in Rome.

These quarters said very small forces of German troops might have reached Libya from Sicily or the Italian mainland.

Some Berlin Reports

BERLIN, Feb. 26.— (AP)— The German high command claimed today a Nazi speedboat had sunk a British destroyer off the southeast coast of England.

At the same time, German submarines were credited with sinking an armed merchant ship of 8,000 tons and a British patrolboat in a continuation of the stepped-up offensive against Britain's supply

Italian Land for Turkey.

ANKARA, Feb. 26 — AP)— The question of the British-Turkish position in the event Germany attacks Greece was expected in most quarters to be the principal item on the agenda of the session by Anthony Eden and the Turkish leaders.

Some sources said that in exploring the whole Balkan problem Eden also might disclose to the Turks his Government's plans for a peace settlement after Britain is victorious. These sources recalled that Italy now holds much territory which belonged to Turkey before the last war.

Mr. Eden and Sir John arrived in Southern Turkey last night after a plane trip from Egypt—details of which were kept secret in advance because the route led over territory within range of hostile aircraft.

(The Budapest wireless said last night Sir Reginald Hoare, British Minister to Bucharest, en route home after a break in British-Rumanian diplomatic relations had arrived in Ankara and would see Mr. Eden there.

(Germans in Belgrade reported the German minister to Yugoslavia had been summoned unexpectedly to Salzburg to confer with Foreign Minister Ribbentrop.)

Popular With Turks.

Known as a student of the Near East, the foreign secretary is popular in Turkey. One newspaper praised him as "that brilliant man who read Persian poetry at the age of 17—somethings we Turks cannot even do."

On hand to meet him when he stepped from his plane were the British ambassador, Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen, and Turkish foreign office representatives. A military honor guard also was present.

Arriving almost simultaneously in Turkey were the Egyptian minister to Rumania and his staff, en route home.

High Turkish officials were on hand at the station to greet Mr. Eden, who came here from Cairo for an exchange of opinions which foreign observers believed would determine British-Turkish plans to

Job For Hepburn Aiding Beaverbrook

LONDON, Feb. 26—(CP Cable). —Premier Mitchell Hepburn's reported offer of his services to the British Government "in any capacity" was understood to-day to have brought a cordial reply from Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production.

It was understood that Lord Beaverbrook informed the Ontario Premier that an occasion to accept his help might arise shortly, in which case the British Minister would not hesitate to call upon him.

The cable from Lord Beaverbrook was said to have welcomed Mr. Hepburn's message of support sent after the Premier heard Lord Beaverbrook's broadcast to Canada on February 23.

On Way in Month or So.

TORONTO, Feb. 26 — (CP). — Queen's Park sources close to Premier Hepburn said to-day they understood, after an exchange of cables between Premier Hepburn and Lord Beaverbrook, that a position is expected to open in Britain "shortly" for which Mr. Hepburn will be considered.

This means the Premier will be on his way to England in a month or so, one of the Premier's friends said.

Speculation arose at Queen's Park as to whether Mr. Hepburn would resign as Leader of the Government in the event his reported offer of his services to Britain was accepted. General opinion is that he would resign the Leadership, but might retain his seat for Elgin, following the example of Major Colin Campbell, member for Sault Ste. Marie, and Lieut. David Croll, member for Windsor-Walkerville, both of whom are overseas with the Canadian Army.

4 Student Fliers Die On Lake In Night Crash

OAK LAKE, Man., Feb. 26.—(CP). —Searchers to-day found the wreckage of a Royal Canadian Air Force plane and the bodies of its four occupants, killed last night when the plane crashed on the ice of Oak Lake, 9 miles from this town, 200 miles west of Winnipeg.

The wreckage was found by a search party led by Earl Williams, farmer of the Oak Lake district. Williams' party of a dozen or so and another group of 15 R.C.A.F. members had spent the whole night tramping back and forth across the lake after a farmer reported hearing "a crash" a short time after sighting a plane last evening.

Those who died in the plane were Sgt. J. G. Butcher of Carman, Man., pilot; Sgt. W. H. Treft, Lucknow, Ont., observer, Sgt. H. A. Howarth, London, Ont., observer, and Lac. L. R. Lancaster, Rodeny, Ont., radio operator.

Navigation Test Flight

After the farmer reported hearing "a crash," searchers left this town on horse-drawn sleighs for the lake. Early this morning R.C.A.F. officers from the training school at Rivers arrived to direct the hunt.

The searchers were hampered by a sharp east wind which drove before it a light, drifting snowfall. In spite of the poor flying weather

Holland Strikes, Riots Bring Death Threats

AMSTERDAM (Via Berlin), Feb. 26 (AP)—German authorities today imposed a military administration on the province of north Holland because of strikes and riots in Amsterdam.

The strikers were ordered back to work by Thursday and were warned that imprisonment and even capital punishment might follow violations

The proclamation was issued at the Hague by the German military commander, Gen. Friedrich Christensen.

"I have taken over executive power for the province of North Holland," he said, "in view of the present political situation."

The general ordered that work in all public and private enterprises "be resumed to the fullest extent by Thursday morning."

Marching, meetings and demonstrations as well as assembling on the streets were forbidden. Political parties of all the Netherlands were banned from activity in the North Holland province. The wearing of uniforms or insignia of any kind was also banned.

Military Courts Job

Cases of violation of the order will be handled by military courts, Gen. Christensen announced.

"Provoking strikes or laying down on work will be punishable by 15 years, so far as not more serious penal laws are violated," he said. "When infringement of laws occurs in connection with enterprises for the army, to which all vital industries belong, capital punishment may follow."

The General named Lieut. Siburg of the air force to direct the military administration in the province.

The strike, which started among municipal workers, spread to private concerns. The demonstrations were part of a series which followed recent clashes in which various factions, including Netherlands Nazis, were involved. The Germans blamed Jewish elements for the disturbances.

In naming the 71-year-old Toronto man to the post, Mr. King said: "I feel that no better appointment to Washington could possibly have been made." He said the Governor-General had given assent to Mr. McCarthy's appointment to the Canadian Privy Council.

Businessmen 1941 Spy Aces

Beat Glamor Girl–Cross Borders Always Open To Vital Trades

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—(AP). — Glamor girl spies who tried to be the Mata Haris of this war have taken a back seat behind plain John Businessman, ace espionage agent of 1941.

Which is why counter-espionage officials of neutral governments say they believe Britain now has a big edge on Germany in military information.

Britain's trade empire is paying dividends with perhaps the world's most active intelligence agents—businessmen, manufacturers, technicians and industrialists of many countries whose pre-war income was based on trade with British firms.

War or no war, those men travel. War needs their brains and war machines are made of what they have to sell. No matter how tightly a frontier may be "sealed," the man who has what the government behind that frontier wants will be able to pass.

Eventually he comes back out again. Then he may go directly to a British (or German) friend—perhaps a diplomat, perhaps a businessman, perhaps just a social acquaintance.

He tells of industrial bottlenecks in war production in the country he visited, of the factory striving to widen that bottleneck. Perhaps he's surprised and perhaps he isn't when he reads in his newspaper a few days later that the same factory has been bombed.

All belligerents use these commercial spies to the fullest possible extent.

A commercial man who outlined the picture estimated that at least half the information handled by military intelligence in Londn came from commercial sources or through commercial channels.

Turk Warmth Cheers Britain

Greek Shyness At Additional Aid However Provides A Worry

LONDON, Feb. 26—(CP). — The British public's attention was focussed today on impending conference between Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Gen. Sir John Dill with Turkish officials who welcomed them today in Ankara.

There was speculation in some quarters that on the outcome of the talks might hinge a British decision whether to dispatch troops from Egypt to bolster Greek defences against a possible German thurst.

How far Turkey is willing to go in collaborating with Britain has been a matter of conjecture in the light of recent developments, but the warm welcome accorded Mr. Eden was regarded significant.

Although Greece has been at war nearly four months, she still apparently worries British officialdom because of her reported refusal to accept British troops on her soil. This stand presumably is based upon a desire to avoid any direct affront to Germany, though Greece has said she would continue to fight until the last Italian was driven out of Albania. The Royal Air Force, however, has been giving active aid to the Greeks, already challenging the Italians for mastery of the air.

If Britain abstains from carrying the war to Southeastern Europe, it is expected in some quarters that she will resume her North African offensive with a thrust at Tripoli. Capture of that Libyan stronghold would gave her a junction with the inactive French forces in Africa under Gen. Maxime Weygand.

Meanwhile British forces are driving ahead steadily in Italian East Africa—against Somaliland, Eritrea and Eethiopia. Collapse of wobbly Italian resistance there would strengthen Britain's hand greatly in dealing with the Balkan situation.

Italian Thinks He's Dante In Albanian Air Raid

Once the Greeks sent one or two planes scurrying down a valley on a bombing raid. But only a week ago, 40 Greek craft in one formation bombed the Italian front lines.

The Greeks say the effect of this new bombing is reflected in an intercepted field wireless message from a poetic Italian captain to his superior officer:

Told Banting To Jump Says Pilot

All Ignored His Plea As Motors Quit; Crashed Onto Pond

By BOB DOLDORPH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEWFOUNDLAND, Airport, Nfld., Feb. 26 (CP)—Two Royal Canadian Air Force ski-equipped planes were poised here today, awaiting only favorable weather to start a 50-mile flight to Musgrave Harbor to pick up Capt. Joseph Mackey and the bodies of Sir Frederick Banting, William Bird and William Snailham.

The noted Canadian scientist and two of his companions died in the crash of a military airplane bound for Britain. Capt. Mackey, pilot of the craft, was the only survivor.

Trappers and fishermen brought Capt. Mackey and the bodies of his companions to Musgrave Harbor Monday night. The two R.C.A.F. planes that will take them back to Canada arrived here yesterday, to be greeted by swirling snow that forced a postponement in their flight to Musgrave Harbor.

First meagre details of the events leading up to the crash came from Musgrave Harbor last night after Mackey had arrived there. He told residents of how he had warned his three companions to take to their parachutes as the plane came down, but none of them had done so.

Motor Quit 50 Miles Out.

The plane was 50 miles from here, heading toward England, when one engine failed, he said. As the plane headed back to the airport, the other engine gave out, and the wireless over Newfoundland but from too low an altitude.

The belief was based on information reaching here that Sir Frederick's parachute was open when his body was found a short distance from the wrecked plane. All four occupants of the aircraft wore parachutes.

The other victims—William Bird and William Snailham—apparently stayed in the plane with the pilot, Capt. Joseph Mackey, who survived the crack-up. The bodies of Bird and Snailham were found in the wreckage.

(At Musgrave Harbor, Nfld., yesterday, Capt. Mackey said he had told Sir Frederick and the two men, both crew members, to bail out. Busy handling the controls, he did not know until after the crash whether any had jumped).

The word reaching here said that an engineer now is at the wrecked plane, making an examination for an official inquiry. The aircraft, of United States manufacture, was being "ferried" to Britain when the accident occurred.

Capt. Mackey and the three bodies are at Musgrave Harbor.

Fog Delays Plane.

NEWFOUNDLAND AIRPORT, Nfld., Feb. 26—(CP Cable).—Thick weather shrouding the rugged region where Sir Frederick Banting and two companions perished in a plane crash continued to-day to delay the attempt to bring out their bodies by air for transport to Canada.

If the skies are clear during the day, ski-equipped planes will fly the 50 miles to Musgrave Harbor and bear the bodies to this airport with the only survivor of the crash. Two Royal Canadian Air Force machines await here to take them to Canada.

The planes will bring out Captain Joseph Mackey and the bodies of Sir Frederick, William Bird, and William Snailham.

He Played a Big Role.

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (CP Cable). —The Daily Express, paying editorial homage to-day to Sir Frederick Banting, threw possible light on the work he has been doing since the outbreak of the war.

"He had an important part in the Empire Air Plan," The Express said. "Other men gave us faster and faster fighter planes. It needed the skill of such men as Sir Frederick Banting to adapt the human machine to live in them."

The paper concluded that Sir Frederick, who gave his greatest discovery to the peacetime world "has given us fresh discoveries and now his life for our war effort."

One of those touching little stories with sufficient humor to offset its morbidness was contained in a letter received by Mrs. Peter Welch of 516 Sherbrooke Street, this week. The letter is from Mrs. Welch's mother, who lives in Vancouver.

The story concerns itself with a military funeral the writer attended with her husband. At that searing part in the ceremony where a salute is fired, the mother of the deceased, who was standing at the side of the grave, holding the hand of her granddaughter, about five, fainted. Upon seeing the old lady drop to the ground after the bang of the salute, the little girl clasped her hands across her chest, and said in an awed voice, "My God, they've shot poor Grandma."—J.W.H.

Reports from the Albanian front said Italian planes did not appear to fight off the raiders.

Dispatches also said that there were heavy exchanges of artillery fire in the central and northern sectors while patrols harassed Italians attempting to fortify their lines.

End Of A Trip

Split, Yugoslavia, Feb. 26 (AP)

THE freighter Xenia, of 1,400 tons, was blown up and sunk by a mysterious explosion last night just after she arrived at the small Yugoslav port of Strobbece loaded with bauxite.

(Lloyd's register of shipping does not list the Xenia, and the dispatch did not give the ship's nationality.)

A Yugoslav investigating commission found the ship sank in less than a minute at a time when all the crew had gone ashore.

One version of the blast said the ship was scheduled to take its bauxite, the raw material for aluminum, to Pola, an Italian port near Trieste, and then sail to Albania, and that the crew was unwilling to make the Albanian voyage. The version said the crew planted a time bomb in the hold.

The War Today

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

When Hitler told the Nazi old guard at the Munich Buerger-Braeu cellar that "spring is in the air," he coupled it with a forecast of intensified U-boat operations against Britain next month.

It may not have been an idle boast. London expects a sharp increase in submarine and bomber attacks on he North Atlantic sea route as soon as the weather clears. The whole course of the war may depend on the ability of the British Navy and the Royal Air Force to cope with this campaign.

Hitler, who above all things is a realist, has two courses open to him, always conceding he must conquer and subjugate Britain to win the war. He can attempt a sudden invasion of Britain, hoping to win by a knock-out before the United States' defence program supplies Britain with the materials, particulary aircraft, needed for a big-scale offensive against the Axis.

Or, Hitler can attempt a campaign of attrition against Britain, by sea and air, with the object of weakening her, perhaps starving her, so that invasion will have a better chance of success.

For the past month or two, shipping losses from German and Italian surface and undersea raiders, have not been heavy. The weekly average for January was 37,916 tons, well below the average for the war, 62,536 tons.

This comparatively low figure was due, almost entirely, to winter weather in the North Sea and the approaches to Britain's west coast ports. The Germans could not employ their U-boat fleet to its maximum capacity or efficiency, and used the time to rest the crews and train others.

But, with the coming of spring, the U-boats will appear again on the trade routes leading to Britain, particularly the North Atlantic where an ever-increasing volume of war materials from Canada and the United States is crossing to Britain.

That will be the supreme testing time for Britain's anti-submarine forces. So far, the war has shown the submarine to be a deadlier weapon than the bomber, considered from the viewpoint of economic damage it can inflict—you can rebuild or repair a bombed factory but it will be useless without seaborne raw materials.

Weren't Ready For War Rome Protests

ROME, Feb. 26 (AP)—The Fascist press indicated yesterday that one impelling motive of Mussolini's speech Sunday was to answer the question in Italian minds as to whether Italy was properly prepared to enter the war.

The most detailed comment came from Mario Appelius, leading military commentator, who claimed in Il Duce's newspaper Ii Popolo d'Italia that the Government had done everything possible to get fascism's house in order for the conflict.

"No nation has ever been entirely ready," Appelius contended in devoting a considerable part of his discussion to the question of military preparedness.

"Preparation exists when preparations are made in time to convert peacetime industry into war industry," he said. "When a general says 'I have everything,' it is time to remove him from command immediately because he knows not what he is saying.

"The French collapse forced Italy to enter the war sooner than she intended, to fight an overseas instead of a Continental war."

He admitted that some Italian generals might have erred somewhere, but concluded with the optimistic boast that the Axis possesses three essential elements for victory. These he listed as morale equal to Britain's, a stronger industrial setup, and a better strategic situation, since, he claimed, the Axis is fighting on the inside of their circle instead of around the rim as Britain is forced to do.

With Mr. Eden were General Sir John G. Dill, Chief of the British Imperial General Staff, and five other uniformed British officers—including a kilted Scot who was an object of great interest to the crowd.

After being escorted to his hotel, Mr. Eden paid several courtesy visits to Turkish officials, but it appeared unlikely he would begin serious talks until tomorrow.

Commenting on his arrival, the government newspaper Ulus asserted the British-Turkish alliance has no aggressive aims and declared one of its purposes is "to try to prevent the war from spreading to our zone of security."

"We are approaching one of the important periods in European history," Ulus said. "What can be more natural than for allies to get together to study the situation?"

Mr. Eden was given an enthusiastic greeting before he boarded his train for Ankara, and Turkish official quarters expressed deep pleasure at his arrival.

Petain Appoints Barnaud NewGo-Between

VICHY, France, Feb. 26 — (AP). —Jacques Barnaud was named by Chief of State Marshal Petain today to the new post of delegate general in charge of French-German negotiations following a cabinet revision apparetnly designed ot emphasize the economic phase of collaboration with the Reich.

Petain set up five main ministries headed by Vice-Premier Jean Darlan.

Gen. Charles Huntziger, minister of defence; Yves Boutillier, minister of finance; Joseph Barthelmey, minister of justice, and Pierre Caziot, minister of agriculture.

The five-man directorate, serving under the final authority of Petain, will be the all powerful body with authority over 15 secretaries of state, including a secretary of economy charged with collating German-French economic questions under direction of Barnaud, and a secretary of public works, charged with attacking the unemployment problem.

The latter post was assigned to Francois Lehideaux, a member of a well-known banking family. Others listed for secretariats included Pierre Pucheu, industrialist, secretary of industrial production, Jerome Carcopino, dean of the Sorbonne, secretary of education, and the following ministers remaining as heads of ther departments, but with designations of secretaries:

Two Get More Power

The powers of Boutillier and Huntzinger were greatly extended by the reorganization, while that of Belin was sharply reduced. Boutillier will oversee the secretaries for industrial production, labor and communications.

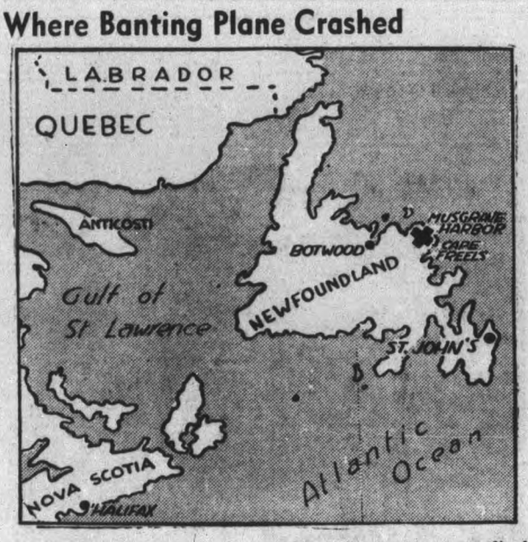
Huntzinger was given authority over the secretaries of education and youth, family and health, and colonies—the last of significance since the colonies contain the largest mobilized force of French soldiers.

Darlan's vast powers were expanded by the placing of agriculture and public works under his responsibility. Subject to the authority of Petain, he will exercise in the top cabinet powers equal to those of his predecessor, Pierre Laval, whose restoration to power is said to have been demanded by Germany.

Barnaud, while he will function in Boutillier's ministry, will be directly under orders of Petain.

A former technician with the Renault automobile factory, Barnaud will reside in Paris and be the French-German raw materials commission.

Where Banting Plane Crashed



Rushing back to England with important new medical knowledge, Sir Frederick Banting and two companions were killed when their airplane crashed near Musgrave Harbor, Newfoundland. Searchers found the plane with the written message that the three men were dead traced in the snow by Pilot Joseph C. Mackey, only survivor of the crash.

Greeks Reported Shying Off More British Material Aid

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (AP). — Britain is weighing the problem of whether to put an expeditionary force athwart the path of the German advance in the Balkans, or to resume the march on Italian Tripoli and concentrate on the Mediterranean campaign.

A decision probably will be taken on information now being assembled by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden General Sir John Dill, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and General Sir Archibald Wavell, head of the Middle East Command.

Mr. Eden has been sent to the Middle East to discuss the alternative plans with General Wavell and, at the same time, to stiffen the Turks and Greeks in resisting German pressure. He and Gen. Dill arrived yesterday in Turkey.

Supporters of the "Balkan plan" say it would:

1. Unify anti-German feeling in South-eastern Europe and result in Turkey's entrance into the war on Britain's side.

2. Form a front which would safeguard the Suez Canal.

3. Divert large German forces from Western Europe to the East to face a much smaller British expedition.

Backers of this plan concede, however, that it would require the diversion of at least six British divisions at the start—probably more than could be spared from North Africa.

Pending a decision, authoritative British sources cautioned against optimism concerning the situation in Bulgaria, where German infiltration is reported threatening Greece's back door.

Greece Stalling?

The position of Greece was considered puzzling, since the belief is widely held in informed quarters that the Athens government has refused a British offer of further material assistance.

(The few paragraphs following made up a dispatch on the Greek position which was stopped by the London censor Feb. 19. Resubmitted, this dispatch was passed today. It is believed to describe a situation between Britain and Greece that still exists. It was not possible to transmit an identification of the source. Passage of a story by the censors, however, has no bearing on questions of fact.)

A British offer of increased aid was said to have been made originally before the death of Jan. 29 of Gen. John Metaxas, the Greek premier. According to the report, he thanked the British, but refused to consider further assistance which, it was understood, he believed would open Greece to the danger of a German attack.

When the British government became convinced that there was extensive German military infiltration into Bulgaria and large troop concentrations in the Balkans, it is said, the British offer was repeated, and even expanded to include more help than was originally proposed.

It is reported that the offer has been refused for a second time.

Hinging On Turkey?

Speculation on the cause for this attitude centres around whether the Greeks intend to fight if the German divisions, now poised in Rumania on the Bulgarian frontier, move through that country and open an offensive toward the strategic port of Salonika.

(A Greek government spokesman in Athens today declared Greece is determined to fight until "the Italians are out of Albania.")

If the Greeks intend to resist both Italy and Germany her refusal to accept more British aid was mystifying to persons who speculated on the situation.

It was suggested that Greece's action might well turn on the attitude of Turkey toward moving beyond her own frontiers to resist a German attack in this region.

Authoritative sources yesterday listed ice conditions on the Danube as a reason for expecting Germany's action may not come as soon as has been believed in some quarters.

These sources said that while the Danube is free of ice in regions where the Germans apparently intend to cross, there still is pack ice up the river which might sweep away their pontoon bridges at a critical time.

Defaulter Gets Three Months

BANCROFT, Feb. 26.—(ENS)—James Clifford Bandy, 21, of Fort Stewart, 21 miles east of Bancroft in Carlow township, was found guilty in police court here on Tuesday by Magistrate Floyd of failing to report to a military training centre when officially notified. He was given the minimum fine of $50 or a jail sentence of three months. He took the jail sentence.

Bandy was the first case in Hastings county of a young man trying to escape military training. It was alleged he was called to the first camp but pleaded he had to stay home to do farm work and that he was also a conscientious objector. He was notified to attend the next two camps but failed and Provincial Constable F. W. Palmateer and Constable Beatty of the R.C.M.P., Belleville were sent to get him.

When Bandy gets out of jail he will still be eligible to attend one of the four-month camps.

Broken Wheel Tears Up Track

BOWMANVILLE, Feb. 26. — A broken wheel on a C.N.R. freight train wrecked the roadbed of the double set of tracks for a distance of three-quarters of a mile here last night. The train was brought to a stop a mile west of Bowmanville station.

A local train following the freight was held up as a result of the accident. The eastbound C.N.R. train was routed over C.P.R. lines. The accident occurred at 8:10 p.m. Standard Time.

Railways officials said it was a strange mishap as the broken wheel not only gouged the steel of the rail on which it was running, but extensively damaged the nearest rail on the other set of tracks. How it happened is still being investigated. It will be necessary to lay new steel on some sections of the three-quarter-mile stretch of damaged road bed.

LAKEFIELD

Junior Institute Completes Quilt

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 26—(ENS). — A quilt for the Red Cross was completed at the home of Miss Hazel Northey on Wednesday by members of the Junior Institute.

A pot luck supper was enjoyed after which members of the "Kawartha Kids Klub" met for the sixth meeting of their project. Nine members answered the roll call with the name of a book each would like to own. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Eva Higgins to which the members were asked to present their record books with notes up to date.

The personal health charts were distributed and discussion on the following topics by the leaders were given, "Planning Meals," "Cost of Meals", and preparation of raw foods to be used raw or cooked. "Do's and Don't" for menu planning and "Suggestions for Family Budgets."

The meeting concluded with the serving of refreshments by the hostess and her mother.

Euchre Party Held

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 26 — (ENS). — An enjoyable card party was held in St. Paul's Parish Hall, in aid of the Altar Society. Five tables of euchre were played and interest was lent to the occasion by the donation of a small sum of money as prize for the highest score in each game.

The visitors voted the novelty interesting and amusing.

Dainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Bolt From Sirois Conference Draws Drew Fire

TORONTO, Feb. 26 — (CP). — A short session during which second readings will be given to bills was on the agenda of the Ontario Legislature today, following the leaders' day debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. The start of the debate was devoted solely to a discussion of the Sirois report and the Dominion-Provincial conference.

Conservative Leader George A. Drew opened the debate by criticizing the Ontario delegates for "running away" from the conference. Premier Hepburn said the report was "nothing but a bond deal" and those who broke up the conference did more for national unity than anyone else there.

By way of an amendment to the Address in reply to the Throne Speech, Col. Drew proposed the Dominion Government call another conference. Such a conference, he said, should take measures assuring the greatest possible war effort by inter-governmental co-operation, adequate prices for farm products; protection of labor rights and to perfect plans for the rehabilitation of returned soldiers and civilians thrown out of work by post-war industrial adjustment.

Col. Drew spoke for more than an hour, during which time he said provincial governments "govern by sufferance" in wartime because of the emergency powers held by the Dominion Government. He urged Premier Hepburn use his skill in coining phrases to promote goodwill rather than disunity and pleaded that Ontario give vigorous leadership in the country's war effort.

Worth Examining.

The Sirois report, he said, must have been worth at least examination, and there should have been some attempt to reach an understanding with the Dominion regarding the state of emergency arising from the war.

"Instead of seeking any solution, the Ontario representatives ran away from the conference using language that hardly would be expected from the official representatives of states about to declare war against each other."

Col. Drew said the conference offered an opportunity to put agriculture on its feet, a necessary action considering the situation arising from the closing of foreign markets and the necessity of interfering with the normal distribution of farm products.

He stressed the important part food would play in the conflict and declared the farmer, like the manufacturer of munitions, should be assured a moderate profit on his product.

The rights of labor should also have been considered and this was another reason the Premier of Ontario had no excuse for "scuttling" the conference. Unless there is an understanding between the two governments labor has no way of knowing from day to day what its rights actually are.

Premier Hepburn, in reply, said the attitude of Nova Scotia and Quebec to the conference was the same as that of British Columbia, Alberta and Ontario.

"Nova Scotia said if they had to choose between 'Yes' and 'No,' they would say 'No.' Quebec stayed in the background but if they had to make a decision, it would have been against anything seeking to amend the British North America Act.

The position of Premier Bracken of Manitoba, one of the proponents of the report and the West's spokesman, was that he "wanted his bonds endorsed so that these extravagant provinces could go on with the same kind of extravagance."

Premier Bracken had dealt with the matter of borrowings, saying he would accept from the Dominion Government a ruling the provinces be left in the same position as they are now. Now they should continue to borrow on their own credit and borrow also on the credit of the Dominion.

This condition he likened to the prodigal son putting his father into bankruptcy. He claimed it was obvious from the start that the two conflicting points of view, as expressed by Quebec and the Prairie Provinces could not be met.

"The Dominion Government laid great stress on the fact it was going to take over the cost of employables on relief," the Premier continued. "If there was an all-out war effort there would be no employables on relief."

The Premier said his government had already taken steps to help the farmer because of the deplorable condition into which agriculture was drifting.

No Immediate Election

He had no thought in mind of calling an immediate general election and the government would go through with the present session because it had the confidence of the people. Particularly the solid support of the rural folk for the farmers realize they had a friend at court.

"There was nothing at Ottawa to help the farmer. Nothing but bond dealers hoping to make good defaulted bonds," he declared.

Premier Hepburn declared the Dominion government had committed a serious error in its selection of men to draw up the Sirois report.

The late Dr. Joseph Sirois, chairman, he said, was a director of the Provincial Bank of Canada, which "was loaded to the ears with bonds of the city of Montreal."

Dr. Sirois had other interests and was in a position of dealing with the credit of "certain, shaky municipalities, a large share of whose bonds were in the hands of the bank he represented," continued the premier. "They attempted to cloak this business in the atmosphere of patriotism."

Mr. Hepburn said Prof R. A. McKay, another member, was to have spoken at a Canadian Club dinner in Saint John, N.B., but the dinner had been cancelled when public protest arose.

"Why was this man, who was a father of a super-patriotic document, cut off because of his isolationist and anti-British talk?" he questioned.

Mr. Hepburn said Premier Bracken of Manitoba, one of the proponents of the report, had attempted in 1939 to barter Manitoba wheat for German electrical goods to be used in the Manitoba telephone system.

"These are the men who are the exponents of National Unity," declared the Premier. "I want to say that the ones who helped break up that conference did more for National Unity than any one there. History will record that fact."

British And Jap Clash Over Mine

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Feb. 26 — (AP). — It was reported heer to-day without confirmation that British and Japanese civilians had clashed on the Malay Peninsula when British authorities took steps to regain control of a mine which the Japanese have operated under a concession for several years.

(The Japanese have operated a tin mine in Trengganu, one of the unfederated Malay States on the east coast of the Malay Peninsula to which British troop and aerial reinforcements have been sent recently. The city of Trengganu is about 280 miles north of Singapore.)

It was reported that Japanese mining engineers and British officials engaged in a brief physical encounter. Details were not given.

Increasing R.A.F. Raids Answer Hitler's Submarine Boast

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—(AP).—Hitler got a quick answer to his threat to smash Britain by means of a sea attack. It came in the form of a daylight raid by the Royal Air Force, which crossed the Channel to hammer at German-held bases.

Whatever the result of that raid, it seems obvious British strategists intend to meet the threat of a U-boat and surface-raider attack by hitting first. Hitler's defeat-dogged Axis mate, Mussolini, complained publicly his North African disasters came because the British Imperial Army got the jump on his armies. They are out to do the same thing against Germany's Spring U-boat scourge if possible.

Sign of Growing Power

From this distance Britain's counter-raids along the Nazi-held "invasion coast" give evidence of expanding British air power at home. Despite planes sent to Africa, to Malaya, and to Greece, Britain now is able to muster both bombers and fighter escorts in sufficient numbers to risk large-scale daylight attacks on Nazi submarine and air installations in France and the Low Countries.

If other indications were lacking that months of German air bombing of British war plants had failed to cripple plane production seriously, the R.A.F. cross-Channel raids would prove it. It takes something like a 10-1 ratio of fighter escort planes to protect one heavy bomber adequately, according to British estimates.

Fighters are Britain's first line of defence against German bombers. They could not be risked for offensive operations against "invasion coast" bases unless the available British fighter force had been expanded greatly in the months since the Battle of Britain began.

Easy Job for Bombers

As it is, the R.A.F. is apt to take the initiative increasingly as Spring approaches. Any such U-boat onslaught as Hitler envisages would require that the coast of France, the Low Countries and Norway be studded with refuelling and operating bases.

It should be comparatively easy for the R.A.F. to find such targets. Moreover, day and night attacks on those submarine nests would serve a double purpose.

Protection of the bases would be so vital to the Nazi campaign plan that a substantial air force would have to be retained about them to meet the air threat. That would cut down the size of enemy air fleets available to blast at the British Isles.

The main British objective, however, must be to locate and wreck Nazi U-boat nests and the rail and road connections over which they are supplied with oil and torpedoes. There is evidence that Britain is getting valuable information as to German war installations from sources in all Nazi-occupied countries. Despite German censorship, reports of Nazi trials of Norwegians, Netherlanders, Belgians and Frenchmen for communicating or attempting to communicate military information to the British bob up in the war news from day to day.

Bombers Out Again

DEAL, England, Feb. 26—(CP).—Large numbers of Royal Air Force bombers protected by fighters crossed the Strait of Dover today, presumably bound for objectives in Nazi-occupied French territory.

Observers on the coast counted at least 60 planes flying in formation and conjected there were others above the clouds.

There Is Only One Way

A "Free Italy" movement made its appearance in Montreal. There was a two-day session with 58 delegates present, and it is said they represent a membership of 3,000. One of the resolutions was that word be sent at once to the Italian Ambassador in Washington requesting him to get in touch with the King of Italy. The purpose would be to get rid of Mussolini and free Italy of the rule of the Fascists.

That is ambitious and it is definite. But would it work? We have heard little enough in recent times of the King of Italy and what he thinks about the war or about Mussolini or about things in general.

In days prior to the entrance of Italy into the war (June 10) there was much written about his attitude, and we were assured by those who claimed to be fortified by facts that the King would never consent to going to war against France. He was just biding his time and in due season word would come from him and he would assert the kingly authority which Mussolini seemed to have taken from him.

But when Mussolini made his declaration of war what did the King of Italy say? Pretty much nothing at all. There was no word of protest, and nothing to indicate that he had been asked what he thought about it.

Right there is the defect in the program of this new organization. It is seeking to do business with the wrong party, and it is failing to see that the one and only way to free Italy is to get rid of Mussolini by the plain method of so thoroughly defeating him that he will have to get out. The Mussolini breed does not quietly step to one side by reason of suggestion. He understands one thing only, and that is force. Strengthen the arm of Britain and forget the King of Italy for the moment. That will produce better results than any ambassador could hope to achieve.

This Is a War Year

The City Council has placed the tax rate at 32½ mills for 1941, and that is one-half mill below the figure of 1940. The increase in the Board of Education estimates is close to 1¼ mills.

The Council in adjusting salaries decided to deal with those who were worthy of increases because they were not receiving large salaries, and that seems to be entirely right.

There was discussion regarding a schedule of salary increases for civic employees, and it might help, but it would not be well to come to the conclusion that such schedule would smooth out the difficulties. For the moment information will be secured from other cities showing what salaries are being paid. That is not an infallible sign post, but at least it gives opportunity for knowing if this city is in line with salaries elsewhere.

The trouble with a schedule is that it is apt to encounter seasons when it would be considered unwise to let it have its way. If finances were down then there would be objections to making the scheduled advances. Some alderman would be certain to move that the schedule be suspended and without doubt he would find support.

The chief reason for unusual economy this year is the pressure of war financing. When we find our public bodies taking the attitude that they will have to "do without this for the present" then there is community leadership being given, a leadership in which citizens are disappointed that the Board of Education did not see fit to participate even to a limited reduction of their estimates.

Those "drastic changes" in our method of living of which Finance Minister Ilsley recently spoke have not yet reached us. But they will. Of that we are as certain as can be. This war is not going to decrease in its demands on the country's purses; rather will it increase, and each demand must be met.

Those Big Profits

There was another note today and it was written by one who wanted to get something in the paper about the "big fellows" who are getting fat out of the war. There were nice big fat contracts going and there were fat profits being made. In truth everything in connection with the business seemed to be "fat."

Our correspondent did not want his letter published, but wished we'd "dig up something about it" and he'd be looking for it in the paper

Within recent days we have noticed the annual reports of several large manufacturing companies, and they would be the kind whose business would be affected by the war. Their goods are in demand for war purposes, and they would be much busier than usual. But the big fat profits were not revealed. There was something about the excess profits tax taking a good deal of the surplus. The people who had their money invested there got their dividend about the same as in other years, but it did not come within the circle where it could be called "fat."

At other times we have followed the stock market quotations on a number of companies where war orders are placed. We are aware that these factories are extremely busy. Shortly after the war started the price of the common stock of these companies began to rise and in some cases it kept on in that direction until it was twice the pre-war figure. The reason was the expectation of large profits from that common stock. That was the way money was made during the last war, and it would likely repeat.

What's happened? The prices quoted for such stock today are far down compared to the altitude they attained during that period of expectation of large profits, and they came down because the large profits were not forthcoming, nor were they in sight. It must have been (1) the excess profits tax, or (2) the narrow margin of profit allowed which made the difference. It all points away from the claim of "fat" profits on war contracts. When we have something definite on which to go we may be able to write otherwise, but at the moment we are unable to assure our correspondent that we will fall in stride with him and go about making accusations of something the existence of which is extremely doubtful.

Doing Something About It

There are people who always have that feeling they would "like to do something" about the war. It's a good feeling provided it is directed into some useful channel and not allowed to run to waste.

The great majority of our people cannot do anything in the way of direct service because they are too old.

At the moment we cannot think of anything better than doing what a great many of our people are now doing. Purchasing War Savings Securities, and doing it regularly, and doing it to the full measure of what they can afford.

Admittedly it is not a very spectacular sort of war effort. The average person never sees you doing it. Likewise the method is so simple that it may not seem like doing anything of sufficient vigor and force to qualify as a real war effort.

And yet it's effective. The Government can't keep on spending money if they do not keep on receiving it.

The war may shift here or may shift there; there will be days when things look pretty black; there will be other days when it will look much better, but on all kinds of days the call is still for your money. And if you are handing it over week-by-week you are actually doing something which needs doing.

"Two Feet One Inch"

City Council meetings in Toronto will not be broadcast. That idea went down by a vote of 20-2. Controller Lewis Duncan was actually the one individual who was right in behind the scheme, and he had fortified himself with statistics. The papers were not paying sufficient attention to civic affairs and the people were becoming indifferent. Just what there was to which the people should have been giving more attention the Controller did not say.

Following a recent meeting of the Council the Controller had secured a copy of a paper, and he had also secured the services of investigators who had studied it from cover to cover, and he could hardly ask for anything more thorough than that.

The paper had in it "332 feet of reading matter, with articles telling people how to get slim and how to grow old, and yet it contained only two feet one inch of City Hall news."

We do not know what sort of investigators the Toronto Controller engaged, but we suspect they must have been land surveyors or perhaps they had become accustomed to dealing with the depth of snow which in winter time is inclined to run into such things as yards, feet and inches.

We cannot recall previously having seen or heard of space in a newspaper being measured in feet. We have seen a number of city editors in action who would call for a couple of "sticks" about an item of news, and that would indicate four inches. At other times a reporter with a good story has been told to "let her ride," and that means space would be found for all he could produce. But never have we heard one say "give it two feet and one inch."

Advertising men have a lingo of their own and they talk with a fair degree of intelligence about "lines" and seldom do they use any other word, and our belief is that it takes about 2,200 lines to make a page. But never yet have we heard them talking about space in terms of "feet."

Occasionally the man from the composing room comes in and holds two fingers apart to indicate he is about "that much" short when making up a page, but never does he reduce it to sections or fractions of a foot.

Possibly the reading public may understand feet and inches better than people in newspaper offices. Some day we may start out to write an editorial a foot long. It would be quite a novel experiment.

Where Did They Go?

An Associated Press correspondent with the Greek army reports that at dusk in a driving rainstorm he arrived at what was termed no-man's land between Greek and Italian armies. He was looking for something and he had found it—a great slide of rock and earth which blocked the road along the Drinos river, and effectively blocked any chance there might have been for tanks to go to the aid of the hard-pressed infantry.

In there Italians clung to machine-gun nests, but they were trapped. The reasonable thing for them would have been to withdraw under cover of night and take up positions elsewhere. But the Greeks said they wouldn't dare do so as it would mean death to them from their own commanders. That is the latest order to the Fascists, the death sentence to those who retreat.

And while that pressure is being put upon the troops we read nothing whatever of the assortment of cabinet ministers, seven in number, who were being sent from Rome to the fighting front.

There was a great build-up for them when the announcement was made. The big-wigs were going to put their shoulder to the wheel; they were going to suffer the same as the men under arms; they were going to demonstrate to the world the unity of the Italian people.

But we read nothing of them being out in the blinding rain storm through which the correspondent was travelling, nor were they with the Italian machine-gunners who were making a last-ditch stand in a hopeless position.

NOTE AND COMMENT

If there is anything worse than finding a worm in an apple one is eating it is to find half a worm.

It is reported that a committee of the Legislature will be named to consider the whole business of assessment, and we can think right now of a couple of dozen people who would like to get on that committee.

Smuggling 57 cartons of American cigarettes across the border cost two people fines of $300, and the confiscation of the fags. And that does not come under the heading of being what is called profitable.

Governor Stassen of Minnesota wears a silk hat size 7¾, and a young chap going to a university ball borrowed it. And that recalls the old jingle which said: "Little head, little wit; big head, not a bit."

McGill and Queen's students debated in Kingston about something called the Sirois report. We'll have to look up the back papers as we believe there was some sort of a discussion on it in Ottawa some time ago.

EARLY BIRD

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Old Rain Face dropped a line to say, he saw a robin yesterday, the first one there this year; the robin perched upon a limb, not very far away from him, without a touch of fear.

¶ And Rain Face says that it means Spring, the sign's as right as anything, he's sure as he can be; he'd bet inside two weeks or so, we would be rid of ice and snow, just stick around and see.

¶ I think that Rain Face is a fake, or else he's made a bad mistake, my faith in him runs dry; he prophesied four months ago, about a winter free from snow, I've piled the stuff up high.

¶ I'm worried on that robin though, a foolish bird right well I know, bent on an early start; 'twould listen not to other birds, spurned all the warning of their words, and thought that it was smart.

¶ It could sit by my kitchen range, until the temperature might change, a ribbon on its neck; if it sits out on nights like these, I fear 'twill tremble at the knees, and be the season's wreck.

¶ If I could catch that robin bird, I'd speak to it a warning word, it came up here alone; instead of it being praised and thanked, much better if 'twere soundly spanked—and told to head for home.

$2,000 Allowed Each Minister For Motor Car

From the House of Commons Hansard

MR. A. R. ADAMSON (Con., York West): There is today a feeling in Canada that the Government is not exercising the greatest economy, or all the economy it might. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask the Minister of Finance (Mr. Ilsley) a straight question, and resume my seat in order that he may answer. Is it true that in Canada today Cabinet Ministers are allowed and receive the sum of $2,000 a year for a motor-car?

Mr. MACDONALD (Brantford City): Read the estimates.

Mr. ADAMSON: The Minister indicates that that is so. I am glad to get the Minister's admission; I thought the item was in the estimates. The people of Canada also know that. They say: Here are Cabinet Ministers each drawing $2,000 a year for a motor-car. Most people consider that very excessive. I fully realize that the saving of $30,000 or $32,000 or $34,000, if this item were struck out of the estimates, would be a comparatively small matter. But what is important is that it would show the man in the factory who is asked to give up one hour, two hours, three hours, or half a day's pay every week, that the Government are willing to economize for this war effort right in the highest tribunal in the land.

Mr. MACDONALD: Who is asking anyone to give up half a day's pay?

Mr. ADAMSON: The workers in several industries in my riding have been asked to give up half a day's pay.

Mr. MACDONALD: For War Savings Certificates.

Mr. ADAMSON: Exactly.

Mr. MACDONALD: Does the hon. member know that the Cabinet Ministers are buying War Savings Certificates?

Mr. ADAMSON: But they are also receiving $2,000 a year for a motor-car. And the public in Canada do not consider that justified, whether the hon. member does or not.

Mr. MACDONALD: The hon. member asked—

Mr. ADAMSON: Mr. Speaker, I have the floor. The hon. gentleman can speak afterwards.

Mr. MACDONALD: I understood the hon. member was asking me a question.

Mr. ADAMSON: I am not; I was not addressing the hon. member.

On occasions I find myself in the position of driving on His Majesty's business in Canada, using my own motor-car. I find that the system in general use throughout this country is to pay six cents a mile to a man using his own motor-car on the Government service.

Mr. CRUICKSHANK: May I ask the hon. member a question?

Mr. ADAMSON: I ask the hon. gentleman to be seated. I have the floor. I am interested to see that this discussion has awakened so much interest.

Mr. MACDONALD: Will the hon. member tell us whether he is in the army himself?

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): That is not a proper question.

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. The hon. member has said that he does not desire to have his speech interrupted.

Mr. MACDONALD: He should not cast aspersions on other hon. members.

Mr. ADAMSON: If I have cast an aspersion on any hon. member, I am very sorry. The hon. member must have an extremely thin skin. I am dealing with a question of psychology, and suggesting that the Ministers give up this $2,000 for the good of the country.

Mr. CRUICKSHANK: What about the leader of the Opposition?

Mr. ADAMSON: Yes; I would even suggest that.

NIGHT LIFE BELOW

LONDON Transport officials make a nightly census of the numbers of people who use the Underground and Tube stations and tunnels as air raid shelters. The highest figure recorded—177,500—was on the night of September 27, for Londoners had been made uneasy by heavy raids over both central and suburban areas on the night of the 26th, and were taking no chances. The average figure in October was 138,000, and November 116,000. On Christmas night it dropped to 75,000. The present figure is 96,000. According to shelter officials, most of their guests are asleep by 10.30. London's Tube stations afford very much better accommodation than the large public shelters in many a provincial town, and Lord Horder, after touring those at Manchester, advised people to stay at home during raids.—The War Illustrated.

EFFECTIVE ACTION

IN the Western Ontario village of Chatsworth, a reeve and three councillors who were disgusted at the general lack of public interest hit upon a way to rouse the residents out of their doldrums. After two nomination meetings had failed to produce a candidate for a vacant seat on council, the reeve and his colleague resigned in a body. The community could either wake up and show a little interest or there would be no council in Chatsworth this year.

The plan worked very well. A nomination meeting was held and there were 14 candidates. Of this total, nine qualified for the four council seats. The reeve was returned by acclamation.—Cornwall Standard-Freeholder.

• Cheese is a Munition of War

WITH natural emphasis placed on the production of equipment for the fighting forces, 'planes, tanks, guns and munitions, the fact that Canadians have guaranteed the people of Britain foodstuffs in vast quantities is sometimes lost sight of.

Lord Woolton, the British Food Minister, notes the Ottawa Journal, recently told the House of Lords transfer of shipping to more urgent needs had caused a temporary food shortage in Britain. He listed food urgently needed, and emphasized that cheese headed the list of essentials.

This statement holds special interest for Canadians. Canada has contracted to supply 120 million pounds of cheese to Britain this year, but the British Food Ministry has made it clear any amount over this can and will be taken. It is the only food requirement for which the Canadian order is unlimited. Most of the order will have to be filled in Eastern Ontario, by farmers living within a 150-mile radius of Ottawa.

Two new factors make this great Eastern Ontario farm industry doubly important in the war effort. Both have to do with shipping difficulties. Should war spread to the Pacific the vast supplies of cheese, dairy products and meat going from New Zealand and Australia to Britain would be in danger. Need for fast refrigerated ships to take food supplies on the long journey to Africa has seriously interfered with the amount of meat reaching Britain. Result has been a sharp upward demand for cheese. At any time during coming months Canada may be asked to ship every pound available or which can possibly be made. The shorter ocean haul makes the Canadian supply the more easily available.

All of which make a matter of supreme importance in the war effort decisions arrived at by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association at its Toronto convention, and the campaign of the Dominion and Ontario Departments of Agriculture to increase milk supply. Farmers producing milk for cheese making are still not satisfied with the price they will receive, but at their meeting price was discussed as a matter of secondary importance to the need for stepping up production. By unanimous vote the producers agreed to co-operate in every way, to spend their own funds on a publicity campaign, to bend every effort to make the cheese which Britain needs.

Their job is just about as important to Britain's war effort as is the making of guns and munitions.

To The Editor

HOUSE WRECKED

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I saw something in the paper a couple of weeks ago about a house being broken into at Fowler's Corners. I have a house near Confederation School that would put that one in the shade. The interior looks like a bombed house in London; yards of plaster torn off, storm doors stolen or burned, shelves in the pantry torn down, all the wood work around the sink torn away I suppose for fire wood.

The cellar windows were stolen, and three different times the walls were defaced, picture mold stolen, windows broken, kitchen sink stolen, boards torn off the back verandah.

One of the last tenants in the house worked in a factory and the place was convenient for him, nice green fields for his children to play on and close to a nice school. He left owing about $80 in rent and a $3.50 electric light bill to be paid. Those people will I suppose be telling others what a bad man Hitler is.

I see where two boys in Orillia broke into houses and they got two years. If the party should see this he might bring back the kitchen sink rather than receive that sort of treatment, or I might write to Toronto and have them send some provincial police to find it. Then the hall door was taken off its hinges, ready to be taken away when the opportunity came. I have seen pictures of bombed houses in London, but some of them were no worse than mine.

INFORMATION!

ACCORDING to the Mayor of Ilford our old but sometimes misguided friend, is once more in search of the obvious. It has asked him to send it, twice a week, a written report about the morale of the citizens.

We must presume that it really wants to know. If it does, we can tell it all about the morale of the people of Ilford — and of people everywhere else in Britain—in five short words.

Their morale is all right.

Having revealed that rather self-evident fact, we may suggest that the Ministry turn its inquiring nose towards a more promising place.—London Evening News.

GOOD NEWS

(Country Gentleman)

"It's no use, I can't keep up the payments on this car," said the man. "We'll have to let the finance company take it away."

"Oh, goody," cried the wife, "I knew you'd get a brand new one, John."

A Bit of Nonsense

Glasgow Escort

Two girls were returning from their work at a Glasgow canteen.

"Me accompany you?" said a soldier's voice in the darkness.

"No thank you," said the girls.

But the soldier trotted beside them, repeating persuasively, "Me accompany you?"

"Are you French?" said one of the girls at length.

"Oh, no," he replied.

"Are you Dutch?" they asked.

"No."

"Belgian?"

"No."

"Norwegian?"

"No."

"Polish?"

"No."

"Czechoslovak?"

"No."

"What are you, then?" they asked.

"The truth is," he admitted in the broadest of Scots accents, "Ah come frae Kirriemuir. But the lasses'll no look at ye these days unless ye speak wi' a foreign accent."

TOPICAL REPLY

THE TRAM, bound for the centre of Leeds, was full, and the conductor said so politely but firmly at the next stop.

"Can't you squeeze one in downstairs?" pleaded a woman standing at the stop.

"Sorry," said the conductor, shaking his head.

"What about upstairs?"

"Absolutely packed."

As the tram began to move away, the woman called desperately:

"Well, don't you want a roof spotter?"—Yorkshire Post.

Dog Gets Laughs As Experts Try Gas Test

LONDON, Feb. 26—(AP).—Officials tried today to show London how a gas attack works but Londoners didn't pay much attention, except for a laugh or two.

Gas was sprayed in a bombed street while 200 citizens looked on.

"Gas," yelled a warden and gas masks popped out everywhere.

A stray dog, unmindful of the importance of the occasion, appeared on the scene. The procedure was halted while wardens dashed about crying: "Who owns the dog?"

The owner was not found and a bobby chased the dog away as spectators laughed.

A loudspeaker explained what was happening.

"High explosives hit first," the speaker said. "Then this gas is dropped. Many injured are in the buildings, some trapped."

Two helmeted and gas-masked figures—in oil skins with strange curtains around their necks—rushed from the house carrying three girls and two tailors' dummies.

A stretcher gang arrived. So did the stray dog again. A bobby in gas clothes made after the dog.

Here a yellow-helmeted gang arrived and quickly inspected some the food, trying to salvage some of it.

"Stand back please," warned a warden, "this gas may be unpleasant as the wind has shifted."

An old lady came by and tried to get through the gassed area.

"Halt, madam," warned a warden, "there's gas attack going on."

"I don't care, I'm late to work," she cried.

Whipping on a gas mask, she pushed through, neatly stepping over the spots where the gas had been dropped.

Sees Early Fall Of Duce's African Empire

(Written for The Canadian Press by MAJ.-GEN. SIR CHARLES GWYNN.)

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (CP). — While one by one the coast fortresses of Italian Libya fall before the advancing Imperial Army of the Nile, British troops may soon bring about the fall of Italy's East African Empire.

Let us look at the situation around the western and southern sides—the Ethiopia-Sudan and the Ethiopia-Kenya borders. The frontier follows closely the limits of the high ground, generally marked by a continuous escarpment. Because of the blockade, ports are no longer of importance as bases, except in so far as stores have been accumulated at them.

A certain amount of food supplies may be brought in and blockade runners may have landed small consignments of war stores at ports on the Somaliland coast, of which Mogadishu is the most important port. At these ports, however, Italian ships have to lie off. Goods are landed by lighter, often with interruptions by weather. All ports are subject to bombing attacks from Kenya and Aden.

Italian East Africa thus is dependent on accumulated reserves of warlike stores including petrol. Of these reserves, petrol is especially important. Food supplies produced in the country would normally suffice for the modest needs of the Italian soldiers, but with the increasing unrest, it is probably becoming difficult to get native-grown food.

Strength of Forces.

Actual strength of the Italian force in East Africa is difficult to estimate. There are several metropolitan and blackshirt divisions, and, in addition, large numbers of native troops of varying military value from trained units down to tribal levies. A considerable number of Ethiopians have also been enlisted and trained. Italian laborers and colonists are also potential fighting men and there are a large number of these.

Until recently the Italians were on the offensive from their East African Empire. They are now retreating on all fronts. Their main offensive concentrations were at Diredawa on the Jibouti-Addis Ababa railway. This force was primarily intended for an attack on Jibouti, if it joined the Free French forces. It was ultimately used for the capture of British Somaliland. The other main force was concentrated in Eritrea. Designed for the invasion of the Sudan, it captured Kassala at an early stage and then stopped. Kassala later was retaken by the British.

Italians Dug In.

As British forces in the Sudan were weak at the time, delaying and harassing actions were possible. Whether the Italians realized they had insufficient supplies for a far-reaching invasion of the Sudan or whether they wished to synchronize their action with Graziani's armed attack on Egypt is doubtful.

At any rate, they sat down and dug themselves into a defensive position near Kassala. When the Sudanese British force became stronger they were intensively harried. With the defeat of Graziani in Libya, any possibility of effective operations on the Sudan vanished, and Kassala was abandoned as an expensive encumbrance.

The smaller detachments which had crossed at various places the frontier of the Sudan and Kenya were never a serious threat, though they had some nuisance value.

In happy vein, Sapper Troy thanked his friends. Six or seven young people from Peterborough, friends of the young soldier, were also present. Sponsors of the event were Thomas O'Brien and Martin Moher. The following contributed and over half were present: Michael McManus, Joseph O'Connor, Mastai Moher, Joseph Sheehan, Sr., Richard Sheehan, Sr., Charles Towns, Joseph Allen, James Moher (South), William Towns, Joseph Towns, Patrick O'Grady, Thomas O'Brien, Clement O'Brien, a friend, John Moher, Frank Kennedy, Frank Sullivan, Frank Towns, Thomas Sheehan, Leo Moher, and Hubert Allen.

Plenty Of Rest Is Best Treatment

DOURO, Feb. 26 — (ENS).— Dr. D. Munro of Warsaw, Medical Officer of Health for Douro Township, gave a talk to the members of the home economics and home nursing class last week. In his kindly, happy way, Dr. Munro told the class what to do in emergencies till the doctor arrives, or what to do if one does not call a doctor. One statement he made that "it is almost impossible to get the average he-man to get into bed and keep quiet and warm when he has a bad cold or other ailment." So he must be sent to hospital, "and when he is in jail he has to do what he is told." Rest in bed with plenty of warm fruit juices or any kind of warm drinks is the best treatment for flu or a bad cold.

COBOURG POLICE DEFEAT PETES

Heavy Checking, Tall Shooting Mark 13-10 Game

Hockey extraordinary was dished out for the benefit of 1,000 fans at Brock Street Rink last night when the Peterborough and Cobourg police tangled in a game in behalf of the British War Victims Fund. The visitors won the argument by a score of 13 to 10 with all the polling subdivisions heard from. They were in front 5 to 4 at the end of the first period and 9 to 5 at the close of the second.

The Peterborough-Lindsay-Omemee-Norwood-Lakefield outfit have an idea that they were outsmarted by the cops from the county town of the united counties. The talent scouts of that organization imported one Hagerman of Port Hope and he about represented the difference between the two teams, firing in five goals.

With Mister Hagerman off the lineup it would have been one of those nip-and-tuck affairs that are closer than the next second for the rival organizations looked about on a par.

However no international complications are expected to arise out of the incident. It was all in the spirit of good, clean fun and the spectators enjoyed it, whether the players were skimming around the ice with the greatest of ease or standing on one ear, both of which they were at times. There were occasions when rushes were engineered with such speed that the rink staff locked the front doors to keep the contestants from going right out into Brock street. There were wrist shots and backhanders and golf strokes and some of the rivals did a little croquet technique once in a while.

Referees Bert McLeod of Peterborough and Bill Oliver of Cobourg only rang their bells 23 times, once every time a goal was scored. Otherwise they were busy trying to keep from being run down by the stampeding players, most of whom tried to take the shortest route to the goal and refused to detour under any circumstance. With 23 goals scored and not an offside called or a penalty imposed the battling constabulary established some kind of a record.

Some Tall Shooting

The first period was fairly even with the Peterborough peelers getting an early lead thanks to a great degree to some deluxe shooting by Two-Gun Irvin Lyons who slapped in one goal and then followed with a classy backhander to the top corner of the net for another. The fish and game overseer covered a lot of ice both vertically and horizontally. Freddy Morris, Royal Canadian Mounted, drove home a couple of goals for Cobourg and Hagerman and the two Records also rang the bell with the result that the invaders led 5 to 4 at the end of the period Chief Baker of Norwood with a Wally Stanowski rush evened up the count early in the second period but the Hagerman menace began to get in its effect and a bullet-drive by the Port Hoper put the visitors in front. Goals by Lockwood, Carey and Record made it 9 to 5 at the close of the session.

Early in the last Stanza Reeves and Baker broke through for two goals for the Peterborough team making it 9 to 7 but Hagerman matched that pair with a couple of his own to make it 11 to 7. Once more the home force gathered in another pair to close the gap, Reeves and McGillen scoring and again the visitors replied with two on their account before Gordon Broughton tallied the final goal.

For the visitors Hagerman was outstanding and the Records and Morris with Carl Lockwood and Jack Rogers on the defence were always prominent. Reeves of Lindsay, Baker of Norwood and McGillen of Peterborough were the pick for the Peterborough gang. Hugh McKellar and Lloyd McClure, two provincial traffic officers played goal for the respective teams and had a busy night fishing the puck out of the nets, and rubbing the sore spots when they got hit.

The lineup ran something like this:

Cobourg: Goal, McKellar; defence, Lockwood, Rogers; centre, Carey; wings, Morris, Lindsay; subs, Chief Richards of Millbrook, Chief George Hardy of Campbelford, John Ewart Hagerman, J. Record, Sr., J. Record, Jr., Port Hope.

Peterborough: Goal, McClure; defence, Chief Baker of Norwood, McBrien of Lindsay; centre, McGillen; wings, Sexsmith, Mesley, Peterborough; subs, Chief Pitts of Omemee, Chief Hendren of Lakefield; Overseer I. J. Lyons, Constable Reeves of Lindsay, Constable Timnett of Lindsay, Hardy, Trennum, Peterborough.

After the game the two clubs fraternized at a very enjoyable banquet held in the Hotel Champlain where a fine repast wasa served. Detective-Sergeant W. E. Meagher presided and short speeches were made by some of the players, their wives and by Referees Bert McLeod and Bill Oliver. The toast to the King was honored and the gathering sang "There'll Always Be An England" and other patriotic songs. Thanks was extended to Miss Mary Robertson of the Hotel Champlain and her staff for the manner in which the banquet had been arranged and served.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. faced the puck at the opening of the game and conducted the draw for the door prizes. The winning numbers were 244 for the electric clock donated by the Western Clock Company, 1205 for the half ton of coal donated by the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company and 764 for the rug provided by Canadian Department Stores.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Bryan Hextall of New York Rangers strengthened his hold on third place in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race last night by scoring once as the Rangers ended Boston's undefeated streak with a 2-0 victory. The leading Bill Cowley went pointless as the Bruins were shutout but Syl Apps of Toronto failed to gain in second place when he also was held pointless as the Leafs tied the Americans, 4-4, in the other game. The only other Big Seven changes were made by Lynn Patrick of the Rangers, who picked up one assist to tie Gordie Drillon of Toronto for fifth place, and dave (Sweeney) Schriner of Toronto, who also bagged one assist to move into a four-way tie for the last berth.

The leaders:

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

The Petes will have their backs to the wall tonight. They clash with the Kingston Combines at Brock St. Rink in the fourth game of the group playoff series and must win to stay in the running. If they fail to come through the round is over and the Kingston club are group champions. If they win the series is extended to five games and everything will then depend upon the result of the fifth game to be played in Kingston Friday night. Everything is therefore at stake and that makes tonight's game the most important of the season. By the same token it should be the most determinedly fought, the fastest and the most exciting struggle of the entire campaign. Both outfits will put on the pressure early and there should be few dull moments in the hour's play. The winter's biggest crowd will jam into the ice box for the battle which starts at 8.30 o'clock.

* * * * * *

The Petes are still full of confidence and full of fight. They claim they were outlucked rather than outplayed in Monday's game at Kingston when they had 50 shots on the night's play as against 37 by the Combines and still lost out, and that tonight they are going to carry the battle to the Kingston gang and make their own breaks. This Peterborough team has the faculty of coming through with its best performances when the going is toughest and now that the Petes have found themselves within a game of elimination local fans are counting upon them snapping back into winning form. They did it against Belleville when after playing a bad game at Belleville they came right back to defeat the Reliance team here 9 to 2. They're a battling team, these Petes, or they might have folded up before this in view of the blows they have had from injury and illness since the playoffs started.

* * * * * *

We imagine that if the Kingston Combines had been asked to battle out this series minus such players as Doug White, Jim Neilson, Clare Williamson, Bobby Neilson and Walt Gerow from all or some of the games against the Petes with their full lineup going strong they would have found it a tough racket. Yet the Petes have been without Jim Ellis, Drake Jopling, Don Crowe, Jack Gardner, Eddie Starr and Joe Blewett, in all or some of the playoff games and still have made every game a battle until the final minute of play. Monday night Don Crowe could not make the trip to Kingston and with Gardner off there was a defence man mising. Tonight, Crowe is expected to be here but Jopling will likely be an absentee. Both Ellis and Blewett are definitely out and the lineup will not be known until game time.

Police On Skates

The British War Victims' Fund will get a sizable contribution out of the Cobourg-Peterborough police hockey battle at Brock St. Rink last night and that in itself more than justifies holding the affair. But the game was a success on its own account and the crowd got a big kick out of it. Police, mounties, provincial and municipal from three counties were all assembled out there in a melange of spills and thrills. Some had difficulty in skating, some could only shift one way, but they all pursued the puck with a right good will, and when knocked over, rolled on to their feet again and resumed the chase of the elusive disc. There were goals galore, no offsides and no penalties, nothing indeed to stop the players but the end of the rink and the sideboards and they all took a beating before the high-scoring carnival was over. It was a big night.

One of the classiest basketball arguments of the season looms up Saturday night when Outboard Marines will clash with Trenton Flyers in the local Y.M.C.A. in the first game of the intermediate O.A.B.A. group playoffs. The Outboards have sailed through the regular schedule without a defeat and the Flyers have also had a good record during the group race. They are stronger now than when the Outboards met them early in the season and they will undoubtedly be the strongest opposition the Peterborough team has had to face in an O.A.B.A. fixture this season. In fact the local entry will have to play up to the top of its form to take the classy Air Force outfit into camp. The junior O.A.B.A. team will likely be matched against the Collegiate senior team as a curtain-raiser to the playoff fixture. It will make an attractive double bill for Saturday night.

Peterborough's juvenile hockey club has been awarded this group in the O.J.H.A. series without a playoff by reason of their feat in going through the schedule without a loss to finish on top. The local juveniles have been drawn against Haliburton in the first round of the playdowns and the first game of the series will be staged later this week. Manager Cec Courneya is looking for another centre ice player for his squad and youngsters who would like a tryout for the position are asked to report to him tonight when the juveniles will practice at the Sacred Heart Rink between 7 and 8 o'clock.

The Bruins Stopped At Last

Everything comes to an end sooner or later, even the Boston Bruins' run of unbeaten games. After going through 23 games without getting worse than a tie, the string starting on December 21, Art Ross's team finally had to admit defeat last night when the New York Rangers shut them out 2 to 0 in a game in which the Bruins had much the better of the play and yet lost out. The break came when Hastings' favorite citizen, Dit Clapper, the game's greatest defence man right now, drew two penalties in quick succesion and the Rangers were prompt in cashing in on them. Babe Pratt supplying the driving power for both counters with Hextall and Hiller doing the shooting. The loss dropped Boston a full game behind the Toronto Leafs but the Bruins have one more game to play than have Hap Day's men.

* * * * * *

Toronto had a bad night at New York where the best they could do was to get a 4-4 tie with the Amerks and had to come from behind four times to do that. The worst feature about it, however, was that the game cost them the services of Syl Apps, their captain and centre ice star who tore the cartilage in his left knee when he collided with Hooley Smith. Apps will likely be out for some time and the accident will not only rob him of a good chance to finish first in the scoring records but it may also cost the Leafs the N.H.L. championship. With the Bruins roaring at their heels the Toronto gang cannot spare a player who adds as much punch to the team as does Apps. He is one of a long list of players who have been injured this season.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Hooley Smith bagged his 200th goal last night....He'll get no cheers in Toronto however with Apps injured after colliding with the veteran Hooley....Babe Dahlgren, Yanks' first baseman has been sold to the Boston Bees and Johnny Sturm of Kansas City is booked for the initial sack in the Yankee infield....Oshawa Bees will be here Friday night for the fourth game in the junior playoff series. The local Colts are leading 2 to 1....Last night's shutout was the first scored by Dave Kerr of the Rangers this season. He stopped 32 Boston shots....Dave Castilloux won his lightweight fight with Tommy Spiegel of Uniontown, P., last night but not before the fight had degenerated into a barroom brawl. It was so bad they fined Castilloux for rough tactics but yet allowed him to win the bout.

Coach Is Socked

QUEBEC, Feb. 26.—(CP)—Frank Carlin, coach of Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, escaped injury last night when a unidentified spectator punched him in the face and broke his glasses.

The coach was on the way to the Royals' dresing room after they bowed 4-0 to Quebec Royal Rifles in the second game of a best-of five series for the league championship.

A large crowd soon gathered around the visiting club's dressing-room door, but police stepped in and made them scatter.

RANGERS BREAK BOSTON'S STRING AT 23 WITH A 2 TO 0 WIN

Wearied Leafs Draw Amerks; Apps Injured

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—(CP). — The strain of adding to a record likely in its present form to survive the test of a good number of years fell off for Boston Bruins to-day, clearing the deck for a sizzling two-team battle for the National Hockey League championship in the remaining few games of the schedule.

New York Rangers, whose long rivalry with Boston has written history, invaded the stronghold of the Bruins last night to come through with a 2-0 decision that saw Davie Kerr bag his first shutout of the season. The result snapped the Boston sequence at 23 games without a loss—15 victories and eight draws.

The Bruins started the string in fourth place and even the brilliant sequence proved insufficient to shoot them ahead of all competition. One team, the front-running Toronto Maple Leafs, responded to the lash and their early margin stood up save for one brief spell.

While the Bruins were losing to the Rangers, the Leafs pulled out a 4-4 draw last night with the cellar-dwelling New York Americans and the result put them two points in front of Boston.

Smith Makes "200 Club."

Almost shunted aside in the fall of the record-holder was another event almost as noteworthy—the entrance of the veteran Reginald J. (Hooley) Smith to the N.H.L. "200 Club."

The hardy campaigner of 17 big-league seasons scored his 200th league goal to start the Americans to the draw with the Leafs.

Hooley joined a group of three other active players in the club—his two team-mates, Harvey Jackson and Charlie Conacher, and Captain Aubrey (Dit) Clapper of Boston. Both the other two Amerks got a goal in the draw with Toronto, Conacher counting his 225th and Jackson his 206th.

Fighting to retain a playoff chance, the Americans four times took the lead in the game before 6,572 fans at New York, only to have Toronto match each goal. The fourth Amerk goal went to young Bus Wycherley, while Red Heron got two for the Leafs and Billy Taylor and Bucko McDonald counted the others.

The Leafs suffered a possible big blow for their upcoming title battle with the Bruins when Syl Apps, their high-scoring centre, was injured in the match.

Before 16,086 fans at Boston meanwhile, the Bruins fell before a late Ranger drive after Kerr and Frankie Brimsek had staged a brilliant goaling duel for two periods and almost 13 minutes of the next. A penalty to Clapper paved the way for the first New York goal, scored by Bryan Hextall.

Just after he returned, Clapper was again banished and again Rangers counted, with Dutch Hiller this time the marksman.

Castilloux Aims At World Title; Whips Spiegel

TORONTO, Feb. 26 — (C). — Raoul Godbout, manager of Dave Castilloux made plans today to arrange top-ranking bouts for the Canadian lightweight boxing champion that might lead him to a world's championship match following the ending of his winter feud here last night with durable Tommy Spiegel of Uniontown, Pa.

Castilloux last night ended all doubts whether he was better than the crippled American fighter when he punched out an unanimous 12-round dicision. It was his second victory in three bouts over Spiegel who scored an upset victory the first time they met more than two months ago.

The bout last night, although rough and marked by frequent fouls, was not as pulse-throbbing as the first two. Following the match, Referee Billy Burke fined the Canadian titleholder $25 for fouling twice in the 11th round after being warned previously. The Ontario Athletic Commission upheld the fine as a "warning" such fighting methods would not be tolerated in the province.

For the first six rounds both fighters showed considerable respect for each other and it was not until the seventh round that they gave the crowd of 5,000 much to cheer about.

The bout reached the climax in the 10th and 11th rounds. At the start of the 10th Castilloux' manager yelled for the referee to come to Castilloux' corner so he could lay a complaint about what he claimed was the "interference of a photographer who was influencing one of the judges."

Instead of heeding, Burke started to count over Castilloux who had remained on his stool when the bell rang. The referee reached the count of one before Castilloux leaped from his corner. It was the first time that the Montreal fighter had ever had a referee toll a count over him.

The winner scaled 134¼ and Spiegel 132¼.

Hartnett Back Behind Plate

MIAMI, Feb. 26—(AP).—Without much doubt the happiest athlete in the Giants' training camp is Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, 40, the man who had to lose his job to win his nickname "Laughing Boy."

Gabby is back now doing what he loves to best and what he never should have let them stop him doing. He is catching baseball again.

He is the old Gabby, so full of pep and hustle and general good spirits that he is about to work himself into a 200-pound shadow. His salary probably is less than half what it was last year, and he is only a second-string catcher to Harry Danning, but he goes around grinning like a guy with a tax-free pass to the mint.

Gabby's friends need not feel bad about his losing the Chicago job. Though he won a pennant in 1938 and proved himself a capable manager from a technical standpoint, the position appeared to weigh on him mentally and affected his grand disposition.

But that episode is over now, and the big fellow is back in harness and happy.

Greenberg Is Due For Call In June

DETROIT, Feb. 26.—(AP)—The draft board handling the case of Hank Greenberg said today that the outfielder with Detroit Tigers of the American League had been placed in class 1 and that he would be called for induction in regular order, presumably next June.

Ben O. Shepherd, chairman of Board 23, said in an official statement that Greenberg had suggested in his draft questionnaire that he be placed in class 2, which would have permitted six months' deferment.

Shepherd said that in the selective service questionnaire regarding occupation deferment, 29, had asserted that as "my years of earning power are limited, one year out of action will reduced my effectiveness considerably." He said Greenberg added that "I shall not be able to resume my present capacity after one year's absence."

Greenberg's sub-classification in Class 1 will be determined after the required physical examination, Shepherd said.

Training Highlights From Ball Camps

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 26—(CP). — Manager Bill McKechnie is "high" on Monte Pearson, Cincinnati Reds' ex-Yankee pitcher. And Monte is confidence he'll do well with the National League brand of world champions. "I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could help McKechnie," he said today.

TAMPA, Fla.—It's beginning to look bad for the opposition already (maybe). Pitchers Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters knocked out home-run balls yesterday, first of the training season for the champion Cincinnati Reds.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—Arky Vaughan, only unsigned regular of Pittsburg Pirates, arrived in camp yesterday with a young protege. He's Leroy Buckmaster, a pitcher who hurled a couple of no-hit games last year for Fullerton, Calif., high school, and will be given a tryout.

ORLANDO, Fla.—It's a battle between young Jimmy Pofahl, Buddy Myer and Jimmy Bloodworth for the second-base spot on the Washington Senators lineup.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The ranks of New York Yankee holdouts were reduced to eight today as three more players came into the fold. They were Pitcher Spurgeon Chandler, Red Rolfe and Frankie Crosetti.

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Gerry Walker led a contingent of infielders and outfielders into Cleveland Indians' camp yesterday, and promptly predicted a pennant for the Tribe. "Frankly, I don't see how we can miss," he said. "We've got the pitching, the field and the punch. Who's going to beat us?"

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Boston Bees are convinced their infield "problem" has been solved by the purchase of First Baseman Elsworth Babe Dahlgren from the Yankees. The announcement started speculation on the future of May West and Buddy Hassett, who have been alternating at the first sack.

Novikoff Still Puzzling Fans

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—(AP).— The baseball-hungry public has been devouring choice tidbits all winter in periodicals about eccentric Lou Novikoff, but the ever-skeptical fans still don't know if he's a big league ball player.

He isn't far from being the most noted rookie who ever graduated to the major leaguers.

Novikoff in many ways has earned the buildup. He led the Pacific Coast League last year in batting with a .363 mark and topped the circuit in home runs, runs batted in, runs scored, total hits and total bases. He previously had led the Texas and Three-Eye Leagues in batting.

But these figures are particularly unimpressive to Cub fans who have seen three champion sluggers of the minors fail to solve the big league pitching in the past five years.

Remember When—

By The Canadian Press.

Babe Ruth signed a three-year contract as player, assistant manager and second vice-president of Boston Braves four years ago today after 15 seasons with New York Yankees. Differences with the National League Club's executive led to the Babe being given his unconditional release nearly four months later.

Ball Set-Up Lists Many Shifts For International

By DILLON GRAHAM
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 — (AP). — The fast International Baseball League is sending more rookies to major league spring training camps than any other loop and about a dozen, led by batting champion Murray Howell, are likely to stick.

Howell, Baltimore outfielder whose .360 average won the hitting crown, was drafted by Cleveland Indians. Howell banged out 20 home runs and drove in 119 runs for the Baltimore Orioles.

Baltimore is also sending Bill Nagel to Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, Eddie Collins to the Athletics, Lamar Newsome to the Red Sox, and Nick Etten to the Phillies. Nagel, an infielder, was the home run champion with 37, and Etten, a first baseman knocked in the most runs, 126. Newsome, an infielder, formerly was with the A's. Collins is the son of the former great A's second baseman, and now Boston Red Sox general manager.

Newark promotes second baseman Alex Karmouris, former big leaguer, to the Brooklyn Dodgers, third baseman Henry Majecki to the Bees, and seven others to the New York Yankees. These are Tommy Holmes, likely to win an outfield job; Lou Blair, who may become a utility infielder; and Pitchers Geo. Barley, Norman Branch, Allen Gettel, George Washburn, and Steve Peek. Washburn, who was the league's top striker-outer with 141, won the most games—16. Peek had the longest winning streak of the year, 13 victories.

Detroit will look over a quartette from Buffalo: Pitchers Floyd Goibell, who came up late last season and outpitched Bob Feller to win the game that cinched the American League pennant; Fred Hutchinson, who also spent a while last year with Detroit, and Hal White, who won 16 while losing only four, and Outfielder Pat Mullin.

Mike Ryba, the one-man gang from Rochester, gets a trial with the Boston Red Sox. Ryba did a hurling chore last year and won 24 games while losing eight. Rochester also is sending to the St. Louis Cardinals pitchers Henry Gornicki, who won 19 games, John Grodzicki, Elwin Roe, and Hershell Lyons, who won 19. Infielder Frank Crespi and outfielder Estel Crabtree are making the same trip.

Hard-hitting Catcher Clyde McCullough, who banged out a .324 average, goes from Buffalo to the Chicago Cubs, who will also give Bob Sturgeon of Jersey City the once-over.

Brooklyn will inspect pitchers Steve Rachunok, Max, Macon, and Kemp Wicker, catcher Angilo Guillani, and outfielder George Staller from Montreal. Jersey City is sending pitchers Clydell Castleman and John Wittig and catcher Rae Blaemire to the New York Giants.

Toronto ships pitchers Lester McCrabb and Phil Marchildon, infielder Fred Chapman, and Eric Tipton, former Duke football star, to the Philadelphia Athletics. Pitchers Bill Clemenson, Lloyd Dietz, Catcher Rae Mueller, and infielder Ed Leip of Syracuse are tagged for Pittsburg Pirates, and pitcher Geo. Barnicle to the Boston Bees.

Pitcher Ira Hutchinson of Montreal goes to the Cards; Catcher Bob Scheffins of Rochester to the Cubs; Infielder Wayne Ambler of Jersey City to the Reds, and Infielder Vernon James of Jersey City to the Senators; Pitcher Ed Crouch of Montreal, and Tom Hughes, Dale Jones and Stan Benjamin of Baltimore all go to the Phillies.

12 British Ships Week's Loss, 5 Of 19 Convoy

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (CP). — Twelve British and Allied merchant ships totalling 37,636 tons were sunk during th week ended Feb. 16, compared with 29,806 tons the previous week, the Admiralty reported to-day.

An Admiralty statement said:

"The losses include five vessels, four British and one Allied, totalling 23,986 tons known to have been sunk by the raider which attacked a convoy off the Azores on Feb. 12.

"Following its usual practice of making announcements and claims before there had been any opportunity to check the facts, the German High Command announced Feb. 14 that in this attack a German raider had sunk 14 ships totalling 82,000 tons.

"The facts are that of 19 ships in the convoy, 10 are known to be safe and four others (three British and one Allied) totalling 19,698 tons are not yet overdue."

The Admiralty added that the German claims for the week totalled 185,000 tons of merchant shipping sunk.

A naval spokesman also declared there was no truth in Hitler's assertion yesterday that 215,000 tons of shipping had been sunk by the German navy in the previous two days.

"Nothing extraordinary" has happened recently, the spokesman said.

Shipping losses are announced a week after they occur for reasons of security and to permit confirmation.

Official sources, who frankly admit Britain's ability to combat the oncoming German spring sea offensive may decide the course of the war, said the increase of losses during the week ended Feb. 16 over the previous week was not alarming, adding that such fluctuations were to be expected.

They explained the week's losses, including the ships lost in the raided convoy, were still slightly under the January weekly average of 37,916 tons, and well below the average for the war of 62,536 tons.

Mackey said he thought that Sir Frederick, a passenger in the plane being ferried to Britain, and the other two members of the crew had obeyed his orders to jump. He didn't know that they hadn't until the plane crashed onto a frozen pond, smashing the left wheel. Then the dragging undercarriage threw the plane around and smashed it into trees bordering the lake.

Airmen here first knew of the tragedy when a plane flying over the spot sighted a message Mackey had painstakingly tramped out in large letters on the snow.

"Three dead Joe" read the message.

The small plane whose pilot spotted the message turned back to Musgrave Harbor, 10 miles from the scene of the crash, and dropped a message to trappers on the outskirts of the town, who organized the ground party that took Mackey and the three bodies to Musgrave Harbor, there to await transportation to Newfoundland airport and thence to Canada.

Sir Frederick, a major in the Canadian Army Medical Corps, was flying to Britain in connection with medical research work.

Capt. Mackey was a resident of Kansas City. Bird was a native of Kidderminster, Eng., while Snailham lived at Bedford, N.S.

Lord Cranborne Visits Newfoundland

Happened Thursday Night

Word from Musgrave harbor was that the crash occurred Thursday night. Cecil Abbott of that settlement said that the airplane was seen heading east that night and later observed flying westward, back toward the Newfoundland airport.

(This conflicted with information at Ottawa, where R.C.A.F. officials said the plane, being delivered by a private organization, had been asking for bearings Friday. The bearings were given, and repeated following a later request. Nothing further was heard from the radio of the plane.)

Abbott said that when the ground party arrived, Sir Frederick lay dead in the snow with some of his papers scattered about him, while the other two bodies were in the plane.

Mackey was found to be suffering cuts and head injuries when he was brought into Musgrave Harbor. He was treated there by a district nurse. His injuries were not considered serious.

Canada Pressing

Prime Minister stated Canada was meeting the whole cost of carrying out the board's recommendations insofar as they involve work in Canadian territory.

Today the House turns to further consideration of the $1,300,000,000 War Appropriation Bill which, Mr. King said, contains provision for the work involved in implementing the board's recommendations, including the construction of an airway to Alaska.

"The board has made many recommendations to the Government, some of which have been referred to the Department of National Defence, and others to the Department of National Defence for Air and the Department of National Defence for Naval Services," said Mr. King.

"With possibly one exception, and I am not at all sure that has not been dealt with, all the recommendations have been approved by the administration and steps taken to carry them out."

During the day Mr. King was peppered with questions from the Opposition and the resulting answers touched on the Japanese situation in British Columbia, the St. Lawrence Waterway, the League of Nations, relations with France, and representation of Canada in foreign capitals.

McCarthy New Envoy

Two major announcements came from the Prime Minister—the appointment of Leighton McCarthy, K.C., prominent Toronto lawyer, as Minister to Washington and as a member of the Canadian Privy Council, and a change in the Canadian passport system.

Instead of having two kinds of passports, one for the United States and one for all countries, Canada will have only one. It will cost $3, against $5 for the present all-country passport and $1 for the United States passport, and it will be good for two years against five at present. Each renewal will cost $1.

Mr. McCarthy's appointment met with the full approval of Conservative House Leader Hanson. The new minister will succeed Loring Christie, whose illness prevents him from discharging the duties of the post. Mr. Christie will have extended leave of absence and will retain his status as a minister.

Mr. Hanson's suggestion that the Canadian Legation at Washington be raised to the status of an Embassy, which would mean the official holding the post would be an Ambassador instead of a Minister Plenipotentiary as at present, met with approval from the Prime Minister.

He said there were many reasons for the change, but he had hesitated to move lest his action might be misconstrued as suggesting a tendency to separate from the British Commonwealth.

"Now that I have my honorable friend with me I shall pursue the matter further," said Mr. King.

Shies Off Offending Japan

The Japanese question precipitated a lively debate among British Columbia members. Mr. King said a suggestion from Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) that Japanese immigration be stopped meant an act of exclusion which would be keenly resented by the Japanese as a nation.

He said he thought a suggestion from A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni) that Japanese be asked for their registration certificates when buying railway tickets a good one.

From George Cruickshank (Lib. Fraser Valley) came a suggestion the problem could be solved by shipping all the Japanese in British Columbia to Toronto.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) said the problem would not be solved by discrimination against the Japanese and described the attitude of a few people in British Columbia as "a disgrace to Canada."

Hope that an agreement on the St. Lawrence waterway would be reached shortly was expressed by Mr. King. Pressed by opposition members on the question of the export of power Mr. King said the policy of the government was not to alienate any natural resource, but arrangements might be made to meet temporary local situations.

Munitions Minister Howe, in whose Fort Arthur constituency the Ogoki and Kenogami River diversions are situated, took issue with John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) who repeated his long-standing opposition to those developments.

Mr. MacNicol contended the water being diverted into Lake Superior would some day be needed for developments along its natural course down the Albany River into Hudson Bay. Mr. Howe said the diversion made needed power available at the head of the lakes and the water so diverted would be used for power purposes several times over on its course to the sea through the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence system.

Plea For Cornwall.

Lionel Chevrier (Lib., Stormont) urged consideration to a routing of the outlet of the proposed navigation canal at Cornwall so that it would bring deep-water navigation to the town. He suggested an arbitration board be set up to deal with claims from persons whose property on the St. Lawrence River front might be flooded or otherwise affected.

Mr. King said that by maintaining relations with France, Canada had kept alive a contact which was helpful to the whole British Commonwealth and had occasioned the thanks of Prime Minister Churchill. He expressed hope that sooner or later all the legations and embassies of the British Commonwealth would be re-established in France.

Canada's contribution to the League of Nations for next year is less than for the present year but represents a larger share of the total cost of the League, Mr. King told the House. This was because some nations occupied by Germany and Russia could not contribute and the contributions of others seriously affected by the war, like France, Finland and China, had been greatly reduced.

While work of the League was curtailed, he thought it desirable that the agency be kept alive for better days. Opposition to the League was expressed by Thomas Church (Con., Toronto-Broadview) and Norman Jaques (N.D., Wetaskiwin), but M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House leader, contended the only hope for enduring peace after the present war lay in an international organization for collective security.

Trying The Dutch

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (via Berlin), Feb. 26—(AP).—A German military court heard evidence here to-day against 40 Netherlands citizens accused of leading an organization allegedly formed to "sabotage German army institutions, terrorize Nazi soldiers, and communicate information to the enemy." The organization was said to have been "dissolved."

$25 Wolf Bounty Looming In Ontario Act

TORONTO, Feb. 26 — (C). — Debate on the Speech from the Throne will begin in the Ontario Legislature to-day with Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Conservative Leader, leading off. Premier Hepburn will follow and the two addresses are expected to last most of the afternoon.

It is believed at Queen's Park that Col. Drew for the first time will reveal his stand on the Sirois report.

In the House yesterday the Conservative Leader sought information as to the progress of the Dominion-Provincial negotiations on the St. Lawrence Waterway and he suggested the holding of a secret sitting of the Government hesitated to make public the details.

He said he appreciated that this possibility might exist in view of the war situation and for that reason he said he realized that no public debate should arise on the subject.

This issue, he said, involves "perhaps the most important international agreement which Canada has been concerned with in our life."

Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary and Acting House Leader in the absence of Premier Hepburn, assured Col. Drew he could have access to all the information in the hands of the Government. However, there was nothing that could be made public at the moment.

Early Deal Near.

An early agreement is expected between the Dominion and Ontario Governments concerning the huge project as it affects this province. Negotiations have been in progress for some time and it is believed that only minor details have to be settled.

Nothing official has been released but it is understood the cost of a one-stage development in Ontario will approximate $90,000,000. This development calls for the building of a dam at Barnhart Island, near Cornwall, and the flooding of 19,000 acres including part of Morrisburg and all of Iroquois. The scheme would make available to Ontario 1,100,000 horsepower.

Several bills weer introduced in the House yesterday. An amendment to the Wolf Bounty Act was given first reading. The amendment increases the bounty from $15 to $25 and changes the penalties for claiming bounties twice on the one wolf or claiming bounty on a wolf not shot in Ontario.

Second reading was sought on an amendment to the Devolution of Estates Act but the bill was allowed to stand at the request of Leopold Macaulay (Con., York South), who said he thought it was "a mistake."

The bill would entitle a widow of a man who died intestate to receive the first $1,000 and two-thirds of the remaining estate. At present the widow gets $1,000 and one-half of the remainder.

Cloyne Lumberman Fractures His Ankles

TWEED, Feb. 26—(ENS).—Stanley Hawley of Cloyne, an employee of the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Co. of Massanoga, sustained a fractured ankle when a log rolled on him while engaged in lumbering operations. He was attended by a local physician and will be laid up for some time.

Fred Wood of Northbrook, an employee of the same lumber company, suffered from an accident of a similar nature in which he suffered from a badly bruised leg. Fortunately no bones were broken and he will return to his duties in a short time.

Charges Union Ballots Farce

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—(AP).—Westbrook Pegler, newspaper columnist, told a House of Representatives committee yesterday that the present labor union policy of the United States government "is to force unwilling workers to join labor unions which may and do abuse them in many ways."

Pegler testified at a judiciary committee hearing on labor problems raised by the defence program.

He contended the government had "refused to take any steps to protect" the unwilling members" of labor unions.

"Elections (in unions) are crooked and farical," Pegler charged. "Accounts are juggled and known criminals and other crooks who never have been convicted are maintained in office by manipulation and terrorism."

ARGENTINE NEEDLEWORK

Telephone girls of Buenos Aires, Argentina, recently held an exhibition of needlework done by them during leisure hours under the supervision of skilled teachers.

Light Misleads Death Truck

LONGUEUIL, Que., Feb. 26 — (CP). — With the death toll tentatively set at 11, a diver was expected to-day to attempt to find a truck that crashed into the St. Lawrence River near here yesterday with a group of ice-cutters aboard. No sign could be found of either the vehicle or the men it took with it in a dive through broken ice into 50 feet of water.

A mistake in interpreting the meaning of a signal lantern placed on the ice led to the disaster. The truck was following five minutes behind a similar vehicle carrying ice-cutters to work in the early-morning darkness when it came to a fork in the trail across the ice.

Philemon Daoust, one of the missing and driver of the second truck, interpreted the lantern as a signal to swing toward one of the forks in the trail, and a few minutes later the truck crashed through thin ice into the river 10 miles below Montreal. The other truck had taken the opposite road.

MANY BOATS EXPECTED

About a dozen letters have come into the Chamber of Commerce so far this month from boat owners in the States asking for data on the Trent Canal and the connecting waters. All of the enquiries have been answered but there is one snag. Under war regulations no charts of certain waters may be taken from the country, but certain special consideration can be given an American once his boat enters Canadian waters, so that no hardship would be involved.

CANTEEN FOR DEBERT

The Peterborough men in the Debert Camp will have a chance to benefit from a gift made by the Rt. Rev. R. J. Renison of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Toronto. A mobile canteen truck has been presented to the Department of National Defence, and has been sent to Debert for duty. Bishop Renison's son, a pilot officer in the R.A.F. is a prisoner of war in Germany. The February issue of the "Legionary" carries pictures of the canteen and its presentation.

SCOUTS MEET

The officers from the 12 Scout troops in Peterborough will meet in the Fire Hall tonight at 7:30 p.m. Final tests in the A.R.P. work will be held, and examinations in the first series. While the officers, about 84 in number, are progressing in the second series, during the next few weeks, they will be instructing the men in the series they have now completed.

HARDER ON CARS

According to various garage men in the city, Peterborough motorists have been harder hit this winter than is usual in the matter of batteries wearing down and radiators freezing. The past six weeks, it is reported, the weather has been ideal for the motorist in winter, but the previous severe spells kept the garage attendants busy changing batteries and especially remedying frozen rads.

THANKS FROM DEBERT

In a letter received by his father today, Bugler J. W. Cooke of the Glengarry Highlanders' pipe band at Debert, N.S., gratefully acknowledges receipt of magazines from friends in Peterborough, requesting that appreciation of the men be extended to all those who took the trouble to send magazines, with a special mention of the ladies of the Peterborough Lodge of the Moose.

OBJECTIVE IS NEAR

A glance at the big thermometer in front of the War Savings Certificates Committee rooms on George reveals that red column has reached the 6500 mark indicating that there are just 500 regular savers required to put the campaign over the top. These 500 are going to be hard to get because the town has been pretty well canvassed. A few people have been missed and some of these are coming into the committee rooms of their own accord to sign pledges.

ASH WEDNESDAY

The penitential season of Lent began today with the usual Ash Wednesday services in the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches.

MAY REDUCE RATE

The city council of Kitchener expects to set its tax rate at 41 mills, one and a half mills less than last year, at its meeting next Monday night.

CLUB BAG FOUND.

A club bag was picked up on the Market Square this morning and turned over to the police. It had evidently been forgotten by some traveller who had left it behind after getting into a car.

THE ROTARY CARNIVAL.

Here's the first breath of summer. The Peterborough Rotary Club has fixed Friday and Saturday, June 27 and 28, as the dates for its annual carnival at Riverside Park.

ANOTHER POLICE GAME.

The Cobourg and Peterborough Police hockey teams who played here on Tuesday night are to battle on the ice again on Friday night when they play game at Campbellford, the affair being sponsored by the Campbellford Rotary Club.

HELP THE POLICE.

A number of members of the Peterborough Squadron of the Legion of Frontiersmen assisted the police on Thursday night by taking over part of the police duties while the members were battling against Cobourg in a hockey game at the Brock Street Rink.

MUST GET OUT OF TOWN.

A local man charged with creating a disturbance was allowed to go on suspended sentence after he had pleaded guilty to the offence. One of the conditions was that he must leave town at once. Chief Newhall said that the man had been a nuisance to his mother and other members of the family for years because of his intemperate habits.

CO-OPERATIVE CREAMERY

V. S. Milburn told the Examiner Monday that he attended on Saturday the annual meetings of the New Dundee Co-operative Creamery Limited, which manufactured 1,592,822 pounds of butter last year and distributed a bonus of $10,000 to its patrons. He said this Co-operative has the reputation of doing the largest creamery business in the province.

NONE REPORTED SO FAR

One man asked this morning if there was any street in the city on which the occupants of every house had voted one hundred per cent to buy War Savings Certificates. This means of course the wage earner in each house. If one could be found, there should be a special sign erected to give the just credit to the residents of that particular street.

COPPER-NICKEL TALK

C. L. Sherman, Metallurgist for Phillips Electrical Works, Limited, Brockville, Ontario, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Engineering Institute at Paragon Hall, Thursday night. His subject will be "The Mining, Smelting and Refining of Copper-Nickel Ores." The social committee of which O. J. Frisken is chairman, is arranging a courtesy dinner at the Empress Hotel at 6.30 o'clock.

ADVICE TO PUBLIC

"It is time the public should be warned about the habit of agencies in threatening men who owe bills with garnisheeing their wages," said W. J. A. Fair in police court this morning. "It should be understood that wages cannot be garnisheed until a judgment has been given, except for board and lodgings." The remark was occasioned by a statement of a defendent in a non-support case that he had not tried to provide a home for wife and child because he owed a number of bills and garnishee proceedings had been threatened. The case was adjourned to give the accused a chance to make some arrangement for providing for his wife and baby.

Young Man Given Suspended Sentence

A young man employed in a local factory was allowed to go on suspended sentence by Magistrate Gee in police court this morning after he had pleaded guilty to assaulting a fellow employee.

The evidence showed that the two men had quarreled over some details of their work and that the accused assaulted the complainant in the washroom of the plant. "He struck me five or six times," the complainant testified.

The defendant's father who admitted that his boy sometimes lost his temper said that he was quite willing to go on a bond for his good behavior and Crown Attorney McElderry was satisfied to have the sentence suspended.

In Paris Fashions

PARIS, (via Berlin), Feb. 20 (Delayed)—(AP)—New suits in today's fashion parade were finished with masculine precision but a saving feminine touch was introduced by organdy blouses with frilled fronts and field flower bouquets for mannish lapels. Closely-fitted redingots in patterned wools and silks, fine-striped wools and pencil-striped dark fabrics were among the collections.

Seventy-two clergymen have applied for a $2,800-a-year-position with a church in Newcastle, England.

Kawartha Club Re-elects I. F. McRae Head

The annual meeting of Kawartha Golf and Country Club was held Tuesday night when Ian F. McRae was elected president for a second term.

In his remarks to the executive council Mr. McRae said that the membership in the club had been maintained despite the war and the players had actualy been more active than in previous years due no doubt to the fact that every one was working more and felt a greater need for outdoor exercise. Competitions were keenly contested and low scores were required to win.

Although a number of improvements and additions have been made to the club property the directors, due to the war, had shelved for the time being anything that could be considered a major expenses. In concluding his remarks he announced that Lex Robson had again been engaged as club professional. This, he thought, would be good news.

At a directors dinner prior to the council meeting C. A. Salmonsen was presented with a set of golf clubs as a parting gift from the members of the Board, and at the conclusion of the executive council meeting he was presented with a life membership in the club in recognition of his efforts in founding and organizing the club. Mr. Salmonsen, in thanking the board and the council vowed he would use his membership once a year. He said the club had advanced rapidly but there were still lots to be done. He named several projects that could be undertaken at the conclusion of the war and said that he would always watch with keen interest the progress of the club.

Strano Assessed $6,000 Damages

Mr. Justice Chevrier presiding at a session of the Supreme Court here today, gave judgment in favor of Mrs. Mary Petrie, for the sum of $6,000 and costs against Biasi R. Strano, local fruit merchant and his two sons, Vincent and Francis.

The action for damages claimed $10,000 and evidence was heard Tuesday afternoon with Mr. Strano, conducting his case without a lawyer. G. N. Gordon, K.C., acted for Mrs. Petrie, the plaintiff.

The action arose out of an accident on Highway 7 near Burnham's School and almost in front of Petrie's home during the winter of 1939. At that time Petrie was driving home with a team of horses hitched to a sawing machine, and a loaded truck driven by Strano, struck the sleigh and Petrie was fatally injured. Strano served six months following conviction on a charge of dangerous driving under the code.

The court finished its Spring Assize session this morning at 11 o'clock.

Western Feed Grain

Members of Peterborough Co-operative Services have already ordered five cars of feed grain from the west, E. H. Brown, manager, told the Examiner today.

Three of the cars are oats and two barley. It is expected that permits for two more cars, one each of barley and oats, will be needed Thursday.

The federal and provincial governments are jointly paying the freight rates from Fort William or Port Arthur to Ontario destinations on rough grain purchases in the west.

Mr. Brown said Co-op business in commercial feeds increased from 75 bags a day in January to 125 bags daily this month.

Plans Are Made To Liquidate Church Deficit

An informal meeting of ministers and laymen of the United Church was held on Tuesday at George Street Church to hear a report from Rev. James Semple, D.D., of Belleville, who has been set apart to supervise the special effort to liquidate the deficit of the United Church of Canada. The meeting was called by the chairman of the Peterborough Presbytery, Rev. F. W. Craik. There were a number of ladies present, representing the W.M.S. and the W.A., both of which organizations are co-operating in the effort.

Dr. Semple explained that the scheme was meant to encourage the people to buy War Savings Certificates and thus help our country in these crucial days of war. The people were asked to register a proportion of their certificates in the name of the United Church of Canada. He showed that most of the presbyteries had already accepted the scheme, and read messages from leaders in the Bay of Quinte Conference as follows:

Mr. E. L. Fraser, President of the Bay of Quinte Lay Association: "A fine opportunity to serve our country and our Church. Enthusiasm for the plan growing. Let every one participate."

Principal Wallace, Queens' University, Kingston: "The plan has real possibilities and I trust it will be helpful in an important way in the financing of the United Church."

Mr. Elmer Davis, Kingston, Chairman of the Board of Publications of the Church: "I am heartily in sympathy with this movement. It seems to me that it offers the one promising opportunity for the reduction or elimination of the deficit."

Cobourg Presbytery: "We have made a good start. Presbytery well organized, and much enthusiasm is evident."—J. E. Anderson, Director for Cobourg Presbytery.

Lindsay Presbytery: "Several Certificates purchased already. Organization progressing."

Renfrew Presbytery: "Interest growing. Organization progressing. Hopeful signs."—H. B. Neal, Director Renfrew Presbytery.

Oshawa Presbytery: "The Presbytery gave us a good innings. Group leaders appointed in every area."—W. J. H. Smyth, Director.

Belleville Presbytery: "Greatest opportunity to liquidate deficit. Presbytery organized by zones. Outlook most hopeful."—H. B. Fetterley and J. G. McKee.

Message from Dr. Semple: "Every Presbytery in the Conference well organized. Have found the maximum of encouragement for the scheme and feel that the response will be most gratifying."

Dr. Semple said that every certificate thus registered would be going to reduce and if possible liquidate the debt. In this way the church would be free to take up the post war opportunities that are bound to come to the United Church. The speaker paid a tribute to the women of the church for their splendid co-operation.

A number of questions about the working of the scheme were asked, and answered by Dr. Semple, who was thanked for his visit, and promised the fullest support in the great task which the church was undertaking.

Pick Out Jail Hang Hat Up Transients Told

"There should be a concentration camp for fellows like you; a place where you could be given some work," said Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning in sentencing two transients, George Connelly, from Vancouver, and George Wilson from the Maritimes, to two months in jail for shoplifting.

Connelly had pleaded guilty to the theft of sox and Wilson to stealing shoe polish and razor blades from local stores.

Chief Newhall stated that men of their type were a constant nuisance here. "They no sooner get out of jail than they start in stealing from the stores again," he said.

Both Connelly and Wilson had long records, the former's dating back to 1907.

Connelly asked the magistrate to note that for a period of twelve years up to 1938 he had gone straight.

"You might as well pick out a jail and hang your hat up for good," said Magistrate Gee scanning the man's record.

"I only touch stuff when I get gassed up," said Wilson in explanation of his contact.

"Two months in jail will get you out in time for the opening up of spring work." Magistrate Gee said in sentencing the pair.

Japs Quit Singapore

TOKYO, Feb. 26 — (AP). — The newspaper Nichi Nichi reported today from Singapore that Japanese families had begun to leave for Japan because "of the tense Far Eastern situation." It said 130 Japanese, mostly women and children, sailed Sunday, and that three vessels sailing in March are fully booked.

Rotary Governor Visits Club At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26 (ENS).—District Governor Alex. Ross of Toronto was guest speaker at Monday's Rotary luncheon held in the St. Lawrence Hotel here. The speaker paid tribute to the club for its high attendance record pointing out it was now leading the Trenton and Belleville clubs, thus showing a great improvement over its record of a few months ago. Sunday marked the thirty-sixth anniversary of the founding of Rotary, and despite the war in Europe and political systems hostile to the principal of Rotary the organization was still growing according to Mr. Ross.

For the smaller clubs the speaker declared he had a sincere sympathy and understanding of their difficulties. The large clubs sometimes have a tendency to become too self-complacent. It is these smaller clubs that from time to time need additional encouragement to carry on.

Great Rotary Effort.

Mr. Ross forecast that an even greater influence would be wielded by Rotary after the war was over and recalled the part it had played following war of 1914-18. He drew a parallel between the part played by soldiers in preventing further bloodshed in the aftermath of war and what Rotarians could do to help reorganize. He quoted the practical advice given by Edward Hale (Ten times one is Ten)—"look out, not in—look up, not down—look forward, not back—lend a hand." The speaker was of the opinion the world would not be able to stand many more wars such as this one. "We must try to maintain those things such as brotherly love and fellowship which are really worth while.

Destroy And Kill.

Of the leadership provided by Hitler and Mussolini, the District Governor declared it taught only how to destroy and kill. He illustrated this with the story of an English farmer who was cutting oats in a field. Used to seeing planes he didn't run for cover when one hovered over him and not until one of his horses fell wounded did he realize that he was the target. A plane of the R.A.F. appeared and shot down the Nazi, who bailed out, landing in the farmer's field. The flyer was then willing to surrender, but then according to the story the farmer had different views. He got his shot gun from the house and finished off the airman. "I believe the farmer was quite justified in his action," declared the speaker.

His closing words were that Rotarians should not be discouraged. "Let's face up to our task no matter what it is or where we live."

President Steve Maguire welcomed the speaker and guest, Miss Violet Murray, Toronto, who entertained members with songs.

Jury Justifies Husband's Shots

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26.—(AP)—The act of R. L. Hawkins, 27, in firing four shots at a man he said he found embracing Hawkins' estranged wife in her bedroom was ruled justifiable homicide by a coroner's jury yesterday.

A deputy district attorney said that despite the verdict, he intended to prosecute Hawkins for the death of the man, Clinton Numan Thompson, 24, an aircraft worker.

Thompson's 19-year-old widow, an expectant mother, was overcome by grief while awaiting the verdict and had to be assisted from the jury room. Hawkins' 24-year-old wife also wept during the hearing.

Hawkins said he and his wife had agreed on a month's separation, but that he came home Sunday two weeks ahead of time.

Toothprints Tell

TEMPLE, Tex., Feb. 26 (AP)—Toothprints — not fingerprints — landed a negro in jail. Police, investigation a grocery store robbery, noted a large hunk was missing from a cheese. Prints of somebody's teeth—one plainly missing—were visible. Chief Frank Bouldin took one look in a suspect's mouth—and filed burglary charges.

Famed Baroness Shelter Queen

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (AP). — The eldest daughter of the late Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, a baroness in her own right, has a room in a swank hotel, but she doesn't sleep there much.

She's so busy in the slums, helping poor families during and after air raids, it's more convenient just to sleep at Paddy's Goose.

Dock workers call her the "Queen of the Shelters," though her real name is Lady Irene Ravensdale, and her father once was Viceroy of India.

Forty-five-year-old Lady Ravensdale moved to the dock district after her home was bombed early in the war.

Paddy's Goose, where she spends the nights except when there's no bombing, is a notorious public-house. She spends plenty of her own money there on cocoa, tea and sandwiches for the homeless.

Twenty bombs have fallen within 50 yards of the "Goose," and the windows have been blasted out of rooms where Lady Ravensdale and her homeless friends were sleeping.

Lady Ravensdale shudders at the suggestion she is doing anything heroic. She explains: "It's just a job. After all, I've lost only a home. I know plenty who've lost whole families."

Lady Ravensdale knows hundreds of dock people by their first names. On a trip with her one sees she's just like one of them. She is never patronizing and never puts on a social worker air. Her food is the food she distributes among others. She is pretty but she dresses simply.

When the poor complain about shelter conditions, she gets things done because she knows where to go for remedial action.

First "Parents' Night" Banquet Held by Scouts

The first "Parents' Night" banquet to be held by St. James' 10th Peterborough Boy Scout Troop was an interesting occasion of Monday evening in the Sunday School room of St. James' Church, with Mr. Edgar T. Jones, field secretary for the Boy Scout Association of Eastern Ontario, speaking on the subject of "The Scout and the Church." He was introduced by Commissioner J. T. Hornsby, and Rev. F. W. Craik presided as chairman.

Patriotic colors, with the troop shades of blue and grey also taking a prominent place, were used in effective decorations. The head table was centred by a silver basket of snapdragons. Mrs. C. H. Chapman, president of the Mothers' Auxiliary by which the banquet was sponsored, welcomed the guests.

A toast to the King was proposed by the chairman with the red candle lit by Cub Hay Titterington in honor of His Majesty, followed by the singing of the National Anthem. Two minutes' silence in memory of the late Chief Scout Lord Baden Powell was observed, with a blue candle lit in the late leader's honor. Scout Art Roode hoisted and lowered the Union Jack during the ceremony. The toast to the church was given by Mrs. F. Allen, treasurer of the Mothers' Auxiliary, with a white candle in honor of the church, lit by Mrs. A. Wilson, oldest member. Rev. F. W. Craik replying. The toast to the parents was given by Scout Don Langton, with the yellow candle lit by Mrs. R. J. Kearns, president of the 5th Boy Scout Mothers' Auxiliary. Mrs. J. Cridland, past president of the 1st Peterborough Mothers' Auxiliary, replied.

Mr. E. Frost, chairman of the group committee, proposed a toast to the group, with Commissioner Hornsby responding, and the green candle lit by Mrs. F. Blaby. Mr. R. Hendry, Scotch comedian, delighted the audience with several vocal numbers while the banquet was in progress.

A presentation to the Sunday School of an electric clock by the Scouts and Cubs was made by Cub Vernon Pinn, with Akela J. Langhorne assisting. Scouter Stan. Leggitt spoke on the standing of the troop, stating 10th Peterborough Troop held Coronation King Scout Badge through Bill Lawson, who is now serving his King in the R.C.A.F., and two coronation badges held by Cyril Davis, now active, and Bill Anderson, who is in service "somewhere in England."

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of a book on scouting in recognition of being the "best Scout in 1940" to Scout Alex. Reader. The custom is one followed by the Scouter in previous years.

Harmonica solos were given by Scout Arthur Roode, and the program concluded with Scout songs led by Scouter Pete Dominik of the 4th Sacred Heart. Thanks to the Mothers' Auxiliary, with Mrs. E. Davis convener, was expressed by Scouter Leggitt, followed by the usual Scout manner, and "O Canada."

Among the guests were Commissioner and Mrs. J. T. Hornsby, Mr. Edgar T. Jones, A.D.C. E. Wolfe, A.D.C. Lewis Grant, Skipper George Groombridge. Groups were represented from St. Andrew's Church, the Church of the Sacred Heart, All Saints' Church, St. John's Church.

Park Street B.Y.P.U. Presents Play

Their first venture into drama as a group was an occasion rather nervously anticipated by B.Y.P.U. members of Park Street Baptist church when they presented a three-act play, "Blessings on this House," before a large audience Tuesday evening. However, the enthusiasm of the audience for their efforts was evident in warm applause, and the presentation came through with more success than is met by many a seasoned group of players.

Although classed as a drama, bright flashes of humor enlivened the story, which concerns an orphan girl of 16 who comes to live with a doting mother who occupies the same house. The plot reaches its climax when Barbara, who usually gets her own way, does not win a singing contest in which the award is $1,000, and Sara Anne, the unwanted orphan, steps in, walks away with the prize, then hands it over to help the family out of financial difficulties, thus emerging a heroine. There is romance in the story, too, and the play is altogether well presented under the direction of Mr. Everett Wicks, B.Y.P.U. president.

Rev. C. C. Boyter was chairman for the program, and entertainment between acts included a guitar duet by Miss Thelma and Miss Zelda Tedford; a reading "Billy's Rose" by Mrs. Nichols, and a solo by Miss Martha Sands.

Members of the cast included Roy McCabe, Vera Edwards, Arthur Peeling, Winnie Snowden, Barbara Webster, Leone Killingbeck, Marjorie Hodson.

Tips From U.S. On Make-Overs

OTTAWA, Feb. 26 — (CP). — Women's organizations in Canada have done wonders in making over garments for Britain's needy from the blitzkriegs, but there may be some suggestions in the programs of the "Bundles for Britain" groups in the United States.

A letter to Senator Cairine Wilson from the Columbus, Ohio, group, describes some of the make-overs effected.

FELT HATS—Thick ones for men's slippers; thinner and bright colored for children's slippers.

Men's Pants—One pair will make one pair of shorts for a six-year-old and one pair for a two-year old.

Tuxedo—Pants give fine skirts for 10-year-olds and small scull cap from part between pockets. Some tuxedo jackets will make bolero or small jacket.

Blankets—Best parts for baby blankets; otherwise make warm linings or interlinings for quilts.

Tailor's Patches — Make what British call "Camouflage Blankets."

Sample Books—Good for substantial quilts.

Cotton Towels or Underwear — Make eight-inch double washcloths when squares are crocheted together.

Sweaters—Some can be unravelled and yarn washed, rewound and knitted over into smaller garments or squares for afghans.

Outing Pyjamas or Gowns.—Good interlinings for making children's light weight clothing warmer.

Cotton House Coats. — Cut down into two or three dresses for children from two to six years.

Leather Glove—Opened and sewn on flannel—make fine wind-breakers.

"Bundles for Britain" has celebrated its first anniversary in New York with President Roosevelt's mother as honorary guest and president.

There now are 756 branches throughout the United States and more than 700,000 women and children are engaged in knitting alone. In the first year 3,000 cases and 284 bales of clothing including 1,200,000 knitted garments, and 350 surgical dressings were sent overseas.

Preparing Supper Rich in Vitamin C

DOURO, Feb. 26 (ENS)—A supper menu rich in vitamin C (the vitamin needed for sound teeth, healthy skin and general well being) was cooked and served to the household economic class. The menu was escalloped haddie, jellied tomato salad, mayonnaise, brown and white bread, citrus fruit pudding, tea biscuits and tea. For the escalloped fish a can of chicken haddie was used. 1 cup cooked flaked fish, 1½ cups buttered bread crumbs, 3 hard cooked eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper, 2 cups thin white sauce.

Put a layer of crumbs in the bottom of saucepan, next a layer of fish, next a layer of the hard egg sliced. Top with a layer of crumbs. Pour the white sauce over all and heat well in the oven.

Jelly Salad—1 can tomato juice, 1 package gelatine. Dissolve gelatine according to direction on package. Add 4 tablespoons cold tomato juice to the gelatine. Heat ½ liquid add to gelatine. Then add cold mixture. Set in moulds to set. The tomato juice may need salt, pepper or sugar.

Quick Mayonnaise Dressing — 1 egg, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons mustard, ¼ cup cider vinegar, ¾ cup salad oil (mineral oil was used), 1 cup boiling water, 3½ tablespoons of cornstarch. Put everything in a bowl without stirring with the exception of starch and water. Cook corn starch over fire until it thickens. Pour hot starch over other ingredients and beat with the Dover beater. Thin with water if desired.

Citrus Fruit Pudding — (Orange, lemon, grapefruit or pineapple may be used.) Top with filling as for lemon pie. Top with meringue. If used for pie filling double those proportions—3 tablespoons of corn starch, 3-3 cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon butter, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon. Mix corn starch and sugar, add boiling water and cook in double boiler till there is no taste of raw starch. Add beaten egg yolks by first adding some of the hot mixture to the egg yolks. Return to the fire and cook for two or three minutes till thickened. Remove from the heat and add the grated rind and lemon juice. Pour over prepared fruit.

Meringue—2 egg whites, 2 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons sugar. Beat eggs and water till dry, then beat in the sugar. Drop into warm (not hot) water Cook in a slow oven till well browned (about ½ hour) then slip on to the pudding, being sure no water sticks to it. This splendid method of making a meringue proved a revelation to the class.

To make butter crumbs melt three tablespoons of butter in a pan and stir in bread crumbs.

Babe Dahlgren Sold By Yanks

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 26.—(AP)—New York Yankees of the American League today announced the sale of Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren, their regular first baseman since May, 1939, to Boston Bees of the National League, for an unannounced sum of cash.

The deal came as a complete surpris in the Yanks' camp and left them with only Johnny Sturm, a Kansas City farm product who has had no big-league experience to play first base. Sturm is a good fielder and has hit well in the American Association, compiling a .312 average for Kansas City last year.

Dahlgren, a spectacular fielder but a weak hitter, came up with Boston Red Sox in 1935. He took over the first-base job for the Yanks on May 2, 1939, when illness caused Lou Gehrig to retire, and has not missed a game since then. He hit .235 in 1939 and .264 last year.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks refused to elaborate on the deal, saying:

"As of today, Johnny Strum is the Yankee first baseman. I don't know what the future may bring I have some ideas which I can't go into now. But I feel the Yanks can win without Dahlgren and right now Sturm is my first baseman."

Every Wife Should Prepare For Her Days of Loneliness. She Should Acquire Interests Which Will Absorb Her Time and Energies After the Children Take Up Their Own Lives.

✧ ✧ ✧

An eminent nerve specialist says that the bored, middle-aged woman who has nothing to do or interest her after her children are grown and leave home is God's gift to the medical profession, for it is she and her sisters who crowd the waiting rooms of physicians and fill sanatoriums and who are the answers to the prayers of doctors not only for bread and butter, but for cakes and ale. The case history of Mrs. Legion, for such is her name, is interesting and pathetic as she unfolds it to the diagnostician. "I can't understand what's happened to me, Doctor. I have always been so well and strong. Why, I've done two women's work Did my own cooking and washing and housework and helped my husband in the store when we were first married and he was just getting a start in business. And then the children came. For years there was one baby in my arms and another one pulling at my skirts, but I was so healthy I managed to take care of them all, for we didn't have any money then to hire servants. Everything we made going back into the business. Maybe I would be up half the night with a sick child, but I'd be up in the morning preparing breakfast, getting Papa off to work and the children off to school, cleaning, patching, darning, fixing the baby's bottle, baking a birthday cake for Johnny, making Mary a new dress to wear to school, doing two women's work, Doctor, and never a sick day. And all during the time that the children were growing up, so much to do that I wonder now how I ever got through with it all. Hordes of young people coming and going, dancing, singing, whooping, raiding the ice-box. Getting boys off to college and to camp, for Papa had made good money by then. Making party dresses for the girls. Giving entertainments for them. So much to do all the time and yet I never seemed to mind it. Everybody said I certainly had been blessed with good health.

Nothing to Do

"And then the boys finished college and got jobs in distant cities, and the girls got married, and Papa and I were left alone in the big house. And I said I certainly would settle down now and take life easy, with nothing to do.

"Then this strange sickness came upon me, Doctor. I don't know what these queer symptoms mean. I've always been so full of pep and energy and now I'm tired all the time. I don't want to go anywhere. I don't feel like doing anything. Maybe I have some deadly disease. I don't know. I have been to see all the specialists and none of them can find anything the matter with me. They don't seem to know what ails me."

Doctors Know the Answer

But the doctors do know what ails Mrs. Legion. They know that it is being bored. It is idleness. It is having nothing to do. They know that with her children's going her interest in life went, too. They know that she hasn't been able to stand the lonesomeness of the big house that was once so gay and noisy and is now so still and silent.

The doctors know that it is a common complaint among women who have had big families, and that the more devoted mothers they were, the more sure they are to have it, and the more difficult it is to deal with because they can write no prescription that will give a mother back her babies and keep her so busy she will not have time to be sick herself

Perhaps there is no surefire cure for these mothers who acquire imaginary diseases when they have nothing to do but search their systems for symptoms. But just as we are inoculated against smallpox before we catch it, there is a lot of preventive medicine that would save them much suffering if they would only take it in time.

Suggested Cures

The first remedy I would suggest to them is to be more wife than mother. To hold on to their husbands with both hands. To be chums with their husbands, so that when their children go from them, they will not be left desolate. Companionship with one's husband is an infallible panacea for that lost feeling when two aging people are left alone.

Another way to prevent falling a victim to the soul sickness from which so many mothers suffer when their young fly from the home nest is for them to realize that one's children are only loaned them for a few years.

Then they must go about the business of life for themselves, and a mother should prepare herself for it by providing herself with as many interests as possible to fall back upon in her hour of need. It is the only thing that will save a woman from joining the throng of neurotics who infest doctors' offices and talk about their symptoms.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, February 27

Rather swift-moving events may assist in making this a day of unusual or surprising benefits, probably in a readjustment or reorganization of doubtful matters or a more up to date and modern basis. Fresh blood, daring plans, even revolutionary ideas might prove just the impetus crystallized or static conditions require to set in motion a new factor for success and progress.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of some sudden adventure quite unpredictable and unprecedented, and promising definite and surprising progress or promotion. It may be owing to some novel, revolutionary, even spectacular inspiration, invention or brilliant idea, which should prove opportune, workable and desirable either in the field of science, invention, drama, entertainment or romantic adventure.

A child born on this day although being imaginative yet should have much ingenuity and practical skill, which may have surprising culminations and rewards. It should, in such matters, guard against duplicity.

HARWOOD, Feb. 26—(ENS).—At the Hamilton township council meeting held at Coldsprings recently, it was decided that Mr. Thomas Turk Drope be paid $25 for destroying a wolf, and that he also be paid $25 for destroying her seven pups, this being the bounty authorized by resolution of May 6, 1940.

Miss H. Moyer, accompanied by Miss Shirley Drope, spent the week-end with her mother at Omemee.

A number from here attended the operetta at Cobourg College on Thursday and Friday evening.

The Y.P.S. motored across Rice Lake on Wednesday evening to Hiawatha, where they put on an interesting program.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hill, Murray and Fred of Peterborough spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Graham.

Mrs. J. Corkery and Mr. Denis Corkery were in Peterborough on Saturday last.

Campbellford Leads Badminton Group

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26 (ENS) —This town's badminton club which began its existence only two years ago may soon be looking for new fields to conquer. They have already swept aside everything that the teams in their Kawartha-Trent group have been able to put into action against them and are now riding at the top of the league and have yet to loose a scheduled contest this season. It has been announced that Lakefield has retired from the league, leaving Havelock, Deloro, Hastings, Marmora and Campbellford to come down the final stretch of the schedule. Though they still have a postponed game from the 1st half of the schedule to play with Hastings, dates for the remaining games of the season have been set as follows:

Feb. 26—Deloro at Campbellford.
Feb. 27—Hastings at Marmora.
March 4—Campbellford at Havelock; Hastings at Deloro; Hastings, bye.
March 11—Havelock at Deloro; Campbellford, bye.
March 12—Marmora at Campbellford.
March 19—Havelock at Marmora.

Natural Brown Is New Lupino

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25— (CP).—A scant half-dozen years ago, Ida Lupino was the screen's typical giddy blond. Her bleached curls were part of the background in many a version of campus life. And then somebody discovered that Ida was an actress too good to let evaporate in atmospheric effects.

Ida's hair was permitted to revert to its natural brown, the frizzing iron was put away, and all precincts reported a heavy majority for the new candidate for top-ranking stardom.

Thurier Stages 6-Point Spurt

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 26—(AP)—A six-point spurt by Fred Thurier, Springfield star, lifted him to within one point of the runner-up spot and nearer the top rung in the exciting American Hockey League scoring race today.

Thurier picked up four goals and two assists the past week to bring his total to 49 points, one less than his teammate, Glen Brydson, and ten shy of the pace-setter, Les Cunningham of Cleveland. Brydson managed to score twice and Cunningham four times.

Ed Bush of Providence, with 80 minutes in the penalty box, has just about sewed up the circuit's "bad man" title.

Two-Month Coma

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—(AP). —The almost imperceptible fluttering of an eyelid was all that marked Miss Ruth Steven's battle for life to-day as the 22-year-old victim of an automobile accident entered the third month of strange coma. Temple University physicians believe the 63-day coma resulting from an injury constitutes a record. One pthysician said the longest previous period of coma from an injury was 28 days.

To-night will see the finals of the Neill Trophy competition. In the preliminary event it will be C. Giroux vs. W. G. Pratten, and in the consolation it will be D. Charlton, Lakefield, vs. F. Batten, Peterborough.

We make no predictions, we'll toss the coin and you guess.

Scores.

Neill Trophy—Semi-finals — C Giroux 12, G. D. Carlisle 6; W. A. Pratten 8, J. McWilliams 7.

Consolation — Semi-finals— D. Charlton 7, C. Tanner 4; F. Batten 8, D. Davis 4.

In the 'ladies' section yesterday afternoon in the finals of the Waddell Trophy it was a one-sided victory for Mrs. G. Wood's rink. Everything went right for one side and everything went wrong for the other—and there you have it.

Mrs. D. Pocock	Mrs. H. Jamieson
Mrs. G. Green	Mrs. E. Thomas
Miss M. Patterson	Mrs. E. Metcalfe
Mrs. G. Wood	Mrs. H. Russell
Skip 16	Skip 3

We would like some more entries for the men's leads and seconds' bonspiel.

Keep your eye on this column tomorrow night. We may have something important to announce regarding Saturday afternoon's bonspiel. It may be a mixed one this time? Who knows.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: April Burnett opens a telegram addressed to her younger sister, Ann. Kent Carter, Ann's sweetheart, is coming home on leave, and Ann is in New York, auditioning for a job. Mr. and Mrs. Burnett are away, too. Although entirely different in personality, Ann and April are much alike in stature and voice. But April is the gay, giddy one, the girl with all the suitors. Kent means a great deal to Ann. April meets the train, Kent, wearing glasses, mistakes her for Ann. April realizes he cannot see.

• • •

CHAPTER II

April Burnett looked at Kent and then away.

Blind — not Kent Carter! It couldn't be! And yet there he was, staring without any recognition through the dark glasses.

She saw that an awkward young rookie stood beside him. "Very well, sir," the soldier was saying. "I'll meet you at the station here for the return trip."

"Righto. I'm in good hands, now. Thanks so much." Kent returned the salute and the soldier ambled out of the station.

"Now for you, Ann darling," and before she could speak a word, April found Kent's arms around her.

Startled and bewildered, April drew away. It seemed as if at that instant the world rocked right under her feet. She searched frantically for something steadying, something normal.

But the train was pulling out like a sleek, black caravan in the night and the platform was deserted, except for one old man who sat alone on a bench. She recognized him at once—"Winkie" Appleman, Pattonsville's perennial no-account. Just the sight of him, munching tobacco and grinning his toothless, leering grin was commonplace enough to bring April to herself.

She took Kent's arm, not pityingly but with a gay camaraderi. "Let's pull out of here," she said. "I've got the roadster."

"Oh, Ann," he was bending close, "you'll never know how I've lived for this moment."

Ann! Again Ann's name struck April like a blow. Because she talked like Ann, because he had sent the telegram to Ann and had been expecting her, he thought she was Ann.

She would explain in a minute. But not now, not in the confusion of bungling of bags and opening the car door. Kent stepped in surely. Hadn't he been in the roadster often enough with Ann?

April slipped behind the wheel, a deep sigh escaping her lips as she made ready to tell Kent that she wasn't Ann.

But he was the one who spoke first, reaching for her hand and then tucking his arm in her. "This is the camel's hair coat, isn't it?" he said and laughed a little. "I remember the day you bought it."

Suddenly his head went against April's shoulder.

"Kent," she began.

"I'm going to tell you right off what it is," he said.

"I think I know, Kent."

"Temporary blindness through shock."

"Yes," April's voice hung still for a minute in the frosty night and then she said as humbly as Ann would have said it, "Thank God, Kent, it's temporary."

"The doctors weren't sure at first and that's why I didn't write."

"There's something I must explain," April whispered.

He reached for both her hands. "You're here and I'm here and there isn't any need of explanations. I had to fight to get this leave—had to put up an awful battle to convince army doctors that nothing they could prescribe would do me as much good as seeing the only girl. I won out when I said that having this brief time with you would keep my morale up, put me in the right frame of mind for the operation?"

"They're going to operate on your eyes?"

"Yes, to repair the nerve damage."

Vaguely, April heard Kent explaining about the accident. "This young rookie you just saw, who lives in a nearby town and was detailed to escort me home, picked up a dud bomb dropped in bombing practice," he said. "Green that he was he didn't realize that a dud can be dangerous if not handled right."

April gripped the wheel and listened as Kent went on.

There was no self-pity, no dramatics in what he told. But he, as an officer at the training camp, had stood nearby and, quick to see what was happening, had scooped the bombshell from the blundering young conscript.

"It saved the rookie's life?" April spoke quickly. And to herself, "And almost cost you yours, Kent Carter.

She tried to listen again as Kent told of the days in the hospital, just as he might have done in the letter he hadn't written. "When the bomb went off, there was a flash of blinding light. It got me and caused a paralysis of the optic nerves. There was a time after that when no one could be quite sure of the outcome. But tests show my sight's there and I've a pretty fair chance of being as good as new after the operation. That's why this leave means everything!"

• • •

April murmured an answer but all the while she was thinking of Ann. This was Ann's place beside Kent.

"So now," and Kent relaxed against the seat, "I wanted to get it over with the first thing and forget it. I'm going to sit on top of the world until train time Monday night and not think of anything except you."

"Me?" April gasped. The wrong thing. She remembered too late it sounded like one of Ann's shy outbursts. She started the car in a sudden frenzy. She would have to reach Ann tonight, move Heaven to get her back to Pattonsville so Kent would never know.

"Take me the long way home, Ann darling," Kent was saying. "After I've visited with my great aunt Elizabeth Carter for awhile, you'll come back for me, won't you? There's a ride I want to take. You can see it for me with the stars out and frost on the ground."

Panic seized April afresh. "Yes, I'll see it for you," she gulped but knew that this date would have to be broken. There would be no way to produce Ann in Pattonsville tonight.

She turned to Kent. His face was white even in the darkness. A nice face with a straight nose and square chin. Funny, she had never paid much attention to him before. He had taken off the glasses, sat with eyes half closed, leaning close to her.

He said, "We'll side-step everyone in the short time I'm home. No one must know, except you and Aunt Elizabeth, what happened to me. Sympathy is one thing I can't take."

"Certainly not, Kent."

The roadster clipped along the river road. Above, bare, brown branches made a spidery arch. It was a sombre scene and yet peaceful. Kent must have sensed it, too, for he stirred contently beside her.

"You won't mind making excuses to your Mother and Dad for me?" he asked.

"They'll understand."

"As for your sister, the Glitterbug," he was saying with a brief laugh, "she probably won't stop long enough over the week-end to know whether I'm home—and will care less."

• • •

Glitterbug! The word crackled. Who was the Glitterbug? In an instant, April comprehended. This was what Kent called her, a Glitterbug.

Her hands shook on the wheel. Anger, red-hot, flared. Well, this Kent Carter certainly needed putting in his place.

A sharp retort leaped to her tongue. "Glitterbug." That's the way he and Ann referred to her. Some one light, who glittered and who'd jittered, when jittering was in, and was all wrapped up and tagged with a silly name.

The she remembered that Kent thought she was Ann and she clamped her lips, until, inwardly seething, she stopped before the gloomy, gingerbread of a house, where Kent lived with his aunt. "Here we are," she said with a crisp finality.

Kent leaned towards her. "I'm a wretched one," he said, "all this talk about me and I haven't even asked about you. Tell me all about yourself, Ann. Tell me you've forgiven our silly quarrel and you're going to love me more than ever."

Books Destroyed? Yes, In Millions

LONDON, Feb. 26 — (CP). — Paternoster Row, a narrow little street that winds off St. Paul's Churchyard, in the heart of the "city" of London, presents an ironical memorial to the thousands of men and women who trod the cobbled pavement in search of the houses which might publish their books.

Celebrated home of the book-trade for centuries, much of the street was laid waste by the German incendiary attack last year-end. And now there are only heaps of charred books and broken buildings.

It was here Macauley received a cheque for £20,000 ($97,200 in those days) from his publishers, Longmans, Green & Company, as profits from his "History of England." Others, too, made fortunes here, and it is estimated more than 10,000 authors had works published on Paternoster Row. Other houses to suffer were William Blackwood & Sons, Nelson, Hutchinson, J. Whitaker & Sons, and many others.

Many London firms lost their entire stock. Simpkin Marshall, founded about 1810, lost 3,500,000 volumes, many of which were by such famous names as Wordsworth, Scott, Shelley.

Smart Waltz Easy To Do With Diagram as Guide

Viennese Waltz Popular and Fun

The gay, the charming Viennese Waltz! You want to be at your best in this newly popular dance, not one of the girls who just blunder along, losing glamour at each step.

Practise at home with simple diagrams. Then you'll whirl about gracefully with your partner — skirts, coat tails flying—and you may be sure the stag line will not your airy skill!

The main trick in the Viennese is to do the Waltz Turn smoothly —for you and your partner must rotate round and round each other.

Count 1—Step forward on left foot, toe turned out, shoulders to left. 2—Make a half turn to left by pivoting on ball of left foot and swinging right foot around in a semi-circle, placing it to side of left. 3—Close left foot up to right. Now continue turning, starting on right foot.

Fun, isn't it? And you can as easily learn other smart dances.

Our 32-page booklet gives diagrams and instructions for popular steps in tango, rumba, foxtrot, Westchester, shag Conga, waltz and Viennese waltz. Also posture; leading, following.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOME COURSE IN NEW BALLROOM DANCES to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRES, and the NAME of Booklet.

KNOW THEIR BIDDING

Unless you understand the meaning of your opponents' bids, you cannot even play some of the hands correctly. Anybody who says to you: "My system is so good that you don't have to know any other system in order to win," is talking against your interests, even if his system is absolutely perfect. You do have to have some line on what the other side is doing if you hope to win in baseball, football, war, competitive business or bridge—and don't let anybody convince you to the contrary.

West led his diamond K. North played the A and East trumped it. He then took two hearts and returned a third, to avoid leading into the clubs. South tried to figure out how to avoid being set, but could not do it. He had already lost three tricks, and could not avoid the loss of another in diamonds, so was down one.

After the hand he explained that he thought West's 3-Diamond bid indicated an absolutely solid six-card suit, with a sure side entry, something he had read about in somebody's book. West, however, was using the only kind of original suit bid of three ever used by nine-tenths of the top-ranking players—showing a worthless hand without even an ace in it in the bid suit, and not even a king in a side suit—to crowd strong opponents. When South saw the dummy, containing the diamond A, he should have reckoned West's suit as surely being at least seven cards long, and East therefore void.

He had a sure safety play. Merely let West win the first and second diamond tricks, then be prepared to ruff or overruff the third. He could later use the diamond A, after trumps were out, for the discard of one of his own hearts. Thus he could cut his losers to two in diamonds and one in hearts and make his contract.

Church Is Held As Truth's Firmest Basis

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 26. —(ENS)—The Coming Church, and its beliefs, worship, fellowship and appeal to youth were what Rev. B. Simpson Black chose to speak of at his farewell sermon in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here on Sunday. Delivering from a carefully prepared text what was considered by many the finest address of his career the St. Andrew's pastor, who came to this town six years ago and is now leaving for Bonar Presbyterian church in Toronto, spoke with conviction of what the modern church must do if it would survive. To a congregation swelled by members of St. John's United church, whose minister, Rev. G. N. Maxwell, withdrew the evening service in tribute, he intoned the view that there was danger "that we church people have too poor, prosaic and uninspiring a conception of what the Church is, the divineness of its origin, the end it is intended to serve and the means by which its great and holy purposes are to be achieved."

Rev. Black referred to the church as the truth's best support and firmest basis. He spoke of the discouragements, seething unrest, jealousies and inter-racial controversies and the danger of narrow nationalism. There are many who believe that Christian principles are not applicable to the industrial system, voiced the speaker, declaring such terms as rationalism with its disregard of revelation and the supernatural, secularism with supreme attention to things of this life, and humanism that flatters the vanity of man and makes him all-sufficient. All of these denote a form of religious apathy too prevalent. He maintained that every year many adolescents were drifting away from the church not to come back while many others were "just playing at religion."

Must Examinine Herself

"I am not contending that religion is declining, far from it; I am saying that the Church needs to examine herself and see whether she, as the body of Christ, is partially paralysed, and hence not helping, but hindering the cause of God.

Of the coming church he said it would accept the great truths and principals which lie at the foundation of the Gospel. "With these truths we will be as orthodox as we have any need to be, and if we are not good men and women it will not be for want of a better creed."

"The coming church must believe in youth and give the young people a chance. Because the home has failed to teach religion and it is not taught in the schools, youth is thrown back on the church, whose responsibility and opportunity is therefore tremendous." The young people will be drawn to the church whose preaching and members lives best represent the life of Jesus Christ. "The young people are not attracted by the all too frequent bickerings in the church, the self-seeking and self exaltation in its fellowship. The uncharitable surmisings and whisperings of envy, malice and detraction that so often disturb and dishonor 'the communion of the saints' annoy and alienate the best young people who have no use for these unattractive and unchristian qualities. The coming church will recognize youth by using their energy and ability more than has been done in the past. Let the old and mature hands of the church be strengthened by those gifts which youth can bring, for the Tomorrow of our church will be upon us shortly, and God help the church if Youth has not been adequately trained for its varied service from the opening of a door to the preaching of the everlasting Gospel."

Following the morning service J. R. Battisby presided at a meeting of the congregation calling upon Mrs. P. B. Nelson who presented Mrs. Black with a silver tea service and Harold Dunk gave an address expressing the appreciation for the loyal leadership given by both Mr. and Mrs. Black. A purse of money was presented to Rev. and Mrs. Black on behalf of the congregation by R. N. Morrison and both replied feelingly paying tribute to the co-operation they had received from the church leaders. At the close of the evening Rev. G. N. Maxwell, secretary of the local Ministerial Association, spoke briefly in tribute to the parting minister.

Women's Auxiliary Will Pack A Bale

HASTINGS, Feb. 26 — (ENS). — The monthly meeting of St. George's Woman's Auxiliary was held at the home of Miss D. Plant on Thursday afternoon, when plans were made to pack a bale on March 6, to be sent to the white settlers in Western Canada. Sixteen pairs of knitted mitts were handed in by members and will be included among the many useful new and used garments for the worthy cause.

A letter was received from the Diocesan president in regard to the Toronto W.A. and M.S.C.C. requesting each branch in the Diocese to encourage the raising of extra funds which were formerly supported by England.

Ice Cream Bender

Brantford, Ont., Feb 26 (CP). TWO Montreal boys, each 13 years old, were apprehended yesterday near here after a $50 three-day "ice cream bender" in which they were said to have spent $50 of $200 allegedly taken from a cash box belonging to the mother of one of the lads.

The alleged theft occurred in Montreal after the mother of one of the youths had left for Brantford to attend a wedding. Advised from Montreal that the boys had bought bus tickets there for Brantford, the mother began to search district highways, finally finding the pair attempting to thumb rides.

Georgia Pines Kill 7 In Air Crash

Eddie Rickenbacker Among 9 Injured On Airliner Sleeper

ATLANTA, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Dropping away from a radio beam, an Eastern Air Lines plane ripped itself to pieces in a pine woods near here today, killing seven persons and injuring nine others, including famed flier Eddie Rickenbacker.

The 14-passenger sleeper smashed against a wooded knoll shortly after 2 a.m. EDT while attempting a beam landing after a run from New York. Searchers did not find the wreckage until shortly after dawn when an injured passenger made his way to a phone to call for help.

Five miles from the airport and 700 yards from the nearest dirt road, rescue work was painfully slow and it was not until mid-morning that seven bodies had been removed from the smashed cabin and nine injured taken to hospitals.

At one time Divisions Operations Manager L. H. Pabst told newsmen the death list was 10 but a recheck of hospitals and undertakers showed only seven dead, although two or three of the injured were in critical condition.

All the Crew Killed

Undertakers report seven bodies brought in. Three of these were identified as those of the crew, Capt. James Berry., co-pilot, L. E. Thomas and Steward Clarence Moore, all of New York.

The British Again

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, (via Berlin), Feb. 27 (AP)

CLASHES between civilians and German military police yesterday brought death to at least six persons and injuries to several others.

A great number of persons were arrested.

The outbreaks followed strikes and riots which brought a declaration of martial law for the province of North Holland, including its principal city, Amsterdam.

Nazi propagandists in Berlin today sought to blame disorders in the German-occupied Netherlands on "British agitators" landed by parachute and swift motorboats at night.

Legation Official Vanishes, Office Looted, Britain Threatens Break With Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 27 — (AP). — British quarters here said today the mysterious disappearance of a member of the staff of the Sofia Legation may lead to a break in diplomatic relations between Britain and Bulgaria.

The man is Wodin Grenovitch, British passport officer, Russian by birth, but a naturalized British subject.

Associates of Grenovitch said they had "good reason to believe" he was taken off a train while en route from Sofia to Istanbul, Turkey, "by Bulgarian police at the behest of the Germans."

The police made no statement regarding his disappearance.

George Rendel, British Minister in Sofia, was received today by Premier Bogdan Philoff to protest concerning the affair, and later said British authorities are "taking an extremely serious view of the situation."

It has long been expected Britain would sever diplomatic relations with Bulgaria as soon as Nazi troops began crossing the Danube from Rumania.

Legation attaches said they believed there was a definite connection between the disappearance and the looting of the passport control office safe Saturday night. They intimated that papers of great value had been sought by the thieves.

Mr. Rendel made it clear that he had no wish to recommend a break in diplomatic relations now. At the same time he insisted he would not leave a single stone unturned to find Grenovitch. If these efforts fail, he said, he will know what to do.

Indo-China Japs In Huddle As Break Looms

SAIGON, French Indo - China, Feb. 27—(AP)—All Japanese army and navy officals, together with consular and civilian representatives, convened tonight in an emergency conference at the Japanese consulate to consider orders received from Tokyo to prepare for possible withdrawal.

The Japanese refused to discuss the situation.

French authorities said they were not informed of the Japanese plans.

Bolstering Tokyo's Hand

TOKYO, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Japanese government ordered Japanese residents of French Indo-China today to be prepared to depart and informed observers expressed belief the action was a diplomatic manoeuvre intended to strengthen Japan's hand during the next few days should the Thailand-Indo-China peace negotiation collapse.

Authoritative sources said the success or failure of the conference was likely to be determined within the next 48 hours and were not optimistic over the prospects.

(In Shanghai, Domei, Japanese news agency, reported in a dispatch from Tokyo that it had learned that Japan had ordered Japanese resident to leave Indo-China immediately to give Japan a free hand in the event the peace conference failed.)

Authoritative sources said French Ambassador Charles-Arsene Henry visited the Japanese foreign office shortly after the government issued the instructions. It was reported that

Vote Of Confidence

London, Feb. 27 (CP Cable)

THE House of Commons today gave unanimous second reading to a bill which will enable Malcolm Macdonald to retain his parliamentary seat while serving as high commissioner to Canada. The action was taken after Prime Minister Churchill announced in debate the matter would be treated as a vote of confidence in the government.

The prime minister's ultimatum was delivered to a hushed House at the start of an all-day debate. It marked the first time he has asked for a vote of confidence since he formed his government in the grim days of last may. The House gave the measure second reading without objection.

Thousands Taken In Somaliland

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 2.—(AP)—British headquarters announced today that a 570-mile drive of Imperial forces into Italian Somaliland, leading to the capture of Mogadiscio, the capital, had brought the surrender of large Fascist forces "evidently demoralized."

Several thousand prisoners have already been counted, a communique said, with many more straggling into the British outposts.

During the advance which resulted in the capture of Mogadiscio, the British forces freed 200 Allied seamen who had been held for months as Italian prisoners of war at Merca, a coast town southwest of the capital.

Scorched Money Found In Gallow's Pocket

An opinion by Detective Oliver Borland, identification expert of the Toronto Police Department, that the shoe mark on a ledger card found near the safe of the C.D.S. Stores on the morning after the burglary there had been made by the right shoe of a pair said to have been owned by Louis Gallow, and evidence by Professor Joslyn Rogers, of the University of Toronto, and well-known scientific criminal investigator, that bills found in Gallow's possesion when arrested, showed signs of scorching featured the preliminary hearing of a burglary charge against Gallow in Police Court this morning.

The significance of the evidence in regard to the scorched bills was that Professor Rogers stated that the smaller safe carried off from the C.D.S. Store had had a hole burned in it with a blow torch and the witness stated that if the bills found on Gallow had been folded up inside the safe, they could have been scorched in that manner.

In addition to these expert witnesses, Detective-Sergt. John Nimmo and Detective Edmund Tong of the Toronto Police Department also gave evidence.

The proceedings were followed with keen interest by a crowd that packed the court room.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., conducted the prosecution, and Gallow was defended by Mannis Frankel, Toronto. T. J. Carley, K.C., who is defending Bradd and Burns, two of the other men charged with complicity in the local burglaries, was also present.

Mr. Frankel asked for the exclusion of all witnesses, but Crown Attorney McElderry's request that Detective-Sergt. Nimmo of Toronto and Professor Jocelyn Rogers be allowed to remain was granted. Chief Newhall was among those to go out.

Germans Gun Streets Of Villages

Get To London In Fog; Rake Shipping Blast Orphanage

LONDON, Feb. 27.—(CP)—Royal Air Force bombers hammered industrial targets at Cologne, in the Rhine valley of Germany, with a "very successful" attack last night, official sources announced today.

Many heavy bombs were dropped on targets on both sides of the Rhine and large fires were started."

The Air Ministry announced the loss of six planes, two of them fighters, in operations over German-occupied territory yesterday.

An informed source said the raid was "heavy and concentrated."

It was the 58th attack against the Rhineland city where the R.A.F. persistently has bombed oil refineries, munitions plants, factories, railroads and river transportation facilities.

Get to London in Fog

LONDON, Feb. 27 (CP) — Daylight raiders shielded by clouds dropped a load of bombs on London today, attacked ships off the East coast and machine-gunned the streets of four English villages.

Small formations of German planes made two tries at London and got through for a brief attack at noon. Bombs as well as machine guns were used in hit-and-run raids on three towns in East Anglia and one on the south coast.

In last night's raids on London a bomb wrecked a canteen of an air raid precautions station, formerly a hospital, killing and injuring a number of persons. Wounded nurses worked with rescue squads in the light of flares to aid others more seriously wounded.

A South Wales town, hit at night, reported nine dead. Nurses and firemen carried 30 babies from an Orphanage fired by an incendiary bomb.

Night fighters damaged two raiders over Britain. One of the daylight attackers on the east coast was believed to have been shot down.

Dwellers along the east coast could see the explosions of bombs aimed at ships. The ships or their escort put up a heavy anti-aircraft fire.

(Berlin sources acknowledged an R.A.F. night attack against a "western German industrial region.")

German raiders struck hard at the southern half of England during the night, concentrating mainly on

Night Hawks

London, Feb. 27 (CP)

THE air ministry news service disclosed today that two-man British night fighters are patrolling German airdromes to shoot down Britain-bound raiders as they take off.

Describing last night's bomb and machine-gun attacks on airdromes in northern France, the service said one crew flew down from the dark at two airdromes and claimed a probable victim at each.

A taxi-ing German plane was hammered with two full bursts of gunfire and then bombed, the ministry said, and one in flight was forced down.

"Our night fighters over this country were active too and damaged a Junkers 88 and a Heinkel 111," it declared.

Ontario Steps Up Relief Aid; Quebec Ends It

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — (CP).—Four provinces to-day had announced the policy they will follow when the Federal government discontinues payments for direct relief as from March 31. British Columbia and Alberta will assume the entire share hitherto paid by the Federal government, 40 per cent.

Ontario will divide the cost of per cent. for the Provincial government to 25 per cent. for the Ontario municipalties. Quebec has announced that the provincial payments will be discontinued in line with the Federal decision. Other provinces are still considering the question.

After a conference with Ontario mayors yesterday Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced at Toronto that after the Federal relief payments are stopped, the cost of relief in Ontario will be divided 75 per cent. for the Provincial government and 25 per cent. for the municipalities.

TORONTO, Feb. 27 (CP).—Wearing as souvenirs rings made from the windshield and motor of a German bomber, Alvin Devolin of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, has arrived at Christie Street Hospital here minus a leg he lost in a bombing raid in England. Devolin isn't talking about bombing raids, though. He would rather discuss his souvenirs. "I'd like to have stayed," he said. "I'm sorry to be out of it."

He is unmarried, and as soon as he leaves hospital, he is heading for Madoc, where his brother, Albert, lives. He arrived in Canada a month ago and has been in hospital at Kingston.

ANKARA, Feb. 27—(AP). — British and Turkish leaders were authoritatively reported today to have reached full agreement on problems affecting the Balkans and the Eastern Mediterranean.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Feb. 27—(AP).—Diplomatic dispatches from Belgrade said today that the Yugoslav general staff had ordered a speed-up of defence preparations, apparently in fear that German armies now in Rumania might attempt to get at Greece through Yugoslavia instead of Bulgaria.

No reason for the abrupt recall of Cincar-Markovic was given, but diplomatic quarters heard it was connected with "impending events of importance between the Axis and Yugoslavia." He arrived here yesterday.

Cripps Arrives.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Feb. 27 — (AP). — Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Russia, landed at Istanbul airport to-day after flying from Moscow through a heavy storm. He took a train immediately for Ankara, where he will confer to-morrow with Foreign Secretary Eden.

Diplomats in Bucharest heard that Soviet Russia, apparently after agreeing to German transit through Bulgaria, now had raised objections.

TWO United States youths are members of the Royal Canadian Air Force today because, aside from wanting to get into the air, they were dissatisfied over their respective night club performance and baseball-playing careers.

James Kiersted, 23, crooner in a New York dine and dance grill, said he was "sick of cafe society." Ballplayer James (Pepper) Smith, 24, who played with Jacksonville and Gainsville, Fla., professional clubs, said he dropped spring training this year because he was "getting no place with a battling average of .266." The pair now are at the R.C.A.F. Manning depot at Toronto after enlisting here.

Lowly Man in Demand as Spy

Minor Censorship Posts Major Field In Gamble With Death

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.— (AP).— "Wanted: Men and women lacking personality, oomph, imagination, charm and ambition, for dangerous work at little pay. Intelligent persons need not apply."

That want ad never appeared in Europe and it probably never will but it's just about what would appear if European military intelligence services advertised for the spies they need now.

Big espionage jobs and important secret missions go to veterans. The most successful new operatives, officials say, are those with little imagination who simply report what they hear or see.

The best field for new agents is in minor censorship positions in enemy country. Imperial German's ace spy in Britan was Jules Silber who, by a combination of official dullness and his own good luck, sat in a London office throughout the First Great War firmly entrenched in a key censorship post.

Prize double agent story is the tale of a Norwegian tried before a military court in Zurich. His name was Trebov and his distinguished appearance won him the title of "The Baron."

The Baron led a comfortable life in Vienna where his small family fortune, invested in a Jewish firm, vanished when the Nazis absorbed Austria. The Baron needed money, so he started work as an agent for the Vienna branch of the German "Office for the Prevention of Espionage."

By September, 1939, the Baron rated high as a German agent in Vienna and about the same date he met a Jewish horse-dealer who had abandoned his calling to spy in Vienna for a British agent in Budapest.

Soon the ex-horse-dealer was also on the pay roll of the German Office for the Prevention of Espionage, while the Baron was increasing his income with money from the British agent in Budapest.

Mounty Shepherd Dog Saves 3 Lives In 9-Yr. Career

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—(CP)—A government blue-book tabled in the Commons Wednesday recorded the retirement of Canada's most famous four-legged policeman.

Commissioner S. T. Wood, in the annual report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for 1939-40, said that the shepherd dog Dale, born in Alberta in 1932, had suffered from rheumatism and strained heart and was retired.

Dale was the property of a member of the force and when little more than a pup saved the life of his master and a comrade, lost in a blizzard at 35 below zero. The dog led them to a cabin where they took shelter.

Ontario Spurs Milk Output

Must Fill Cheese Quota To U.K., Dewan—Hog Bonus April 1

TORONTO, Feb. 27—(CP).—Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan told the agriculture committee of the Ontario Legislature today that steps will be taken immediately to increase the production of cheese, particularly in view of the urgent need for this commodity by Great Britain. Farmers will be encouraged to step up their production of milk.

Mr. Dewan admitted the Government was not in sympathy with the general principle of bonusing farm products. But when the price of farm products did not allow for a reasonable return, particularly on cheese and bacon, bonuses were necessary.

"We felt we could not afford to let an industry of such importance as that of cheese production fall down, especially in view of the increased quota to Britain," he continued. Canada's quota is 112,000,000 pounds. Last year 103,000,000 pounds were shipped to Britain.

Ontario's part in providing this quota was emphasized by the fact that three out of every four pounds shipped to Britain was made in this province.

Mr. Dewan expressed belief that by bonusing alone, there would be difficulty in meeting the quota for Britain and for that reason it was decided to begin an intensive campaign to spur production of milk for cheese.

The proposed bonus of 50 cents for hog carcasses grading B-1 and $1 for hogs grading A presented difficulties, he continued, and before legislation to provide for this can be introduced intensive study will have to be made of the subject. For this reason the bonus will not become effective until April 1.

"I believe we will have to pay it directly to the farmer as the most satisfactory method," he remarked.

The committee decided to hold an open meeting within two weeks to enable the hog problem to be investigated thoroughly. The deci-

3 Estates To Net 2 Million

Ontario To Get $1,300,000 O'Brien Fortune Alone

TORONTO, Feb. 27.— (CP) —It was estimated in government circles today the province will receive some $2,000,000 in succession duties from three large estates left recently.

The estate of M. J. O'Brien, Renfrew industrialist, valued at $5,229,029, will yield approximately $1,300,000. The $2,000,000 estate of John Hogan, Port Colborne, is expected to net about $300,000 and the estate of T. A. Russell, of some $900,000, will pay about $135,000. Mr. Russell was president of the Massey Harris Company.

The percentage taxes vary according to the nature of the bequest and the beneficiary's relationship to the testator. The tax on the Hogan estate is estimated lower because a majority of the estate goes to charity.

Japan Recalls Nationals In Indo-China

Press Blames Britain, US For Blocking Peace Conference

TOKYO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—The Japanese government today ordered withdrawal of its nationals residing in French Indo-China.

The evacuation order followed an editorial chorus by four leading Japanese-language newspapers. Of the nine in hospitals, those in the most serious condition seemed to be Rickenbacker, who had a fractured leg and back injuries of undetermined extent; H. A. Littledale, an assistant managing editor of the New York Times, from Short Hills, N.J., whose injuries were not determined at once, and Mrs. Littledale.

J. S. Rosenfeld of New Orleans and N. Hansell of the Bronx, N.Y., both were able to walk away from the shattered plane, the former giving the alarm that brought searchers to the isolated crash scene which is approximately five miles southeast of the airport and 15 miles from Atlanta.

Littledale and his wife, who is editor of Parents' Magazine, were en route to Mexico on a vacation trip.

The plane fell miles from a paved highway and about 700 yards from the nearest dirt road on which ambulances could travel, so that the injured had to be carried this distance across a muddy cornfield.

One Thrown Clear.

Rosenfelt was thrown clear of the plane and made his way about 20 yards in the darkness, where he fell into a ditch. Injured and shocked, he lay there until dawn when he made his way to the farm home of C. C. Sherman near Morrow which is about five miles south of the airport.

Sherman took him to a small store, and Rosenfelt telephoned for help shortly after 7 a.m.

Brady, who lay injured near the plane's wreckage, kept shouting to rescuers:

'For God's sake don't light any matches or cigarettes. You'll burn us up."

High test gasoline was dripping from the wrecked plane.

The plane first struck among some pines, ripping away one of its metal-covered wings and mowing a path through the trees. It crashed another 150 yards or so where a pine impaled the second wing and the sliced-open cabin skidded to a stop some 50 yards further.

Rosenfelt said the passengers had no indication that anything was wrong until the plane started losing altitude, then the lights went out and the impact came a few seconds later.

Air Line officials said the plane came in at 4,000 feet over Stone Mountain some 20 miles east of Atlanta, dropped down to 1,800 over the airport and reported it was "on the beam." Since the ceiling was only 300 feet because of low clouds and rain, it was decided to bring the sleeper in on a radio triangle and it was not heard from again by the field after it swung away on these invisible guidelines used for landing when weather cuts visibility.

Dog Leads Way To 'Phone

Hansell called help about dawn when he stumbled out of the splintered Skyliner, saw a small dog and followed it to the home of Farmer J. T. Lee, where he was able to use the phone to call the airport.

The first doctor to reach the scene climbed aboard the half overturned hulk of the cabin to administer hypodermics to the injured, including Rickenbacker.

The ace first great war flier was conscious and calmly gave directions for removal of himself and some of the other passengers.

"I lay all night on top of poor Moore and couldn't move," he said. Moore, the steward, apparently was killed outright.

While the injured were placed on stretchers for the laborious trek to the waiting ambulances, the dead were laid in a row beside the torn remains of the $120,000 Douglas bimotor monoplane.

The ambulance bearing the wounded sped to Atlanta hospitals.

Mrs. Littledale was trapped in the wreckage, pinned down by a fallen tree but when rescuers approached she told them:

"I'm all right; see what you can do to help the others."

Russia Reported requested the Ambassador to proceed to Turkey for the conference.)

Abdul Halik Renda, President of the Turkish National Assembly, also attended the conference.

Unofficial reports said Great Britain was sounding out Turkish reaction to a plan for regulating the traffic through the Dardanelles, the strategic waterway linking the Mediterranean and the Black Sea. Some sources said they believed Mr. Eden would propose that Turkey assume strict jurisdiction over the Strait, barring all merchant traffic without special permission.

(Such a step possibly would be designed to cut off one route for oil shipments to the Axis powers—Italy in particular. It might also be used as a club to prevent Bulgaria—dependent on the Straits for her sea-borne commerce — from yielding too easily to any German demands.)

First Conference.

Today's Anglo-Turkish conference was the first since Mr. Eden arrived here yesterday morning. Turkish and British circles alike expressed pleasure at yesterday's British announcement of capture of the Italian island of Kastelorizo with its seaplane base just off Turkey. The nearness of the base to Turkish soil long has been a sore point in Ankara.

The meeting broke up at 1 p.m. for a luncheon given by Premier Refik Saydam, but the greater part of the afternoon was left open for resumption of the discussions. President Ismet Inonu is expected to receive Mr. Eden later.

Reports from Sofia, meanwhile, disclosed that Gen. Nicola Petkoff, Chief of Staff of the Bulgarian army, had conferred last night with Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff preliminary to an emergency meeting of the cabinet.

There was no indication of the reason for the sudden activity, and the Bulgarian Government issued another denial of reports that German troops had entered the country.

Control of the Dardanelles has for centuries been a much sought prize, and Turkey's position astride the Straits is one of her chief sources of power, as well as a potential cause for conflict.

Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British Imperial General staff, who accompanied Eden to Ankara, was expected to continue talks with Turkish leaders on which he embarked yesterday immediately after his arrival.

McCarthy May Be 1st Ambassador

OTTAWA, Feb. 27—(CP). — The proposal of Conservative House Leader Hanson to raise the Canadian Legation at Washington to Embassy status with an Ambassador in charge instead of a Minister would, if brought into effect, result in the building up of a stronger staff there, officials said today.

After Mr. Hanson made his suggestion in the House of Commons Tuesday, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he had often considered the change and now that he had the support of the Opposition leader he would pursue it further.

Canada so far has no ambassadors. Leighton McCarthy, K.C., of Toronto, has just been appointed Minister to Washington, replacing Loring Christie, who has been ill.

The change of status at Washington would only be made after an agreement was reached with the United States officials said, because it would entail the United States Legation in Ottawa being raised to Embassy status at the same time.

Explaining that the time-honored distinction between an Ambassador and a Minister is that an Ambassador represents the Sovereign or President of a state, and a Minister represents a government, this informant said the difference had not been greatly emphasized in past years.

At social functions and on other formal occasions Ministers are far down in the order of precedence list as compared with Ambassadors.

This informant regarded the attitude taken towards the office by the press as one of the important advantages of an Embassy over a Legation. An Embassy would get more publicity than a Legation because newspapermen regarded it as more important.

The Quebec government has notified its municipalities that after March 31 it will stop contributions to relief costs in line with the step taken by the Federal government, which apparently leaves the problem in Quebec up to the municipalities unless further steps are taken.

Carrying Musso

BERLIN, Feb. 27 (AP)—Under a new German-Italian trade agreement negotiated in Rome, Germany will double steel deliveries to her Axis partner, according to D.N.B., German News Agency.

The trade deal will involve approximately 1,000,000,000 marks, available to each party.

Germany has been furnishing Italy's entire coal supply, which in the past year has amounted to 12,000,000 tons, D.N.B. said.

Italy will increase considerably deliveries to the Reich of agricultural products, pyrites and quicksilver.

A separate agreement already has sent an additional 250,000 Italian workers—especially skilled metal workers—to Germany thus far in 1941, making a total of 315,000 Italians employed in Germany.

The War Today

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

British diplomacy today appeared aimed at a new agreement with Turkey which might lead to tightened control about the Dardanelles, gateway to the Black Sea, and one of the reported objectives of Germany's push southeastward.

Observers saw significance in the aerial dash of Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Russia, from Moscow to Ankara, the Turkish capital, where Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has been conferring with Turkish Government heads. Russia is vitally interested in the Dardanelles through which her ships find egress via the Sea of Marmora from the Black Sea.

It was suggested any agreement affecting the narrow channel between the Sea of Marmora and the Aegean mght take the form of strict Turkish supervision of the movements of merchant vessels, possibly leading to a tightening of the blockade on Germany and nullification of her control over Rumanian Black Sea ports.

There is little doubt that the Mediterranean fleet maintains an extremely close watch over shipments of possible contraband through the Mediterranean, but this work ties up ships which might be used elsewhere and control could be more easily managed at the Dardanelles.

There is little doubt that whatever Mr. Eden has suggested to the Turks has met with at least tentative approval as the Turkish press and radio, both of which take their cue from their government, have shown him extreme cordiality and have been lavish in their expressions of friendship for Britain.

Meanwhile reports persisted of massing of a large German force on the Rumanian-Bulgarian border and there was evidence of considerable governmental activity in Sofia. Gen. Nicola Petkoff, the Bulgarian chief of staff, conferred last night with Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Popoff and an emergency cabinet meeting was scheduled.

Whether the conference and the cabinet meeting were connected with events at Ankara was not apparent. The Bulgarian government issued a further denial of reports that German troops had entered Bulgaria but gave no indication of what it would do if they did.

The attitude of the Bulgars to a German invasion might have a profound effect on Turkish policy. Should the Bulgars resist, the Turks could consider the German action an invasion and go to Bulgaria's assistance. However, should Bulgaria receive the Germans without resistance the Germans, in the letter of the law, could hardly be called invaders.

The new partnership established headquarters in Zurich. There they made the mistake of underrating the Swiss, who know much of spies and spying. They sent a telegram to a London cable address making a rendezvous with a certain "Major Palmer."

The Swiss recognized the cable address as one then used by the British secret service, so when "Major Palmer" called at the Zurich hotel there was a Swiss agent behind the potted palms.

For a month the Swiss watched the Baron build up his ring. Then they arrested the Baron and his aides.

By that time the Baron and the horse dealer had been joined by a beauteous Hungarian milliner travelling on a stolen Rumanian diplomatic passport and a Viennese waiter with a bogus Bulgarian passport.

While all four were in jail awaiting trial, three money orders arrived at the hotel of the potted palms addressed to the Baron; all three were sums for past services. They came from London, Rome, and Berlin.

Bad mistakes are not confined to the spies. There's the case of the late Inspector Pierre Jacoud of the Lausanne police. He had some considerable reputation as Switzerland's ace spy catcher until recently.

One sunny afternoon Inspector Jacoud sat in Lausanne headquarters with other stars of the anti-espionage squad when a German tailor on the spy suspect list rushed in carrying a large oblong package.

The tailor stated that the package had been delivered to him in the morning mail and that he had reasons to believe that it contained a bomb. The inspector would not be stampeded.

The inspector took the frantic little tailor's identification papers from his shaking hand and proceeded to copy them into a large black ledger.

At which point the package vindicated the tailor's worst suspicions. Jacoud was killed. The wall-splintered furniture and counter-espionage agents were strewn all over the sidewalk, where several passersby also were injured.

Howe Charged MacMillan Was Sabotaged

OTTAWA, Feb. 27. — (CP).— A comprehensive review of the situation on Canada's industrial war front was before the House of Commons to-day — a review in which Munitions Minister Howe placed the bulk of major wartime industries in the "up to schedule or ahead of schedule" class and described delays which kept aircraft and tank production behind schedule.

In his address to the House yesterday Mr. Howe also lashed out at critics of his department, particularly the financial post of Toronto which he described as the "No. 1 saboteur" in Canada since the war started.

He dwelt at length on rumors about the status of H. R. MacMillan, chairman of the Wartime Requirements Board, saying they were part of an attempt to "sabotage" the Vancouver lumber operator.

He paid tribute to Mr. MacMillan and expressed disbelief of reports which might indicate the chairman had discussed departmental business contrary to his oath of se-

ITALIAN troop and vehicle concentrations at Luzati and Fieri, on the Albanian front, and a convoy off the Albanian port of Valona have been bombed and machine-gunned by British fliers in support of Greek land forces.

After vehicles were hit at Luzati, southeast of Tepeleni, and military camps hits at Fieri with several large fires resulting, the attackers dived low and machine-gunned the Fieri headquarters and other targets, a British communique said today.

Other aircraft successfully machine-gunned a convoy and a gunboat two miles off Valona. All R.A.F. planes returned safely.

The wrecks of 6 Italian bombers washed ashore on Ionia.

Belmont Group Plans Bee For Five Quilts

HAVELOCK, Feb. 27 — (ENS). — The regular meeting of the Belmont Women's Institute was held in the Township Hall on Thursday. The meeting opened with the roll call, "Exchange of Valentines."

A discussion followed on ways of raising the funds. Plans were made to have a community quilting on February 27, when five quilts will be quilted, followed by a pot luck supper. A donation of two quilt tops and bats from Mrs. Charles Kennedy and one quilt top from Mrs. Redditt and Mrs. T. McQuigge were received. Mrs. L. McGowan moved that Mrs. George Smith be provided with material to make a three-story fruit cake, on which tickets would be sold and drawn at a card party on March 17, the first lucky ticket winning the bottom layer, the second ticket the second layer, and the third ticket the top layer of the cake.

The program under Mrs. James Seabrook opened with the singing of "O Canada." Mrs. William Anderson gave a paper on "A Canadian as Promoter of Canadian Prosperity." Mrs. H. L. Scott gave a paper on "Canadaziation," after which Mrs. William Smith gave an interesting demonstration on hooking rugs and exhibited one made with yarn and one braided. Mrs. Seabrook read a part of a letter received from Mrs. Miller of Warsaw, in which her appreciation of the kind remembrance of the branch, in sending her a piece of the birthday cake of their Institute anniversary.

Dainty refreshments were served.

Euchre Party.

The Dorcas Rebekah Lodge held a progressive euchre party on Thursday, when an enjoyable evening was spent by all present. Nine tables of euchre played, with the prize for highest score for the ladies going to Miss Thurza Hicks, and for the men's, Mr. John White. The lucky door prize of the evening went to Mrs. R. Jones. These card parties are sponsored every third Thursday of each month by the Rebekah Lodge.

Nazis Swinging Holland To Mere Colony

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—(AP).—The Nazi conquerors of the Netherlands are transforming Holland — one of the world's greatest trading nations before the war — into an "economic colony" of Nazi Germany according to authoritative reports received in diplomatic quarters here.

Transfer of major Netherlands shipping activities to German ports, the reports stated, provide the latest advancement of Germany's plans to change the Netherlands from a liberal, free-trade "middleman" into a "directed economy" fitting into the Nazi "new order" scheme for Europe.

Storage, transshipment, financing and insurance facilities, which have made Rotterdam and Amsterdam two of the world's most active and prosperous ports have now been shifted to Hamburg and Bremen, their German competitors, the reports said.

German occupation authorities already have established domination of Netherlands finance, industry and agriculture, the reports pointed out, by purchasing, requisitioning or assuming control over banks, factories and agriculture.

Despite German efforts to make the Netherlands a "paying conquest," the reports state that the blockade, breakdown of normal industrial and shipping facilities, and other effects of the war were creating increasingly severe problems, particularly where the nation's food supply is concerned.

150 War Factories

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—(AP).—The United States Commerce Department said on Wednesday Canad expected to complete 150 war factories, costing $270,000,000, by the end of 1941.

Advices from Canada indicated the projects include:

Shell plants, $31,000,000; armaments, $96,000,000; aircraft, $15,000,000; automotive, $6,000,000; chemicals and explosives, $87,000,000; machine tools, $11,000,000; miscellaneous, $34,000,000.

BC Cities Shape Plans In Case Of Aerial Raids

VANCOUVER, Feb. 27 (CP)—British Columbia's key cities—declared vulnerable to possible air attack in this war—are preparing to meet any menace from the skies.

Already a formidable organization of more than 5,000 civilian protection workers stands prepared here—as in other cities—to go into action at the first sign of a hostile warplane over Canada's Pacific gateway.

From the spreading city of Vancouver to nearby, New Westminster and tiny settlements of the Fraser Valley, their job would be to protect more than 400,000 civilians from fire and bomb, gas and shell.

Though far removed from the destructive scenes of war, other of British Columbia's seaport centres—Victoria, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo and Port Alberni—have set up similar organizations.

At Alberni even Indian men and women have enrolled for first aid, anti-gas and home-nursing training.

A provincial air raid precautions committee was formed under Major S. F. M. Moodie with $5,000 granted by the Dominion government. From this nucleus sprang civilian protection committees in the various cities.

Detective E. W. Morris, an officer skilled in the science branch of the Vancouver police department, was chosen to head the greater Vancouver organization, embracing 11 surrounding municipalities and the largest ARP area in the province.

Supplies Donated

Because of financial shortage, he had no office and no staff until the city donated an office and three stenographers volunteered their services. A city office-supply firm donated desks and the school board supplied typewriters.

Even before Detective Morris was thus established, he mapped greater Vancouver into 76 districts. Citizens of long-standing in each district were "approached" to act as wardens. Each warden divided his own district, appointed reputies and set up a small ARP organization within his area. Other workers were enrolled — including 1,500 women who would act as stretcher-bearers and ambulance drivers in any emergency.

Scores of instruction meetings meetings were held on first aid, anti-gas and fire auxiliary work and gradually the civilian protection workers learned what to expect and what to do under wartime bombardment. They learned how to handle civilian gas casualties, how to deal with incendiary bombs and how to evacuate office workers workers quickly from buildings.

City lawyers donated their services to lecture the workers on points of law concerning the Defence of Canada regulations.

Macaulay Rouses Women's Council

TORONTO, Feb. 27—(CP).—Leopold Macaulay, York South, who championed the cause of "poor relations" during a discussion of the devolution of Estates Act in the Ontario legislature, has aroused the ire of the women and Attorney-General Gordon Conant, who sponsored an amendment to the Act, is being petitioned to go ahead with it.

The amendment provides for the widow of a man dying intestate to receive the first $1,000 and two-thirds of the remaining estate. Under the present act, she receives $1,000 and one-half of the residue.

When the amendment came up for second reading, Mr. Macaulay asked that it be deferred. He argued the one-third of the remaining estate would leave little for the "poor relations of a rich man generally has."

The Ontario Provincial Council of Women has written Mr. Conant contending the present legislation is unjust.

"The widows have been treated unfairly and we hope you go ahead with the Bill," the Council's letter said.

He Writes Such Rot!

It is not worth while trying to keep pace with all which appears in the controlled Italian press. Mario Appelius is the military commentator in Mussolini's paper, Il Popolo d'Italia, and his conclusion is that when Italy entered the war the country was not sufficiently prepared. He wrote that following the address of Mussolini on Sunday.

His view is that "When a general says 'I have everything' it is time to remove him from command immediately because he knows not what he is saying."

We read too that the French collapse forced Italy to enter the war sooner than she had intended" to fight an overseas instead of a continental war."

That man has such infinite capacity for spewing blather.

If Italy had not completed her preparations for going to war then Benito Mussolini must be the world's greatest liar. For years we have been hearing nothing else than the excellence and extent of the Italian army, navy, air force. About the flame throwers who would work havoc on all those who faced them. We have seen parades where children, just little fellows, had been put into uniform at the time when they should have been playing in their own back yards, and they were to be the future Italia army.

"My invincible legions!" We'd been hearing of them until we grew sick of the sound.

There was nothing to force Italy into the war except Mussolini and those who can stomach him.

There would have been no overseas war to fight if Italy had not jumped in with the idea of sharing in French territory when it was plain collapse was near.

It was Mussolini himself who stirred Sir Archibald Wavell and his army of the Nile into action.

And after 17 years of planning and boasting—

And after hastening into a war against France when France was on the verge of collapse—

And after being booted from the mountains by the Greeks and chased across the desert by the British—

Then to read the claim of Mario Appelius that Italy entered the war before she was ready! That she was forced to fight an overseas (Africa) battle! If the people of Italy can swallow that stuff and like it they can probably guzzle their macaroni without cooking it.

An Important Post

A man should retire at 65? It seems not. Leighton McCarthy, K.C., who becomes Canadian Minister to Washington, was born in 1869, so he is in his 72nd year. What's more he looks forward to going to Washington, and feels he can meet all the demands which high office make upon him.

Hon. Loring Christie, Canadian Minister at Washington since 1939, has been a sick man since November, and he is still a sick man. That position is highly important at the moment, because the Canadian representative at Washington has got to do a number of things which may not be generally written on the record.

It is not too much to say that in a very real way Canada is the connecting link between Britain and United States. And saying that is in no sense a reflection upon the British representation in Washington. Besides that there is much in common between these two countries on the North American continent, and the similarity of interests is bound to increase. When two nations are bound together for the mutual defence of their areas they have arrived at a basis or junction point where the international boundary is not the last word in common interest.

Our belief is that Leighton McCarthy, despite his years, is the type of man needed in that post today. His years are an asset rather than a handicap because they have brought maturity of judgment and the ability to think sanely and well.

On Serious Business

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Sir John Dill chief of the Imperial Staff, have been in Turkey, and the cabled reports indicate they have been in conference regarding the joint defence of the Dardanelles, and "perhaps" Salonika, in view of the German movement through Bulgaria.

Elsewhere it is noted that Eden will also confer with Sir Archibald Wavell regarding the movements of the rather formidable army now under his command. It seems to be a question whether the drive against the Italians will be extended to include Tripoli, the capital city of Libya, or whether that army will turn toward the assistance of Greece and guarding the German drive against the Dardanelles.

The word "perhaps" is used in connection with British assistance for the Greeks against Italy. Reports which are probably quite correct indicate that such offers of assistance have been previously made and declined. The feeling of the Greeks has been that if the British became unduly active against Italy in the Albanian campaign then it would mean that Germany would at once enter the war at that point. If Greece handled the situation alone then Germany would do nothing about it.

That reasoning is defective because it ignores entirely the plain fact that British assistance has already been extended to the Greeks in generous degree. Britain was pledged to help the Greeks in the first place, and Britain kept that pledge to the letter. With the situation in Africa being what it is today the British would be in a position to become a stronger force than ever before in the operations in the Balkans.

The Greeks have been left little choice in the matter. Hitler has advised them to make peace with Mussolini on terms which Mussolini will direct. That would be for the purpose of keeping Greece quiet while Hitler marched his army through to Salonika where he might hope to strike at the British. This situation is bound to be clarified shortly, and the feeling grows that Hitler's fifth column efforts in that corner are not going to bring results which they did elsewhere. There is a common interest between Britain and Greece and Turkey, and it is that which takes Anthony Eden and General Sir John Dill to the Balkans. They are bent on serious business.

A Glorious Last Chapter

The story is told that Sir Frederick Banting spent his last minutes attending to the injuries of Capt. Joseph Mackey, the pilot of the plane on which Sir Frederick met death.

The pilot, after receiving treatment, made his way out to see where they were and what the chances would be of securing aid. He returned in a short time but Banting was then dead.

A man could not hope to die more gloriously. As a medical man he would be well enough aware of the extent and nature of his own injuries; he would feel the end was very close. And yet his last act with his last bit of strength was to give his services to another man who needed them.

There is something in that which in itself is greater than any memorial which may yet be raised to Sir Frederick Banting. His last act was for the purpose of helping some other person.

Soldiers Using Skis

A correspondent suggests that the use of skis for troops is something which is being overly stressed. He doubts if there are many occasions on which those who have received such training will ever be called upon to make use of it. He claims also that the speed with which such troops can travel has been over-estimated.

There are records which show the speed at which an experienced man on skis can travel. A championship was won only a day or so ago by Ulf Warmdal who entered a ten-mile cross-country race, and his time for that distance was 52 minutes and 11 seconds. He would of course be carrying none of the weight and equipment which a soldier would have to bear, but that time is impressive when it comes to covering distance where snow lies deep. A person walking on a good road or a pavement at four miles per hour is making very good going, but this man on skis going cross-country was making well over twice that speed.

The tragedy would come if the necessity arose to use skis and the men were not trained. The Italians tried it a few times when fighting the Greeks. Some poorly informed individual was seized by the belief that skis would aid, and so the troops were fitted and at once they were in trouble. They could not advance, neither could they retreat with sufficient alacrity, so they were caught. They pitched the skis away as having only nuisance value.

As a general thing we would regard ski training as quite good and practical. It is outdoor work and invigorating, and there is no saying when or where such training might be put to advantage.

As It Was On The Tenth

Reports from London tell about the work of a Cambridge University scientist, a Glasgow University chemist and a few helpers who developed a process for making tea leaves good for a second using. And considerable attention is being paid to the process. Claim is that on the second time up the tea is actually better than at the first lick. It "has something" on the second trip. Work on this process was first started in 1929, and with tea getting rather scarce it has come much to the front.

All of which goes to show that people are getting credit today for something which was started quite a long time ago. The business of using tea leaves a second time is not new. It existed on the Tenth Concession years ago, and it may still live there. There may not have been the scientific treatment applied which is in use today, but basically the idea is the same. Tea leaves used to be used there until they were worn out.

It always started after the noon-day meal. The tea-pot was a large affair, and it always seemed one could keep on pouring from it with no more danger of the thing going dry than a tap ceasing to flow. If more tea were required then more water was added.

When the meal was over that old brown tea-pot was shoved toward the back of the range and there it rested until about 4 in the afternoon. The folk in the house needed a little something or other about that hour and grandfather generally wandered in from the barn or elsewhere. He always caused it to be known he was not looking for a cup of tea, but in his own language he "could take some if it were going and handy." The tea kettle was primed into action with a stick of wood and when it sang more hot water was poured over the noon-hour tea leaves and more tea was forthcoming.

Nor did it end there. When that much service had been brewed, coaxed or forced from the tea leaves they were carefully taken and put away for the time when it would be right to sweep the carpet in the parlor or the spare bedroom. The theory was that the damp tea leaves when sprinkled about would gather up the dust along with them and keep it from rising and settling elsewhere. And no person ever questioned that theory. Today we see people spreading prepared stuff before sweeping. Same idea exactly. So by the time the tea leaves had done their duty on the Tenth Concession they were through and we doubt whether any present-day process, no matter how scientific, could breathe new life or ambition into them. They had done everything which tea leaves could reasonably be expetced to do.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Markdale had a bad fire, and one new building which was destroyed belonged to an insurance agent. Yes, you guessed it. There was no insurance on the place.

Police in Toronto recovered ten sewing machines which had been stolen. They worked on it for several days and appear to have the case sewed up tight.

Bread in Winnipeg is sold in the unwrapped state for six cents for a 16-ounce loaf. But an unwrapped loaf of bread must feel rather naked in this age.

U.S. Ambassador to Bulgaria hit a German on the chin, and that frequently happens when said chin sticks out too far.

Chatham City Council received a bill from Dover township for $475, and it dates back to 1926. And when Bill arrived at the meeting it is not recorded that any alderman rose to say "Come right in, we were expecting you."

Meeting was held to popularize No. 8 Highway running from Niagara to Goderich, the idea being to get U.S. tourists to travel along that way. The only trouble is that most tourists entering the country have their own ideas of where they desire to go.

FEAR

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I fear my Cousin Jake grows soft, and at his ways I've often scoffed, he fears disease will come; he reads of sickness miles away, and figures just inside a day, the germs will start to run.

¶ If Cousin Jake steps from the door, I know he trembles to the core, he is not brave or bold; he says a sudden change of air, will trap him like a hidden snare, and he will have a cold.

¶ He can't sit easy in a chair, a draft's attacking him somewhere, that way he cannot rest; he knows in just a little time, he'll feel a shiver down his spine, then wheeze inside his chest.

¶ His neighbor had the gout quite bad, and Jake was feeling rather sad, his talk was rather blue; he sought not for his neighbor's cure, but felt, he said, alarming sure, that he would have it too.

¶ If there's a fever in the land, then Jake can hardly rise or stand, for fear strikes hard at him; he feels hot flushes right away, is certain in another day, he'll have a burning skin.

¶ If Jake had all the things he fears, there would be cause for salty tears, he'd be a broken wretch; 'twould make the biggest list in town, if I could write the items down—of what he's going to catch.

CAP and BELLS

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

SOME weeks ago legislation was brought into force which forbade the import into this country of a wide variety of articles from the United States. Among the forbidden imports were a large number of magazines of the "pulp" class. A "pulp," for the benefit of anyone who may not know, is so called because it is printed on a very cheap quality of paper which is made by pulping newsprint, and "pulps" specialize in literature of the lurid variety. There are Love Pulps, Western Pulps, Weird Pulps and Phoney Science Pulps. Psychologists call all these "escape literature"; there is nothing a psychologist dislikes more than the idea that someone is trying to escape from something. But we know what the "pulps" are; they are folk-lore and mythology, very thinly disguised and dished up to the credulous but streamlined peasants of the North American continent.

C & B

There are several pulp-addicts in Canada, a few hundred thousand of them, and the legislation already mentioned deprived them of their favorite intellectual and spiritual food. Their condition was critical; it was as though someone who had spent all his life eating the hottest of Indian curry were suddenly to be condemned to eat bland foods. The demand was there, but no supply. But the opportunity was not overlooked; Canadian enterprise was equal to the situation and we have now in this country an infant pulp-magazine industry. We are producing at least one pulp magazine and a number of pulp comics.

C & B

THE magazine is devoted to stories of the supernatural and the weird. Its avowed intent is to make the readers' flesh creep. The copy which came to my hands was slim and unpretentious, but it was in the best pulp tradition. Mad scientists, family ghosts, lepers and the other paraphernalia of horror were well represented in it. The chief contributor was a Canadian who has made quite a reputation for himself in the U.S. as a writer of weird tales; this was Tommy Kelley, the former well-known pugilist and one-time sparring partner of Jack Dempsey. Kelley is unlike most ex-pugs; he has a good education, as he originally intended to go into the priesthood, and he has not had all his brains beaten out in the ring. When he gave up boxing he devoted his very fertile Irish imagination to writing weird stories for the pulps and soon became a leader in this field. As might be expected, his greatest ambition is to write what he calls "the straight stuff." So it is always; we discount our real gifts, and long for success in a line not our own.

C & B

Canada is now producing some of her own pulp comics. As observant newspaper readers will have noticed, the term "comics," which used to mean such entertaining features as Bring Up Father and Little Abner, now includes many strips which are not comic at all, except unintentionally. By far the most popular of these, and I believe the first to appear, is Superman. We all know Superman; I never miss any of his doings if I can help it. There are a score or more of imitations of Superman, all dealing with the doing of amazing strength and unusual powers who hurry about, doing good wherever they find an opportunity.

C & B

ON a newsstand a few days ago I picked up a booklet, published in Canada, called "Fantastic Comics" which I had not seen before, although this was the sixteenth issue. It was full of Supermen, of one kind or another, I read it with the deepest interest. It contained an instalment of the adventures of Sub Saunders in the undersea world where he wages war against a beautiful ruler called the Serpent Lady. There was also a vivid pictorial account of the manner in which Stardust, the Super-Wizard (who looks as though he might be Superman's little brother) outwitted a group of gangsters; as he possessed an unlimited supply of rays, as well as the ability to fly, it can hardly be called a fair fight. Two strong men called Samson and David also figured in this issue, and they too were after gangsters, and ended up by dragging an airplane right out of the sky. Space Smith and Yank Wilson were in the book too, and the latter, single-handed, (except for a few days) brought about the destruction of a fleet which belonged to a power remarkably like Japan. In all, it was a big ten cents' worth of wonders.

C & B

The children of Canada devour these things with avidity. Some people worry about it, but I cannot see that it is a harmful taste. The doings of these heroes are very like fairy-tales and stories from mythology, though they are not so well told. And the heroes represent a healthy tendency, on the whole; they are invariably on the side of Right. They spend all their time succouring the needy and aiding the oppressed. Even their rays and their telescopic vision are harmless; we may thank science for these. Science is the intellectual bugaboo of our day, and if we want anything to be believed we have only to preface our statement of it with "Leading scientists have shown...."

C & B

What is most interesting about these magazines is that they have given a new impetus to publishing in this country. Several reputable firms have struggled to make the publishing of Canadian books pay, without marked success. There is not a large enough public in Canada for the better class of literature. But apparently there is a public for pulp magazines, and if they succeed there may be an increased hope for better things. The best place to begin building anything is at the bottom, and the pulps are as near the bottom of literature as anything can be. I would not be surprised in the least if our Canadian literature of the future had its roots in the pulps of today.

• There's Another War On

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Is the minister speaking of the cost? I did not catch what he said.

Mr. HOWE: I am saying what has been the effect of the propaganda that went out, of that action by the press.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Of the announcement?

Mr. HOWE: The attack that was made. It was not the announcement. The announcement stated the facts. Here are some of the headlines:

Drew states millions to be saved for public by Bren contract veto.

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): That is probably true.

Mr. HOWE: Millions?

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): Probably.

Mr. HOWE: The original contract was for 12,000 guns. It would be hard to make millions out of that. Another:

Says government taking over war production in John Inglis plant vindicates him—

George Drew. Mark that.

Mr. HOMUTH: It did not vindicate the government.

Mr. HOWE: I doubt if it vindicated George Drew.

Mr. HANSON (York - Sunbury): That is a matter of opinion.

Mr. HOWE: I suppose it is; yes. To continue:

Which would otherwise have gone to a group of ambitious promoters who saw an opportunity to capitalize upon Canada's need for weapons.

We have a fine lot of statements there. I doubt if anyone would suggest that, while the brief I have before me may tend to exaggerate the harmful effects, such talk could be helpful to the production of the Inglis plant. What is the object of this sort of talk? What is behind it? Nothing but political kudos. My hon. friend rises in his place on a motion to go into supply on the estimates of the Department of External Affairs and talks politics about the Bren gun contract. Is that statesmanship? He says that so far as he is concerned the opposition will do its duty.

Mr. HOMUTH: Do yours.

Mr. HOWE: I am doing it. I am trying to protect the war production of this country. I am trying to stop attacks upon Bren gun production, and I am exposing the type of situation that we have so far as this discussion is concerned.

• Their Daily Arguments

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. VICTOR QUELCH (Acadia): First of all, I wish to make a few comments regarding the speech of the leader of the opposition (Mr. Hanson) and also one or two observations regarding the speech made by the house leader of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation (Mr. Coldwell).

I was somewhat puzzled by a statement made by the leader of the opposition to the effect that, while he would be definitely opposed to inflation at this time, he thought possibly it might be justified at a later date.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I did not say that.

Mr. QUELCH: Well, words to that effect.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I never said it would be justified. I said we might have to consider it at a later date.

Mr. QUELCH: The hon. gentleman thought we might have to consider it at a later date. I believe most people will admit that, in times when we have unemployment and undeveloped resources, monetary expansion is occasionally necessary. As a matter of fact, we maintain that it is necessary, and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Ilsley), in his speech in September, 1939, admitted that for the purpose of providing fuller employment and great production, monetary expansion would be desirable. But I cannot understand anyone suggesting that it might be more desirable at a later date after full production had been reached.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I never said that either.

Mr. GRAYDON: He did not say that at all.

Mr. QUELCH: I think Hansard will show that is what he did say.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I did not say it was desirable; I said that we might have to consider it later on.

INSPECTING MOTIVES

Mr. JOHNSTON (Bow River): You would rather lose the war, would you?

Mr. CHURCH: The object of these gentlemen is to take advantage of the war to propose their policies, and then in the elections take the reins of government after the war. There is no doubt about that. We have heard of the proposals of these parties in the house before.

Mr. MacINNIS: I submit that the hon. member has no right to impute motives to any other hon. member. We have let him get away with quite a lot. But there are limits to which he can go, and I suggest he should be so advised.

Mr. CHURCH: That is not a point of order. It is just another speech by the hon. member.

Mr. MacINNIS: I am speaking to a point of order.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member has a right to reply to a point of order. I am listening to him to his reply.

Mr. THORSON: Nobody pays any attention to him, anyway.

Mr. CHURCH: The hon. member for Vancouver East (Mr. MacInnis) should know even if it was a misstatement—which it was not—it is not out of order. If we were to call members of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation to order every time they make misstatements, they would be called to order every few minutes. Let me say to these gentlemen—

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member for Vancouver East has said, when raising a point of order, that motives have been imputed to him.

A Bit of Nonsense

Easier

The warden called a policeman to view an unexploded bomb. The constable produced his notebook and pencil.

"Now, what's the name of this road?" he asked.

"Nebuchadnezzar Terrace," said the warden. The policeman put his notebook away, picked up the bomb, and started staggering off with it.

"What on earth are you doing?" exclaimed the warden.

"Moving this thing into the High Street!" came the answer.

Wasted

She watched the door of her new establishment open to admit her first client. Business had started! A good impression must be created!

Hurriedly she grasped the telephone receiver and became engaged in an animated conversation. Then, an appointment having been arranged, she replaced the receiver, and asked: "What can I do for you, sir?"

A moment's pause, and then: "If you please, ma'am, I've come to connect the telephone!"

Good Reason

The wedding ceremony was at an end. Mamma sniffed convulsively, and the bride dabbed at her pretty eyes with a filmy handkerchief. One of the bridesmaids was also affected to tears. "Why do you weep?" asked a gentleman guest. "It's not your wedding."

The girl looked at him scornfully. "That's the reason!" she snapped.

After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.—Rev. 7.

"HAVE YOU OVERALLS?"

"HAVE you overalls?" a delegate to the farmer's gathering held last Friday in London, shouted at the Honourable James G. Gardiner. The reply of the minister was not reported. We can say this however. A number of years ago one of the farmers living near this good town hired the then youthful Gardiner for farm work. The first job assigned to the hired boy was driving a balky horse. Our farmer friend saw the problem ahead of the future prime minister and federal minister of agriculture for the Dominion, and left the two to settle the matter between them. The boss chuckled but the contest between balky equine and boy went merrily on. The result? There was a good forenoon's work done and horse and man lived happily ever after. Yes, "Jimmy" knows something about overalls and — balky horses.

Some folks say that he knows a little about human nature. Some go so far as to say that he can do a fairish job at taking care of himself on the platform, but as Mr. Kipling used to say, "That is another story."—Exeter Times-Advocate.

SHIP LOST HER NAME

IF THERE is anything in the ancient maritime superstition that ill-fortune becomes the lot of any ship which changes the name acquired at her launching, the Italian transport Lombardia, torpedoed in the Adriatic recently, must obviously have been trying the fates sorely. In a colorful career of over 20 years this vessel has borne four different names and flown the flags of five nations.

Completed in Germany in 1920, she was handed over as war reparation to Holland, but the Allies objected to this move and after a little legal pressure she became the property of the United States. The Americans ran her under the flag of Panama and later sold her back to the Germans. In 1935 the Italians acquired her and she became one of their principal transports. — Manchester Guardian.

Keep Roads Up Warns Dewan

TORONTO, Feb. 27—(CP).—Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan, addressing the Ontario Good Roads convention today, warned against the danger of neglecting the roads "in an over anxious economy program" in these critical times.

"We must not neglect the upkeep and complete maintenance of our highways—no matter how critical the times may be," he declared. "To do so would be false economy in the long run."

Farmers realized the importance of good roads in getting produce to markets.

The Association meets here today and tomorrow. It is observing the centenary of the first contributions of Ontario Municipal Governments to highways.

The Ontario Municipal Act, which made possible municipal control of improvements and borrowings, was passed 100 years ago at the instance of Lord Durham. Now the province has 72,538 miles of roads, of which 7,268 miles belong to the King's Highway system.

Premier Hepburn will make a presentation to K. W. McKay of St. Thomas, only surviving member of the group who organized the Ontario Good Roads Association in 1894. Mr. McKay has been County Clerk of Elgin and editor of the Municipal World, the official organ of municipal officers.

Strange Interlude In War At Sea

Although they face the triple threat of submarines, mines and bombing planes daily, these men of a British patrol vessel can still grin cheerfully as they watch one of their number give a shipmate a trimming. These little patrol ships are in port only for brief spells to refuel and take on ammunition and supplies. Their big job is keeping the sea lanes open that England may get her vital imports from overseas.

Christie Lauds C.N.E. Directors

TORONTO, Feb. 27 — (CP). — "There are some people who would stop everything in wartime if they had their way," said Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, at the annual meeting of the Canadian National Exhibition Association yesterday.

"They would stop the automobiles from running, they would close the gasoline stations, they would shut up the schools and colleges, and shed crocodile tears. And what would be the result of that? We would have the people on the streets wondering what to do."

He was moving a vote of thanks to the C.N.E. directors for carrying on and keeping the morale of the nation up by operating the Fair as usual.

Two things were needed, he said, in the strain of wartime. One was rest.

"People cannot work 24 hours a day. Industry tried a seven-day week and it failed."

Recreation was also needed to take the people's minds off wartime worries. The C.N.E. gave opportunity for this, he said.

Army To Follow Eden's Path Into Turkey?

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 (AP)—Britain has played a powerful card in the Balkan crisis in sending her ace diplomat, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, to Ankara to confer with Turkish officials. Uncertainty as to Turkey's attitude in the event of a German march in Bulgaria is the most confusing factor in the Balkan situation.

It might be well to recall that Mr. Eden's last trip eastward from London carried him to Africa, and was followed swiftly by the British African offensive. Presumably Mr. Eden carried the go-ahead signal to the British Army of the Nile.

The British victories in Africa might prove persuasive to the Turks, if they need persuasion, to fulfil their treaty obligations as Britain's potential war ally. These conquests and the progress being made in mopping-up operations in East Africa unquestionably have served to free a powerful British force for use across the Mediterranean.

Groundwork Laid

Although British desert armies would have to be seasoned anew for winter fighting alongside the Greeks in Albania, this would not apply in Turkey. Climatic conditions would be much more favorable for British Army participation in a Turkish-German war if that comes than in Greek-Italian fighting in Albania.

It is to be assumed that the groundwork for British-Turkish war co-operation has been laid in previous conferences between army staff representatives in Ankara. If Mr. Eden is in a position to pledge quick transfer of British fighting forces to Turkey or Macedonia it might easily be the deciding factor in shaping Turkish policy.

The Ankara conferences seem calculated to force Berlin to move in the East, or to exhibit a significant weakness.

A Germany engaged in war in the difficult Balkan mountain terrain, with powerful Turkish forces active on her flank and British bombers battering her line of march and supply depots, would be weakened for a simultaneous offensive against the British Isles. For one thing, there would be an added drain on German oil reserves.

Feeling Oil Pinch

British economic experts report the Germans already feeling the oil pinch. They say it will become serious before next winter. There have been many indications that security of her Rumanian oil sources, and not the rescue of Italy, is the primary objective of Germany's Balkan manoeuvres.

Failure of Germany to carry through with a Balkan thrust now would be a double blow to Italy. It certainly would mean resumption by Britain of the westward march in Libya and probably eventual elimination of Italian resistance there.

Just how eagerly Rome is grasping at every straw to bolster Italian morale is freshly indicated. Rome made much of a claim that German ground troops as well as planes are helping Italy in Libya and scoring victories. That any substantial Nazi mechanized force has actually arrived there through the British Mediterranean blockade is highly improbable.

Nickel Demand Tops Supplies

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 (CP)—The refining plants of the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, are now handling the entire output of the Falkenbridge Nickel Mines for the United States and British markets, the International Nickel Company announced yesterday. The statement also discloses that the immediate demand for nickel is greater than the supply.

The statement, issued today by Robert C. Stanley, chairman and president of International Nickel, says in part:

"The supplies of Nickel available in the United States market has been brought to record heights. Beginning in the latter half of 1940, the rate of deliveries has been about double that of any previous year.

"The greatly increased supplies have been made possible through progressive expansion by International Nickel in mining, milling, smelting and refining capacity. Despite the loss of the Falconbridge Nickel Refinery, in the invasion of Norway, the entire nickel matte production of that company is now being refined in Canada for the British and United States markets. The British Empire and the United States together are sharing all of the supplies of nickel which, prior to the war, were serving the needs of the rest of the world."

PRATTEN RINK CAPTURES THE NEILL TROPHY IN A CLOSE FINISH

Extra End Is Required To Get Winner

By HERB. MARTIN .

As we said in last night's column regarding the finals of the Neill Trophy. "We'll toss the coin, and you guess it." That is about as close as we have come to any prediction on the outcome of curling games, for a long time.

The finals of the Neill Trophy, primary event, between W. A. Pratten and C. Giroux, will probably go down in the club history as the outstanding game for the season of 1940-41. Never in our time, and we have been here well over a quarter of a century, have we seen such a hard-fought game as was witnessed on ice No. 5, by a good crowd that packed the upstairs and downstairs, and in fact every vantage point was occupied.

The crowd seemed to sense the idea that this pay-off would be a dandy, and they were not disappointed.

At the end of the regular 12 ends, each side had scored six ends, with each a total of 12 points; is that close enough? On the extra end it was all Giroux until Robinson, with his last stone, a hit a combination that proved to be a winning one.

Consolation Event

In the Consolation event, Fred Batten, with Elmer Metcalfe as anchor man had no trouble disposing of D. Charlton. After the first two ends the result was never in doubt.

It was the first loss for the Giroux boys in 15 games—some record.

Arthur Robinson, who viced for Ray Pratten, got up from a sick bed to play. Nerve and grit is what we call it.

Both leads playing their first year's curling did a good job of it.

We watched the game closely, with the idea of featuring some particularly play by any one player. We couldn't do it. They were all good. In fact, d—— good.

That big four that Giroux got on the eighth end looked like as if it might have settled the argument. But Pratten couldn't see it that way—He was right.

When the second end had been played there were 14 stones on the rings; the other two having been tapped out.

You have to hand it to our friend Fred Batten; he had two first year men playing, and they were good.

"Ike" and Elmer the Great, teamed up like as if they had been playing together for years.

This young lad, H. Watson, 14 years old, who played second for D. Charlton, is a comer. He wanted to curl, he was a little short on the money end; he sells his complete hockey outfit, boots, skates, sticks, sweaters and pads, joins the Lakefield Curling Club, and in his first bonspiel cashes in on the prize list. And what a swell job that kid did playing second. In a couple of years it is going to be too bad for Tanner, Northey, Charlton and Co.

And so the 1940-41 Neill Trophy passes on as one of the best local bonspiels ever held at our club.

Secretary Harry Foote and Tom McArthur made a real job in handling the draw.

It will be a mixed bonspiel on Saturday afternoon at 1.45 p.m. More later.

Training Highlights Of The Ball Camps

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 27—(CP).—Manager Joe Cronin has all of his 19-man pitching staff at work now that Oscar Judd has checked into camp from his Ingersoll, Ont., home. The Canadian, who has been working out in a gymnasium for the last six weeks, appears farther advanced than any of the other Red Sox chuckers.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—Winning the National League batting championship didn't clinch a regular's post with the Pirates for Debs Garms. Manager Frankie Frisch has him working out with the second squad, giving Jeep Handley first call at third base.

PASADENA, Calif.—So many infielders are around the Chicago White Sox camp Manager Jimmy Dykes may remove himself from the active player list. With such infielders as Jimmy Webb, Bill Knickerbocker, Dario Lodigiani and Rookie Don Kolloway ready to battle for second place alone, Dykes wonders if there will be room for him.

AVALON, Calif.— The "holdout plagued" Chicago Cubs still have their quota of absentees, but the most conspicuous among those present is the streamlined Dizzy Dean. At one time last season Dean tipped the scales at 217. Today he weighs 194, says he's in fine shape, and looks it.

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Jeff Heath is getting special attention from Manager Roger Peckinpaugh in a campaign to improve his batting form. Trying to restore the Fort William-born fielder to his 1938 effectiveness, the Cleveland manager keeps telling Heath to "be ready to swing at every ball before it leaves the pitcher's hand."

ANAHEIM, Calif.—The last man to leave the Athletics' training ground these days is Bennie McCoy, Connie Mack's 1940 prize rookie who proved a disappointment. Acting on his own, the $65,000 second baseman starts a one-man pepper game when the rest of the squad has gone, tossing a ball against a concrete wall and fielding on the rebound. He's trying to improvve his groundwork.

MORE VITAMIN A

LONDON—(CP).—While the nature of the product was not divulged, it was announced in the House of Commons experiments were being made to determine the value of the certain Vitamin A food to military night fliers.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Peterborough Senior B squad are through for the season. For the third time in a row Kingston came from behind in the last period last night to pull the game out of the fire after the Petes had set up a slender lead in the first two stanzas. The final score was 4 to 2 and the game was a replica in every respect of the Monday night game at Kingston. In both games the losers scored two goals in the first period to lead 2 to 0; the winners picked up one in the second and then surged back on the strength of a three-goal wave in the final twenty minutes to cop the verdict by the same score. As a result the Combines take the Eastern Ontario O.H.A. Senior B group three games to one. The Petes grabbed the first game in Kingston 2 to 1 but the next three all went to the Combines when a strong finish wiped out an early Peterborough lead.

* * * * * *

Considering the fact that the Petes were never able to ice the same lineup two games in succession and that they have been shy some of their best performers in every playoff fixture the home talent has made a gallant stand. The loss of Jim Ellis was the first blow that fate handed out. Came then a bad injury to fast-moving Joe Blewett early in the first game of the final series. Then Eddie Starr developed the flu, Gardner had to stay out of one game and Drake Jopling and Don Crowe were missing from some of the contests and both were absentees last night. In spite of these gaps the Petes have battled hard in every game and have made all four fixtures a real argument with the result in doubt almost to the final whistle. It has been one of the odd angles of the series that after outplaying all and sundry in the last period of nearly every game they played all season the homesters should find themselves outscored three times in a row in the last twenty minutes in the group final games after taking an early lead.

* * * * * *

The Petes have had a good season, in spite of the bad breaks sustained in the final series. They got away to a poor start in the group race but got on an even keel to wind up in second place and eliminate the Belleville Reliance club before going on to lose out to the first-place Kingston Combines. This Senior B group has been a huge success. With Kingston and Whitby added to the Belleville-Flyers-Peterborough trio there has been a lot of pleasing hockey and although the Petes are now out of the running they have earned the plaudits of the fans for the many good games that have been staged here this season. Now that the Combines have won the honors the best wishes of the Peterborough players and fans will go with them in their games in the playdowns. They are a colorful team who play smart hockey and clean hockey and there have been no unpleasant features in the playoff series. It was hard, fast going but nothing mean or dirty handed out and so Peterborough hopes that good luck will follow the Kingston club in its quest for provincial honors.

* * * * * *

Peterborough still has a club in the O.H.A. race. Archie Weir's Colts are battling for group honors in the Junior B series with Oshawa and the fourth game of the playoffs takes place at Brock St. Rink on Friday night. The Petes lead in the series two games to one and a victory for them here tomorrow night will wind up the argument. On the other hand an Oshawa victory would leave the two clubs tied and make a fifth game necessary. The Petes are determined to get the whole thing over tomorrow night by taking Oshawa into camp although since the return to Frank Black's club of the mysterious Mister McMullen who bobbed up from nowhere to figure in seven goals the other night the local kids know they have a battle on their hands. They took a beating from Oshawa Monday night when they were on the catching end of a whole lot of rough stuff but they want to forget that tomorrow night and concentrate on scoring goals. The best revenge to be had against a dirty team is to outscore them and that should be the ambition of the young Petes tomorrow night.

* * * * * *

How rough Monday night's game in Oshawa was may be judged by the following caustic comment from the Oshawa Times in regard to the battle: "Local wingman, Andy McMullen, who rejoined the home squad for this important game, compiled a total of 7 scoring points made up of 3 goals and 4 assists. His fine offensive play was marred somewhat by his general behavior, for which he drew down two penalties, a minor and a major, and only escaped another major by leaving the ice, for repairs, before the referee got that particular brawl under control. Brother Junior McMullen also turned in an aggressive game, garnering a goal, on a double pass from Painter and Galbraith, but he also drew down three penalties for his pugilistic endeavors. The Oshawa team were guilty of a too-free use of illegal tactics in the defensive area, particularly on the part of Galbraith, who drew several penalties and indulged in a little display of rowdyism that has no place at any public gathering. True, his defensive work was effective, and his rushes always dangerous, but he spoiled his otherwise fine effort by questionable behavior. Burkhart, local netminder, was the defensive star of his team, robbing the fast Peterborough forwards of many "sure things" and only the worst of bad luck deprived him of a well-deserved shutout."

* * * * * *

Some of the statistics of the Kingston-Peterborough playoff series are interesting. They show that in the four games the Petes have been supreme in the first period, the second period has been a low-scoring session with Kingston having the edge and that in the final twenty minutes of each game the bulk of the scoring was done, the Combines more or less dominating the play. In the first period of the four games the Petes outscored Kingston 6 goals to 2, in the second the Combines had a 2 to 1 advantage but in the last stanza the group winners ran in a total of 11 goals as against 3 by the Petes. An odd feature of the playoffs has been that all four games were won in the final period and that in three of them the winner was behind at the end of the second session. Another odd thing about the season's play between the two clubs is that while Kingston won four games against two by the Petes, the latter outscored them 24 to 23 over the half dozen games. That is accounted for by the 11 to 3 score registered against the Combines here in their first visit of the season. That was a costly splurge for the Petes for it drove Udall out of the Kingston nets and Burrows who replaced him has been one of the greatest factors in Peterborough's final defeat.

The final series in the playoffs of the South-End League gets under way tonight in all three divisions at the Sacred Heart Rink. At seven o'clock, the Canucks and King Edward Bantams meet in a bantam game, and league-leading and undefeated Canucks will have to be at top form to keep their record intact, as King Edward are improving every time out. At eight, Ira Dundas' Colts tangle with Eddie Jobe's Royals, and this game is a toss-up. At nine, Courneyea's Aces and Murphy's St. Peter's meet in the Juvenile finals, and this too should be a hotly contested game, with the Aces having a slight edge. The final series is of two games, total goals to count.

Rookies' Chance In Major League Is A Big Hop

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 — (CP). — There's always a possibility, but slim, that a rookie can jump from baseball's lower minor leagues to the majors in one big hop. About 50 recruits are going to try to make that running broad jump this spring.

Sid Hudson made it a year ago. He twirled for Sanford in the Florida State League in 1939. And last year he was one of the rookie stars of the American League. Not many, though, can get a through ticket like Sid did.

Hal Reiser from Elmira seems most likely to make the grade this year. Reiser, however, is not exactly a rookie, for he played part of last year in Brooklyn's outfield. The Dodgers are counting on him for regular service in 1941.

The Giants are paying close attention to a young outfielder from Richmond, Walter Maynard, who led his league with a .337 average.

Woodrow Rich looked like a comer during his trial with the Boston Red Sox a couple of years ago. Then he developed a sore arm and went back to the minors. He was with Scranton last year and if he has his old stuff the Red Sox will welcome him.

Sherrard Robertson of Charlotte is a fancy fielder, but his weak hitting may keep him from staying with the Senators.

Cleveland was impressed last spring by Pitcher Mike Naymick. He was with Wilkes-Barre last year and the chances are the Indians will figure he needs still more seasoning.

The Red Sox are going to give a chance to Norman Brown, who won 11 and lost five for Rocky Mount. Vernon Kohler's 18 and five record for Flint interested Cleveland. Alex Zukowski won 22 and 14 for Greenville and the Senators will look him over. The Bees will inspect Arthur Johnson, 17-game winner for Hartford.

Tobogganing Party

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 27 (ENS) —A tobogganing party was staged by members of St. John's Young People's Union in place of their regular meeting on Monday. About thirty members attended to spend a most enjoyable evening. They returned to the Sunday School rooms for a hot lunch later in the evening. Clara Lucy, Pearl McComb and Ruth Holmes were in charge of the refreshments. The next meeting will be in charge of Mrs. E. Archer.

Contender In $100,000 Handicap

Baglav Wins Grand Treble Race

BOMBAY, Feb. 27.—(CP)—Baglav, English-bred five-year-old thoroughbred, completed a grand treble by winning the Eclipse Stakes of India—blue riband of the Indian turf. Baglav previously had won the King Emperor's Cup and the Viceroy's Cup.

Baglav, owned by G. N. Musry, beat Passes Pass II by a neck in the Eclipse Stakes. Pierrot finished third and Chanak fourth. The winner covered the mile-and-a-half in 2:03 4-5.

Challedon Is Only Class Horse Entered $100,000 Handicap—A Seabiscuit Needed

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27—(AP).—There is no sense in looking for something gone forever, but there is one thing missing about the coming $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and it answers to the name of Seabiscuit.

The big race Saturday doubtless will add another golden chapter to Santa Anita's gold-plated history. But the seventh running of the event could use a Seabiscuit in the cast. There is one class horse in the field and his name is Challedon.

Mioland, Seabiscuit's successor in the C. S. Howard stable, is the present heavy favorite. But few will admit that the Oregon-bred colt could beat Challedon if Challedon was the same horse of last year and the year before.

After Mioland and an untrained Challedon come the Can't Waits, Viscountys, Woof Woofs and Whatnot, and that's about all you can say of them—except that either one might make a has-been out of either Mioland or Challedon or both.

Indians Regain Leadership Of AmericanLeague

(By the Canadian Press.)

The case of young Alfred Thurier, the man who might have made the difference, could be advanced today as one of the heftiest blows landed on Mervyn (Red) Dutton's well-kicked pants in this National Hockey League season.

While injuries by now have just about put the final kayo to the playoff chances of Dutton's New York Americans, there was a time when fate smiled more warmly on Red. It was at the first sign of lady luck's cold shoulder, about two months ago, that Thurier entered the picture.

When the Amerks began to slip, the first prop tried by Dutton was to call up the brilliant young centre from Springfield Indians, the Amerks farm club in the American League. Leading scorer in the minor loop, Thurier, a 24-year-old native of Granby, Que., had been going great guns with Eddie Shore's Indians.

All seemed well when he continued the pace in the big time, celebrating his first game with the Amerks by scoring two goals. Then fortune frowned in earnest—Thurier suffered a leg fracture that would put him on the sidelines for at least a month.

Amerks Sought More Aid

The Amerks slip became a landslide and the desperate Red, unable to wait for Thurier's return, cast about for added replacements for his ailing crew from the Indians. With Springfield in the thick of the battle for their sectional lead, Dutton apparently added the proviso that Thurier would be returned to the Indians in exchange for their immediate help—and thereby hangs the tale

Springfield has slipped from first to as low as third place in the A.H.L.'s eastern section while Thurier's leg was healing, but his return marked a new drive. That drive was climaxed last night when the high-scoring centre bagged two goals as the Indians whipped Hershey Bears, 5-4, to regain their top berth.

The two tallies put Thurier in front of the league's marksmen, despite his lengthy absence, with a total of 25 goals.

Gained at home, Springfield's victory shot them into first place in the Eastern section, one point ahead of Providence Reds, who were beaten 6-1, by the Hornets at Pittsburg in one other league match. The triumph moved the Hornets nearer to the third-place Indianapolis Capitals in the Western section.

KINGSTON COMBINES WIN BY 4 TO 2 AND ELIMINATE THE PETES

Fourth Game Is Duplicate Of Third Affair

The Kingston Combines are Eastern Ontario O.H.A. Senior B group champions. In a game that was a perfect duplicate of Monday night's battle at Kingston, even to the period scores and the final tally the smooth-working Kingston machine hung up their third victory in a row over Peterborough here last night by 4 to 2, after the Petes had led 2 to 0 at the end of the first half and 2 to 1 at the close of the second.

One again after the losers had had the bulk of the play for two periods three quick thrusts in the final stanza, three passing plays worked with smooth deftness for picture goals more than offset the pressure the battling Petes had exerted during the first forty minutes. Facing elimination, the Peterborough team, short-handed with Jim Ellis, Joe Blewett, Drake Jopling and Don Crowe all absent, gave everything they had to sew up the series and for two periods about the only thing that prevented them from piling up a score was the fine work of Jim Burrows in the Kingston nets. Kingston fans including Jim Sutherland and Flat Walsh credited Burrows for the victory and certainly his stonewall blocking of shots from all angles held the Combines up when the Petes were storming in and threatening to run up a string of counters. At one stage in the second period he stopped four hard shots at short range in as many seconds and his performance at that stage was so outstanding that the crowd broke into enthusiastic applause.

Held the Fort

Burrows held the fort during two periods of steady pressure on the part of the Petes and then the Kingston attackers came through with their clever passing plays in the final period to give the Combines the win.

The Petes, handicapped by the loss of key men, put up a valiant fight to stay in the running and their defeat under the circumstances and against a club that once back of a defence knew how to cash in on its scoring opportunities, was nothing about which to be ashamed. The homesters had one strike on them in every game of the series, because of players out through injury or illness but went down fighting.

The Combines were without the services of Len Lane, big centre man of the second line and he was missed although other members of the squad arose to the occasion. The Kingston heroes in addition to Burrows were Bobby Neilson who played fine hockey going both ways, Mel Williamson who figured in two of the four goals and Walt Gerow who fired two counters home, including the winner and had an assist beside.

The Petes were without both Don Crowe and Drake Jopling who were unable to get down from Toronto. As a result the losers had only three defence men in uniform. All the home squad worked hard to force a continuation of the round with Red Creighton turning in one of his best efforts of the year and Jack Jopling always prominent. The first string line, usually the scoring line, usually the scoring threat, tried hard but lacked the fire and zip of earlier games. Godfrey, Burton and Gardner turned in good cards on the defence and Harding, although not called on to handle nearly as many shots as Burrows, made some smart saves.

Score Twice In First

The Petes carried the battle to the Combines in the first period but although they buzzed around the Kingston nets frequently could not beat Burrows. The Kingston team did not threaten very often although Bobby Neilson came close on one fine play. Even when Burton was serving a penalty the visitors' attack did not get working. The Petes finally broke into the scoring column. Jack Jopling dashed down the left boards with Creighton trailing and when Jopling lost the puck the left winger picked it up and cut loose a long, low shot that slithered into the corner of the net before Burrows could sight it. The Petes kept on storming in and Heal made it 2 to 0 at the 14-minute mark when he hammered home a rebound after Kingdon and Tompkins had carried the rubber in.

So far as territorial play was concerned the second period was almost a repetition of the first. The Peterborough team bottled the visitors up frequently and did everything but score. On one occasion Kingdon, Tompkins, Heal and Gardner all rapped shots at the Kingston guardian of the twine but he kicked out all four drives. Finally after all this excitement and after the Petes had pressed steadily it was the Combines who scored, Walt Gerow doing the trick when he worked out of the corner in front of the net to beat Harding from close-in for the first Kingston goal.

It was the only score of the period and came at the 16-minute mark. The Combines started out in the final period using four forwards, Gerow being back on the defence. Play was more even than in the other two periods with Kingston beginning to cut loose with threatening rushes. However the Petes held on grimly and half the period had gone before the Combines finally sewed up the game. Bobby Neilson and Mel Williamson teamed up to pass their way through the defence and Williamson made sure of the play by pulling Harding out and sliding the rubber into the empty cage. Two minutes afterward Walt Gerow laced the winning goal into the rigging when he picked up a lose puck after White had carried the disc over the Petes' blue line, Gerow fooling Harding with a hard drive. Hood made the win sure at the 14-minute mark when he scored smartly after Gerow and Mel Williamson had set him up on a perfect passing play. Williamson might have taken the shot himself but he put Hood absolutely in the clear with a smooth pass at the right moment.

That score meant curtains for the Petes. They did not stop trying but the sting was gone out of their attack and the Combines held them out effectively for the balance of the game and skated off group winners.

GlennRossGrabs 3-Goal Lead In 'Semi' Opener

TWEED, Feb. 27—(ENS). — The largest crowd of the season saw the fast skating Glen Ross Sailors take a three-goal lead in the first of a home-and-home series with Evergreen. The fixture was the first of the semifinal series which lead up to the final playoffs for the championship if the Centre Hastings League.

Glen Ross went down one goal early in the game, then MacMullen scored on a neat pass from Cook at the four-minute mark. Midway through the period Martin tied the count on a brilliant lone effort and from there on Glen Ross were never headed.

The middle session was broken by the lone tally scored by Vandervoort from Macdonald as the period ended. Reid and Armstrong served time for roughing in this session.

The other two tallies were bagged by the shifty Doug Martin, who played one of the best games of the season.

The prize for comedy for the evening went to Evergreen's goalie, Rodgers. Late in the final session his pads became disarranged, and after trying for several seconds to attract the officials to get time out to make repairs, he pried the net loose from its moorings, and turned it completely around. Russ Pyear climaxed a brilliant rush to fire the puck at the back of the net behind which Rodgers calmly stood trying to fix himself up.

The most brilliant play of the night was Pyear-Martin combination that climaxed with Martin batting the puck by Rodgers and piling into the twine himself. Martin got assists on both his counters.

The lineups:

Glen Ross — Goal, Brooks; defence, Brown and Armstrong; centre, Martin; wings, R. Pyear and G. Pyear; subs, Vandervoort, Macdonald, Tucker and Morrow.

Evergreen — Goal, F. Rodgers; defence, B. Stapley and D. Reid; centre, Don Rodgers; wings, R. Balle and C. Wright; subs, Cooke, Wright, MacMullen and Staple.

Referee—E. Wallace, Stimpson.

Hamilton Team Is Eliminated

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 27—(CP)— St. Catharines Saints and Toronto Marlboros to-day remain the only teams in the running for the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A championship, with Hamilton Dofascos the last semi-finalist to fall by the wayside.

Dofascos played their final game of the season here last night, collapsing in the third period under terrific St. Catharines pressure that produced eight goals and gave the Saints a 12-6 victory, ending the best-of-seven series. Hamilton had won the first and third games, Saints the second, fourth, fifth and sixth.

Roy Heximer led the Saints with four goals and was a star in the third-period outburst. The score had been tied at 4-4 going into the final period.

Red Reynolds and Ray Hastie each counted three goals for Saints, Rosy Rossini, Paul Mundrick one each. Dillon Brady scored three for Hamilton, with Dick Groom, Bill Woodward, and Bill Conick getting the others.

OWEN SOUND, Feb. 27.—Owen Sound Juniors concluded their regular schedule in Owen Sound last night, suffering a 4-3 reverse at the hands of the Barrie Colts, the second-place club in the district Junior "B" grouping. Barrie and Owen Sound will commence their group finals next week. In four meetings this season the Owen Sound club has come out with one victory and one draw game, scoring twenty goals as against Barrie's twenty-one.

Barrie.—Goal, Wardell; defence, McGill, Saunders; centre, Reid; wings, Bowen and Wheeler; subs., Bird, Hayes, Spence. Kelly, Gibbons.

Talk N.Y. Runner For Champ Miler

NEW YORK, Feb. 27—(CP)—Leslie MacMitchell, a New York University junior, may push the names of Sidney Wooderson, the English runner, and Glenn Cunningham, the U.S. runner, out of the track record books.

MacMitchell finally has arrived as a miler. He won the Baxter mile of the New York A.C. games the other night with a 4:07.4 performance.

That tied the Madison Square Garden record made in 1938 by Cunningham and equalled twice last year by Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin. Cunningham has the fastest American outdoor time—4:07.7—while Wooderson holds the world record at 4:06.4.

Kitchener Rink Puts Out BobcaygeonFour

TORONTO, Feb. 27 —(CP)—A Kitchener rink with a Hall at the helm once more will carry the hopes of the Ontario Curling Association into the Dominion championship Macdonald's Brier event, to be held in Toronto starting March 3.

This time Perry Hall is the skip and the personnel is changed from that of the Kitchener rink which won the Canadian title under Bert Hall, Perry's brother, in 1939 and competed unsuccessfully for the same honor last year. On those rinks Perry Hall was third man and vice-skip, but this year he skipped a rink of his own and he eliminated his brother on an extra end during preliminary eliminations several weeks ago.

The Kitchener four won the right to represent Ontario last night here with a 14-4 victory over William Mark's Bobcaygeon quartet, with Mark conceding defeat after the 10th end. Hall was drawing with almost faultless skill from the beginning and Mark had nothing to match him. Hall's supporting cast, W. Henderson, Jr., lead; A. Lehnen, second; and J. A. Lucas, third, was as steady as its skip.

Hall's rink beat Ken Miles of Toronto High Parks 9-6 in one semi-final while Mark eliminated Dan Kelly's Toronto Granites 11-10 in the other.

Semi-Final Round

A Little Horse-Play At Giants' Training Camp

Knocking Daffy Dizzy is the title of this horse-play at the New York Giants' training camp in Miami. Putting the "crusher" on Paul Dean is none other than Harry Gumbert and that's a better 'toe hold' than Daffy intends to let any of the opposing batters get when he starts flinging them this year.

Institute Cuts Out Lunch At Its Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 27 (ENS) —Ladies attending meetings of the Seymour West Branch of the Women's Institute will no longer be served with refreshments at the close of their meetings. They decided at their regular monthly session held at the home of Mrs. G. Curle that lunch was one of the regular items of each meeting that could be dispensed with until the war was over.

In order to facilitate their money raising and work efforts members decided the branch should divide itself into three groups and just so that no one person would be left with the responsibility of a group the ladies decided not to name group leaders but to make each one equally responsible. One group is composed of members living on the 10th and 11th Concessions, the other two from the east and west side of No. 30 Highway. It was announced that work was already in progress on a monogram quilt for which a charge of ten cents a name was being made.

To arrange next year's programs, a task that is always begun well in advance a committee comprising Mrs. Harry Hoard, Mrs. Donald Rutherford, Mrs. Cecil McCulloch, Mrs. Fred McCulloch and Mrs. E. Fairman was named. To inspire interest from younger girls a Girls' Club has been formed under sponsorship of the branch and a large membership is expected. Leaders of the group, whose project is "Club Girls Stand on Guard," are Mrs. Charles Fraser and Mrs. Howard Clark.

Topic Presented

The report of the War Work Committee was given by Mrs. James Waters to whom 9 quilts, 10 pairs of sox, 2 turtle-neck sweaters, 2 scarves, were turned in at the meeting. These will be given to the Red Cross. "Something that Money Cannot Buy" was the topic presented during the program by Mrs. R. McCulloch who presided for this part of the meeting. Other items on the program included the reading of letters received by members from soldiers overseas who got parcels bearing the institute label.

Mrs. Gerald Stephens nee Beatrice Rutherford expressed thanks to the Institute for the wedding present she received.

Indians Would Aid

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Feb. 27 (AP)—The Klamath Indian tribes, among the wealthiest in the United States, want to help the National Defence program. The tribal council voted to offer $150,000 of its $2,500,000 on deposit in the United States treasury for establishment of a "training school for Klamath Indians along national defence lines."

Gunning For Goering

The entire British Commonwealth of Nations is firmly united in the fight against the Axis powers. The air force is a composite of the Empire, as this picture shows. On the LEFT is Sergeant the Hon. Michael Strutt, of Nottinghamshire, England, and on the RIGHT is Sergeant J. D. Herbert, a Canadian farm boy from High Tor, Sask. They are pictured here at Ottawa awaiting the call to service overseas. Both have just completed training with the Royal Canadian Air Force as wireless operator air gunners. The badge with one wing and the letters "AG" is the trademark of their grim calling. The Lewis machine-gun they hold is a type used sometimes for training purposes.

Donegal Woman Made 40 Quilts For War Victims

Beginning war work last summer, women of the Donegal community, east of Norwood, have directed their energies mainly toward making quilts. This week they completed the fortieth quilt. They have raised $85.50 to buy material needed for the quilts.

A short time ago, Mrs. Harold Van Volkenburg pieced an attractive quilt top of the pattern "Aunt Eliza's Star" and after the women finished the quilt, they decided to sell tickets on it. The sum of $45.50 was raised by this method. The remaining $40.00 was donated or collected at the quiltings.

In addition to the above, from material supplied by the Norwood branch of the Red Cross, seven pairs of slacks, six blouses and two jackets were made by Mrs. Matt Stevenson and Mrs. Arthur McKay. Mrs. Wilbert Wildman also knit three pairs of socks and three pairs of mitts.

Women who have donated material or money for quilts are: Mrs. Gideon Brown, who is in charge of the work; Mrs. John Starke, Mrs. George Humphries, Mrs. Samuel Buck, Mrs. Robert McMillan, Mrs. David Starke, Mrs. Roy Brown, Mrs. Roy Leeper, Mrs. W. Delicate Stage

TOKYO, Feb. 26. —. (AP).—The Tokyo peace conference in which Japan is mediating in Thailand's conflict with French Indo-China "has entered into the most delicate stage" since the Japanese government two days ago submitted "what is regared as its final mediation plan," the newspaper Asahi said to-day.

The plan, according to outlines appearing in the press, calls for the cession of three considerable tracts along the Mekong river by Indo-China to Thailand. Thailand asserts the land was taken from her by French between 1893 and 1907.

Nothing is said of Thai concessions to Indo-China.

Leaders Watch N.Y. Rangers

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Every time New York Rangers show any signs of playing the hockey that made them top team in the National Hockey League last season, the rest of the boys around the N.H.L. check up to make sure their powder is dry. Because when Rangers start marching, if they ever do, the opposition will need more than a good reputation.

When Rangers beat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 in the first game of the current N.H.L. season, the word was out that Rangers had just taken a summer holiday and returned the same potent team that won the Stanley Cup last Spring. Before many weeks everyone knew that the first word was wrong, but no one has been able to prove with any degree of authenticity whether Rangers' decline is merely temporary, or here to stay.

They didn't look like a fourth-place team (which they are, nevertheless) when they beat Boston Bruins in Boston Tuesday night.

Despite a season during which their average game has been no better than fair, Rangers may do much damage to aspirations of such well known quantities as Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins.

Rangers will be at home to Montreal Canadiens in New York tonight, while Detroit Red Wings travel to Chicago for the other game of the night. Rangers currently are two points behind the third-place Wings, while Chicago in fifth place and Canadiens sixth.

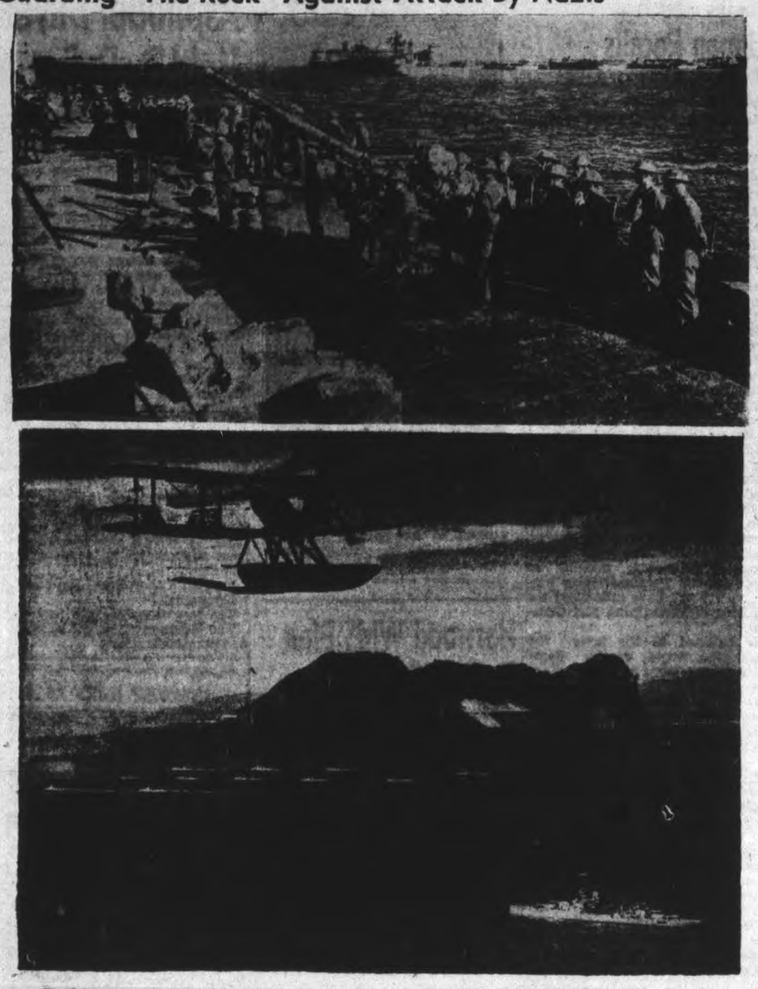
Guarding "The Rock" Against Attack By Nazis



In his expected spring offensive for a knockout of Great Britain, Adolf Hitler is expected to launch a three-pronged drive, one prong would be a fierce submarine warfare of which he warned in his Munich speech of February 24. Another would be against the oil fields of Iraq, through invasion of Bulgaria. The third would be a drive down through friendly Spain and against Gibraltar, the British-controlled rock that so effectively guards the western entrance to the Mediterranean. Britain is alert to the danger to Gibraltar and has strongly fortified the place. In this, TOP picture, members of the Gibraltar Defence Corps, a volunteer organization, are shown manning the anti-aircraft guns which are their specialty. In previous air attacks on the Rock they have proved their alertness and marksmanship. BOTTOM is a view from an accompanying British war plane high above the British Rock of Gibraltar showing another plane on patrol duty. Winging high over the harbor wherein are several men-o'-war. All are on the alert against attack by German planes from the air and German troops that might be given a "corridor" down to southern Spain by the Fascist government.

Farmers' Troubles Are Over For The War Packer Declares

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—An improved position for Canadian agriculture, as result of an increased demand for food products and a shrinkage supply, was pictured by J. S. McLean, president of Canada Packers, Limited, in an address yesterday at the annual luncheon of the Canadian National Exhibition in the King Edward Hotel.

"I think troubles of farmers for this war are over, except for supply of labor," said Mr. McLean, who took the stand that the farm situation is far less grave than indicated in speeches of "a good many persons of prominence who were speaking allegedly on behalf of the farmers and gave the impression that the cards are weighed against the farmers."

"Surplus foods in the world are now pretty well exhausted, save Canadian wheat," he continued. "From now on there will be an increasing demand and a shrinking supply."

Mr. McLean conceded that prices are at a lower level than during the first Great War. "On the whole I think it is a matter for congratulation, rather than regret," he added. "I recognize that I am stepping on rather dangerous ground, but I think it well that the farmers, and we as well, should not get an incorrect and distorted view of the situation."

"Buyers' Market Is Over."

Dealing with the bacon situation, Mr. McLean said the price provided for in the first contract with the British Government was very good, but when the time came to negotiate a new contract in October of last year, deliveries were heavy and the British Minister of Food was complaining that bacon was too expensive.

"The essential thing from the Canadian point of view was not so much the price, although that was important. It was to induce the British Ministry of Food to take our available surplus," Mr. McLean stated. "The Minister of Agriculture (Hon. James G. Gardiner) was in England to negotiate the contract. I am convinced that he did as good a job as any man in Canada could have done under the circumstances."

Mr. Gardiner managed to dispose of the Canadian surplus at a price higher than the average price over the past twenty, thirty, forty or fifty years, argued Mr. McLean, who asked that it be understood he did not pose as an apologist for Mr. Gardiner.

"The disappointment that farmers feel that prices have not advanced as they did during the last war is a very natural one," Mr. McLean proceeded, explaining that at the outset of the war a buyers' market prevailed. There was a surplus of products, but this has pretty well disappeared except in the case of wheat.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: Kent is home for three days. He was injured in the explosion of a dud bomb, but his sight is not permanently impaired. Doctors believe an operation will restore it. He talks on, still believing Ann is beside him. He asks about April, calling her the "Glitterbug." April is furious.

• • •

ANN REFUSES TO RETURN

CHAPTER III

April managed to leave Kent at his gate with a murmured answer.

It was an answer that said nothing but promised much in the manner of all sweethearts.

What mattered now was that she was tearing down the hill, escaping from what had been the strangest situation she'd ever known. The wintry air smelled good, free!

Kent Carter, temporarily blinded, had taken her for Ann, the sister with whom he was in love. Ann was away, but she'd be back tomorrow if April had to turn the world upside down to get her.

She wasn't doing this for Kent. Not at all. She was doing it for Ann.

Glitterbug, indeed! Kent Carter would eat those words some day. Then she shrugged. What difference did it make what he called her? He was nothing to her.

Octavia was waiting, hovering in a way that made April alert.

"How come you take so long, Miss April?" Octavia asked. "Dat train was on time 'cause Ah heard her tooting sames' usual. You meet Mister Carter okay and give him the message?"

"Mister Carter is safely at home in the arms of Auntie," April answered. "And if you wonder why I'm late, you should take yourself downtown to see the traffic jam caused by the free barbecue in the bandstand square."

"Free barbecue?" Octavia was thrown at once off the scent, or rather thrown on it. The scent of ham and pork roasting on a spittle.

Knowing she must get Octavia out of the house at all costs and at once, April went on. "You better join the jamboree, Octavia. There won't be a hambone left in another hour."

"Sure 'nuf?" Octavia's eyes rolled and her voice rolled, too, until she remembered that she had to be on duty while her "folks" were off camping. She said as much to Miss April.

"Just as long as you're home in time for breakfast," April said, "you can go your merry way with my blessing."

• • •

When the house was quiet at last, all the flippancy vanished from April. It was 9 o'clock. Within the next half hour the three handsome swains who were taking her to Casa Blanca would be ringing the bell. She must hurry to reach Ann by long distance, to make the homecoming arrangements, and then to figure some way out of tonight's date with Kent Carter to which she had committed herself.

In the dimly lighted hall where the telephone table stood, April looked up at the small oil portrait of Ann. An artist who had owed Dad money for settling a damage suit had painted it when the sister was 16. But Ann hadn't changed. There were her eyes, brown, wistful and appealing; there was the mole-brown hair and the quiet brow. "She doesn't need to be beautiful," April said half aloud. "She can sing—and how she can sing!"

"Here goes," April thought, and whirled the dial for long distance. "I want to place a call to New York."

Then almost before she could take breath, someone was answering at the other end.

"Hello," April said to the unfamiliar voice, "I would like to speak to Miss Ann Burnett."

"Ann Burnett?. I'm sorry, but I think she's just gone out."

"Oh, no," and April, who had forgotten about placing the call in person Ann, fairly wailed. "Please, I've got to get her at once."

"Wait a minute. Maybe I can catch her." The strange voice drifted off and even 500 miles away, April could catch the sounds of hurrying steps and a door opening.

And then, unbelievable but true, a voice came through the wire—the voice that might have been her own, so identical was it. "Oh, hello," Ann was saying.

"Ann, dear, this is April!" And then, because she was trembling, April cradled the telephone in her hand and curled up on the lounge.

"Oh, April dear. What's wrong?" The quick pulse of fear traveled the miles in a split second.

"We're perfectly all right," April made herself stay steadily. "Mother and Dad went up to the cabin to build log fires and spend a rugged week-end. Octavia had taken herself downtown and at any minute Nip is going to howl hello."

"And you?" There was gay relief in Ann's question.

"Oh, me. I'm my same gorgeous self, Annie. Reason I'm calling up has to do with you, Ann. You've got to come home at once — this very night, on the midnight train."

"But why? There is something wrong, then!"

"No, Ann, everything's as right as right can be. Better yet, Kent Carter came home today."

"Kent! You mean for good, from Fort Dodd?"

"No, honey, not for good. On leave until Monday night. Now listen quick, Ann, because every word I'm saying costs money. It was all unexpected, I mean Kent's coming home. Naturally, he's crazy to see you."

All the things she'd meant to say vanish in Ann's quick answer. "But April, I can't come home, even to see Kent." She paused briefly, went on, "As a matter of fact, if Kent only knew it, he was the one who spurred me on to take this New York venture. And now I'm having my chance at last. Tomorrow night I have an audition with Vivano—the great Vivano."

April clutched the telephone stubbornly. "It doesn't matter," she wailed. "You'll have to postpone it, cancel it, anything."

Ann might not have heard her. She was saying, "I've lived for this time, worked for it. It may be the making of my future. Yes, a chance of a lifetime, this audition for Vivano."

• • •

Ann's voice. Yes, while April and Ann talked alike and laughed alike, Ann's singing voice went away ahead and beyond April's. It was a lovely contralto and everything must be done to keep it that way.

Mother was always particular to have nothing disturb Ann before a recital. April knew if she told Ann now about Kent's blindness, her sister might go all to pieces. It might even spoil the audition. So instead, she almost bawled into the 'phone. "Kent love you, Ann. He's crazy about you."

"Of course he is." Ann gave a small sigh and then with the quick little gasp characteristic of her, asked, "Did he tell you so?"

"Yes—no." April floundered and then, blessing of blessings, Nip came bounding to mark his "howlo."

When the barking was over, so was the bad minute. Ann, apparently being hurried away by someone who stood at her elbow in that hallway 500 miles away, spoke in her same, lovely, gentle lilt.

"You send word to Kent, April, that I'm heartbroken I can't make it. But don't dare tell him about the audition. That must be kept a secret until I know it's a success."

So that was that! She, April, was to send word to Kent Carter that Ann was heartbroken but couldn't get to Pattonsville.

These were Kent's three days against the darkness!

Howe Charges

crecy. Mr. MacMillan now was on his way to Ottawa from the Pacific Coast, the Minister said.

"I think the job of sabotaging Mr. MacMillan has been fairly successfully done, but I hope and I think he is able and big enough to live it down and to continue to carry on the very useful work he is doing for the good of Canada," said Mr. Howe.

Before Mr. MacMillan's recent departure for Vancouver to attend his daughter's wedding he said he was being "sabotaged," Mr. Howe said, "and I agreed with him."

Denies Any Quarrel

Reports of a quarrel between Mr. MacMillan and myself were denied by the minister. He said there could be no quarrel as he was head of the department and responsible for policy—an official who differed with the policy of the department could not remain. To suggest Mr. MacMillan remained in office while at variance with departmental policy was not complimentary to Mr. MacMillan.

Conservative House Leader Hanson told the minister later in the debate that if he had been as frank in the first place he might not have experienced the rumor and criticism of which he complained.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King interjected that it started when Mr. Howe was in England and was an attempt to "stab the minister in the back."

Mr. Howe began his speech by saying that criticizing his department had become "rather a popular sport." The criticism was to the effect that nothing was being done to organize Canada's productive capacity, that the department was poorly organized and that aircraft production was bogged down.

"Anyone who will take a railway journey through the Maritime Provinces will see our railways taxed to capacity, said Mr. Howe. "The ports are overtaxed in the effort to move the produce of Canada destined for the war areas. Anyone who will take that trip should reflect on the fact that this situation is caused by the productive capacity of his country."

The Situation

Here is the way Mr. Howe summarized the production situation:—

Personal equipment and clothing for the forces: "We are well ahead in every branch of that industry."

Construction: "No difficulty there."

Shipbuilding: "We have a much greater output of shipbuilding than we had forecast."

Mechanical transport and universal carriers: "Industry has met every strain put upon it."

Chemicals and explosives: "We have lived up to every prediction."

Shells and shell components: "Here again, we are well up to schedule...Producing about 350,000 shells a month."

Steel: "That industry is producing as much and more than we ever expected of it."

Alloys: "Production fully up to schedule."

Small arms ammunition: "We are meeting with great success."

As "branches of the Department which are not fully up to schedule," Mr. Howe mentioned airplanes and tanks.

"We are going to get infantry tank production shortly," Mr. Howe said, but "just when that will be it is hard to say." The companies engaged in this work were "well ahead in regard to components, but as yet they have not delivered a finished tank nor were they expected to do so until next month."

So far all the detailed drawings for cruiser tank production were not ready, but "work is proceeding."

The Plane Trouble.

In aircraft the experience of the Department was that in practically all cases it was unable to get deliveries at the time promised by the manufacturer or when they could be expected.

The aircraft industry was a "mushroom industry." There was no designing talent in Canada at the start of the war and Canadian plants were not highly developed. The industry had to be created and built up.

The Minister said Federal Aircraft, Limited, the Government-owned corporation charged with responsibility for producing Avro-Anson twin-engine trainers for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan now was getting on with its program.

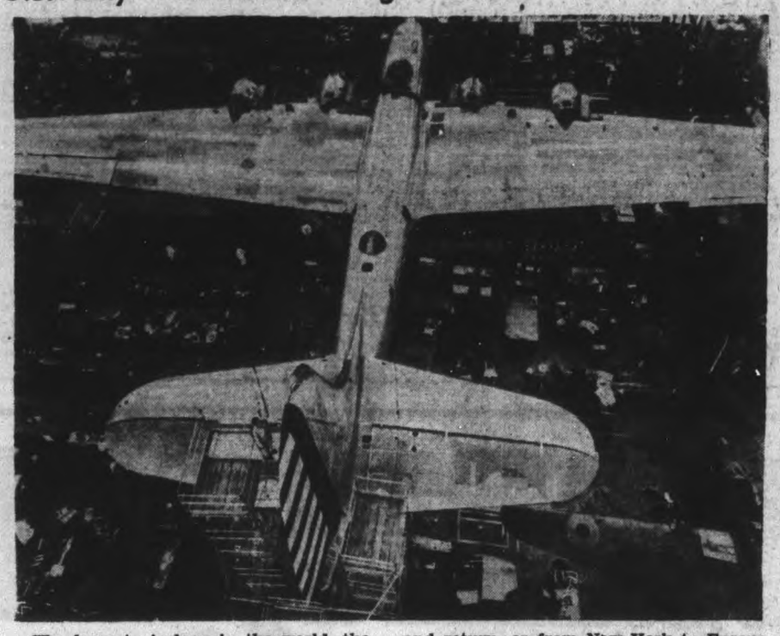
Difficulty occurred, he said, due to an underestimation of the task of redesigning the plane to permit Canadian manufacture. The Anson is a British-type plane and Great Britain had agreed to supply Canada with these machines.

The fall of France made this impossible, and production had to be organized in Canada after steps were taken to meet immediate requirements by purchases in the United States.

The company in November promised the first Anson would fly in March and heavy production would be underway in June and July. Mr. Howe said he believed this would be the case, and that Mr. MacMillan also had said so in a report to the cabinet on war industry generally.

Mr. Howe said reports that Mr. MacMillan had recommended dissolution of Federal Aircraft were not true, but he confirmed a report that six aircraft manufacturers had written a letter making such a recommendation.

U.S. Army Rushes World's Largest Bomber



The largest airplane in the world, the Douglas B-19 bomber, is shown ABOVE as it is being rushed to completion at the Santa Monica plant for its first test in the air in about six weeks. Capable of carrying 18 tons of bombs from Honolulu to Tokyo and return, or from New York to Europe and return the 80-ton giant of the skies stands three storey high and has a wing-spread of 212 feet. It has taken four years to build and more than $2,000,000 has been spent on it.

Germans Raid

London and a South Wales town.

A communique said the German nocturnal assaults were on "a considerable scale" but added "there were very few casualties."

The Nazi bombers flew in early over the Thames estuary, hitting hard at a town on the estuary and at London.

Then they singled out one section of the South Wales town (name withheld, but possibly Cardiff or Swansea, the latter blasted by raiders last week for a long attack. Later they turned on London for another assault.

Points in East, Southeast, South and West England aso were raided, the government reported, but it added that "no heavy attack developed in any area."

Try Fire Bombs First

The raiders dropped thousands of incendiaries on the Welsh town and then poured high explosives on top of them. Most fire bombs in the assaulted district were extinguished quickly but a church and a children's home were damaged and explosives struck another church, a pub, and a girl students' hostel.

British authoirities said that on the whole, however, reports from the town indicated damage was light considering the intensity of the attack.

Several residents were trapped in demolished houses in one hard-hit section of London and others were trapped similarly in the Home Counties around London and in the town on the Thames estuary.

An absence of searchlight activity in London indicated that night fighters were aloft taking care of the defence.

On one area of the capital a vast ring of flares was dropped, but anti-aircraft guns blotted the flares out as they fell.

S.S. Staples Is Elected Head Of Jersey Men

The annual dinner meeting of the Peterborough District Jersey Breeders in the Champlain Hotel Tuesday evening touched new levels of enthusiasm and attendance.

The executive elected for this year is headed by S. S. Staples as president; John Blakely, vice-president; Harry Young, secretary; and Lorne Reynolds and Gordon Staples.

The theme of this meeting was "How can we best help in Canada's war effort." Realizing the seriousness of the situation confronting the British people, the Jersey breeders discussed ways of directing financial assistance to their own association and to the national effort. Mr. Staples suggested several calf and heifer plans to raise additional funds. Breeders responded by offering calves and volunteering to raise them for definite periods, at the end of which the animals are to be auctioned at the discretion of the executive.

W. G. Ovens of Campbell's Dairy complimented the association on its advertising program as a means of extending the demand and market for Jersey milk which had a high reputation among the consuming public.

Dr. Charles Cook, the guest speaker, representing the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club, told the meeting that belts would have to be tightened a great deal more before the war was won. He cautioned the breeders against laxity in keeping records of their herds.

"Although we shall have to endure hardships," Dr. Cook said, "it will be these difficulties and trials which will enable us to evolve a more efficient system of production. We are going to learn new lessons in the experience of this war. Highest records mean the most profits. The greater production by cows, the more profit the farmer receives over the cost of feed. If we keep steady as we go along, hold our heads, maintain our records of breeding, feeding and production, season by the selection of the best sires that we can obtain we shall come through this unfortunate, engulfing struggle as more efficient producers and better citizens, more able to cope with post-war reconstruction."

Some of the members from the Rice Lake district provided the musical program which was much appreciated.

Expect Reply Today

Asahi said in a dispatch from Vichy that the Japanese Charge d'Affaires, Ken Harada, had informed the French government of Japan's desire for acceptance of the peace proposals.

"As a result it was expected the Vichy government would reply today," Asahi's dispatch added.

(The Domei dispatch to Shanghai said success or failure of the conference was expected to be decided within 48 hours with "present indications not too optimistic.")

Great Britain and the United States were blamed in press comment for failure of the conference so far.

Chugai frankly claimed "restraining operations and manoeuvres of Britain and the United States behind the scene" have had a restraining effect on the parley.

In like vein, Hochi said the "spreading rumors of a Far Eastern crisis, . . . landing of British forces at Singapore, massing of troops on the Thailand-Malay border . . . . "all have influenced the attitudes of Indo-China and Thailand.

As outlined in the press, the peace plan would require Indo-China to cede large sections in Laos and Cambodia, along the Mekong river, which Thailand asserts were taken from her between 1893 and 1904. No concessions by Thailand are mentioned.

Only one charge was read yesterday. It was to the effect that Leaitch had obtained by false pretences three calves to the value of $29.10 in August last from Roy McArthur, Asphodel, the alleged false pretences being the issuance of a worthless cheque.

A number of other similar charges are pending, and the aggregate amount involved in the cases is said to run well into four figures.

Leaitch was not asked to elect or plead yetserday, but was remanded until next Thursday with bail fixed at $1,500.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

BANK CLEARINGS

A slight decline in the bank clearings for the past week ending today as compared with the same period one year ago was reported by the secretary of the Clearing House. This week's clearings total $454,800, while one year ago the total was $456,154.

FOUR MORE OVER TOP

Four more uptown business places stepped into the honor column this morning reporting one hundred per cent pledged to buy War Savings Certificates. These are Canadian Fire Corporation, Water Street; Lynch's Drug Store, Hunter Street; Cherney Brothers, Hunter street; and the J. E. A. Fitzgerald Estate, Hunter street.

PUSSYWILLOWS

In Neill's window there are some pretty decorations which give a Springtime touch. These include pussy willows which were picked a few weeks ago, and which are now blooming, and several large branches off bamagilla trees which are also shooting out in long cat-tails. Frank Millard nursed the sprigs along at his home, then brought them to the store to use as decorations.

MAY CHARGE BUSES

A suggestion that the four bus lines which use the section of Charlotte street in front of the Empress Hotel as a terminal pay something toward the upkeep of the public rest station on the market square was mentioned at last night's meeting of the council's property committee. So many persons use the building as waiting place for the buses that it was felt the bus lines should make some contribution toward the upkeep of the building, even some small compensation which would help to pay for repainting the premises.

METEOR IS SEEN

Residents of the Springville area reported to the Examiner today that they witnessed a trail of light across the sky to the south at 8.30 on Wednesday evening as a huge meteor plunged earthward. It resembled a man made rocket in its sweep Mrs. Victor Sweeting said. It was seen by several members of the Sweeting family, who live a mile south of Springville, and after it exploded there was a big blue ball of fire. The meteor has also been reported as been seen in other sections of the province..

Ian McRae Named Works Manager

Assistant To Carl Salmonsen Promoted To Important Post At Canadian General Electric

The appointment of Ian F. McRae to the position of works manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, succeeding Carl A. Salmonsen, to whom he has been assistant for five years, was announced here today.

The news coming on the eve of Mr. Salmonsen's departure confirmed hints and hopes expressed throughout the plant and the city by the many friends of Mr. McRae in their wishes that he would be advanced from the subordinate responsibility of second in command to take charge of the big factory of the Canadian General Electric Company.

This promotion of Mr. McRae will be received with warm feelings of satisfaction not only by his fellow employees, with whom he has been associated since he began his career in the local test department, but also by citizens generally who have met the new works manager and have known him on his way up the ladder.

The decision of the Canadian General Electric Company in this promotion points again to the romantic aspects which develop from time to time in big business.

Up From the Ranks

Ian McRae has risen to the top "the hard way." He has come from the ranks, and that means that he has come out of the ship and the office to supervise the entire industry. In that course his progress was similar in many respects to that of the man he is now replacing. They began in widely separated places, but eventually their paths converged here in Peterborough. Now, the young gentleman who entered the test department of the local works on January 15, 1925, is assuming the management of the big industry, while Mr. Salmonsen passes on to a new field in a big war time plant in the eastern United States.

A Vancouver Boy

Born in Vancouver, Mr. McRae was educated in its secondary schools, came to Peterborough in 1925, and after two years' experience in the test department he was transferred to the engineering department under Gordon Langley August 1/7, 1927, and finally was chosen for the post of assistant to the works manager on January 1, 1937.

Mr. McRae has been educated in the Salmonsen school, and it may be assumed that his appointment received the strong recommendation of Mr. Salmonsen. In fact this appointment is going to soften the blow of the going of Carl Salmonsen. It can't be substantive in a personal sense, but partings have to be accepted as of the scheme of life. However, in the operations and management of the local plant of the Canadian General Electric Company it is providing an assurance, at a critical time, of the continuance of the directing ideas and methods which have been applied and carried out here during the Salmonsen regime, and probably often through the hands of Mr. McRae.

Many Local Interests

Mr. McRae is a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada and its Peterborough branch and he is a registered professional engineer.

He is president of the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, a director of Rotary Club, and member of the vocational committee of the Board of Education for the past three years.

He is a past chairman of the Central Ontario division of the Industrial Accidents Prevention Associations, a member of Knox United Church, director of the Y.M.C.A., and he has been a resident of Peterborough continuously since he came here as a young apprentice in the electrical test section of the C.G.E. works.

Boyhood Ambition

In a telephone conversation this morning, Mr. McRae said that his only absence from Peterborough in the sixteen years since he came east was a short time in Toronto when he was engaged for a while in the Davenport works of the C.G.E. He also recalled that as a boy he was attracted to the study of electricity, bent his school work in that direction and finally was advised to come east and seek to find a place with one of the big electrical manufacturing companies. That was the lodestar of his graduation year, and it has guided him to one of the big executive positions in Canadian industry.

Mr. McRae's father was the late Captain Alexander McRae of Vancouver. His mother is still living in that city. His own residence in Peterborough is at the northeast corner of Rogers and Douro streets, and it is also interesting to mention that he married a Peterborough girl.

"I don't need to say that Mr. Salmonsen has done a wonderful job here in Peterborough," Mr. McRae said today. "We all know that, and also that he is leaving behind him a strong organization which he built up. I feel confident that I shall receive the same co-operation from the staff that he did, and that with the new enlargements to the plant we are going ot carry on and do everything that is expected of the Peterborough works.

"Personally, I feel deeply grateful for the associations which I have enjoyed with Mr. Salmonsen since he came to Peterborough, and I wish him the very best success in the new work to which he is going."

Nixon Pressing Wolf Bounty Menace Grows

TORONTO, Feb. 27—(CP).—Debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne will be resumed in the Ontario Legislature today with either T. L. Kennedy (Con., Peel) or L. M. Frost (Con., Victoria) leading off for the Opposition. Allan A. Lamport (Lib., Toronto St. David), a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, is expected to reply for the Government.

The House experienced another short session yesterday, sitting less than 30 minutes before adjourning to enable Premier Hepburn and his Ministers meet a delegation from the Ontario Mayors' Association.

Second readings were given to a number of bills and before the orders of the day Conservative Leader George Drew asked two questions. Col. Drew sought to ascertain when the Royal Commission report on the Abitibi Power and Paper Company would be available and also endeavored to learn when returns to questions asked by the Opposition would be made.

Premier Hepburn said Federal duties had interfered with Mr. Justice Charles McTague, chairman of the commission, completing his report.

Col. Drew said his request for answers to questions was prompted by the fact some of the questions were those asked at the last session but went unanswered because the Government pleaded lack of time.

Discussing an amendment to the Wolf Bounty Act, Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon disclosed deer in the north country are faced with a serious threat from wolves. The amendment, among other things, increases the bounty from $15 to $25.

"The deep snow and hard crust formed over it gives the wolves an advantage in their pursuit of deer," he said. "I would urge immediate action on this bill because I understand the greatest danger will develop in March and we do not want to have our deer herds decimated."

Song Recital Nets Fund $31.50

Among the donations received for the British War Victims Fund today was a cheque for $31.50, the proceeds from a song recital held last week by Miss Margaret Dickson and Maurice Park, To-morrow night a dance is being held in the Town Hall at Keene for the benefit of the fund, and another encouraging report comes from those who are selling tickets on the canary and bird cage.

The total now stands at $9,512.75, less than $500 away from the $10,000 objective which it is hoped will be reached by Saturday of this week.

Herbert Doig, well-known gardener, has donated ten bushels of carrots to Howard Miles, auctioneer, and these will be auctioned off at the Market on Saturday at 11 o'clock. The carrots are all fine stock, and as usual Mr. Miles is giving his services without charge. The carrots are in hampers and the buyer may take the hamper also.

The following is the list to date:

Previously acknowledged	$9,467.21
Tickets and donations from song recital, by Margaret Dickson and Maurice Park	31.50
Box at Bell Telephone Co.	2.19
C. A. Goold	10.00
Additional receipts from Scottish Concert per J. A. Smith	.50

C.G.E. Manager

IAN F. McRAE

Successor to Carl A. Salmonsen as works manager of the Peterborough plant of Canadian General Electric Company. The only other chief executive of the big factory was E. G. Paterson, who preceded Mr. Salmonsen. Back in 1925 Mr. McRae was hired as an apprentice in the test department here, and has come up from the ranks. He was born in Vancouver where his mother still resides.

Ontario Will Pay 75 p.c. Of Relief

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—After listening to numerous Ontario mayors give their views as to what they thought the Provincial contribution toward unemployment relief should be, Premier Hepburn yesterday stunned the eighty chief magistrates present by announcing that the province would pay 75 per cent of the cost.

Not one of the mayors who spoke at the conference with the Cabinet had gone so far as to suggest such a favorable division of the costs, from the municipal point of view. The Premier allowed them to speak for well over an hour, holding his own counsel until he had ascertained the views and hopes of a cross-section of the delegation.

Cheers greeted the announcement from the Premier that Ontario would take up the slack caused by the Dominion Government withdrawing all assistance to unemployment relief.

"We had our own officials go into the question from all angles," the Premier stated, "and we thought at first that a percentage of 66 2-3 would be all that we could offer, but we found out that we could do better, and so we will accept 75 per cent of the cost. I believe that there will be a general improvement in business through war industries—a greater stimulation. I have talked privately to the mayors of Toronto and Hamilton, and we have a good idea of the situation throughout the Province."

The Premier's announcement was such a pleasant surprise to the gathering that for a moment or two there was hardly a sound in the room.

"More Than We Dreamed."

"We have come to the Provincial Government," said Mayor Morrison of Hamilton, who acted as delegation chairman, "and have got more than we ever dreamed of getting."

"Very satisfactory," stated Mayor Conboy of Toronto, who earlier had said he did not think that the situation in Toronto could be satisfactorily handled without a contribution of at least 70 per cent.

In expressing the gratitude of the mayors to the Government, Mayor Morrison suggested that the Government consider an increase in the contributions for old age pensions, mothers' allowances, as well as for unemployables.

"The Minister of Labor," Mr. Hepburn replied, "has been studying this question for the last month, and we will do our best. I ask you for the fullest co-operation in this matter. We have shown that we share good times with you, but if times are bad you will have to share adversity with us."

The new agreement takes effect on the expiration of the Provincial-Dominion agreement on March 31 and will run until the first of next January.

"I hope to meet the cost of this situation out of present revenue," he said. "I don't want to put it on income tax, as I know the Dominion Government is going to increase that. As far as amusement tax is concerned, we experienced a great deal of trouble in collecting it in smaller places before, and so we abolished it. We are advertising extensively the fact that Ontario is a province where there is no amusement tax, no meal tax, no sales tax, and no toll gates with the hope that these features will help bring tourists to Ontario this year."

Crown Witness Is Charged With Perjury

A charge of perjury against one of the crown witnesses featured the trial in police court here Wednesday afternoon of Mrs. May Hill of Havelock, charged with illegally selling liquor on December 26 last.

George Brooks, C.P.R. section man living at Blairton was the witness who found himself arraigned before Magistrate E. A. Gee at the conclusion of the evidence in the Hill case, charged with committing perjury. The information alleged that he swore falsely that he was not in the home of Mrs. May Hill on the night of December 25 or the morning of December 26 and that the government seal on the twelve-ounce bottle taken from him by Constable John A. Rogers was broken.

Brooks was not asked to plead and the case was adjourned until March 5. Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry first asked for a remand with bail at $1,000 but agreed to an adjournment.

Judgment Reserved

Judgment in the charge against Mrs. Hill was reserved by Magistrate Gee until Saturday morning. The accused was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair.

Provincial Constable John A. Rogers testified to watching Mrs. Hill's home in Havelock early on the morning of December 26 and of seeing two different men enter and leave the place. The officer stated that he had stopped these men, George Brooks and Norman Stover and found a small bottle of liquor on each of them.

Stover in the witness box swore that he had bought the liquor from Mrs. Hill and had paid her $1.75 for it.

When Brooks was called he declared that the liquor found on him was part of the content of a larger bottle he had bought some time previously at the government liquor store here. He said he had filled the small bottle from the larger one and that the seal on the small one was broken. He denied being in Mrs. Hill's house, declaring that he had only gone to the door and seeing the place in darkness had gone away again.

Seals Not Broken

Chief William Aikens of Havelock said that the seal on two small bottles of liquor he had seen in Constable Rogers' office on the morning of December 26 was unbroken and Constable Rogers, recalled, swore that the seals on both bottles were unbroken and had been in that condition when the liquor was sent away for analysis.

Mrs. Hill for the defence swore that Stover was not in her house on the night in question and that she did not sell him or anyone any liquor that night and her evidence was corroborated by her son, Pte. Ken Hill of the Hastings and Northumberland Regiment.

Magistrate Gee reserved judgment until the end of the week.

Brooks and Stover, charged with illegal possesion of liquor, were each fined $10 and $2.50 cost when they pleaded guilty.

The perjury charge against Brooks followed.

Relief To Cost City Much Less

The Finance Committee of the Council will consider tonight whether the decision of the Provincial Government to pay 75 per cent. of the cost of relief this year can affect the city's budget to the extent of causing any further reduction in the new tax rate.

The appropriation for relief this year was estimated at nearly $29,000, and it was understood that this amount was computed in the prospect of a 50-50 basis.

Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Dutton attended the meeting in Toronto yesterday at which the 75-25 division of relief expense was announced. Whatever the effect of the change, there was no definite information available this morning.

More Road Money

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP)

HON. T. M. McQUESTEN, Ontario Highways Minister, said today there would be an increase this year in the Ontario government's contributions to municipalities for highway maintenance.

Addressing the Ontario Good Roads Association convention here, Mr. McQuesten said the increase in contributions, which would be slight, would help make up for lack of capital expenditure due to the war.

He said the Ontario Government last year gave $5,500,000 to 37 counties and 564 townships in the province "which resulted in at least $10,000,000 worth of work on highways."

Pupil-Husband Teacher-Bride Back To School

BROOKPORT, Ill., Feb. 27.—(AP).—Mrs. O. T. Tilley, 23-year-old Brookport High School music teacher, and her 16-year-old student husband returned to school yesterday.

A member of the Board of Education said the bride, the former Brenda Hallett, would remain on the job at least for the remainder of the year because she holds a contract and inefficiency is the only ground for dismissing her.

Mrs. Tilley, whose marriage at Capt Girardeu, Mo., last Saturday caused a furore among school authorities and prompted the president of the Board of Education to advise her parents of the wedding, taught her class as usual, while her husband was attending school in the same building.

The youthful husband, who only recently moved with his parents from a shantyboat on the bank of the Ohio river here to a small home in the Thompson Point area of the town, is a member of the school chorus of which his bride is coach.

Man Drops Dead In Canoe Plant

Joseph F. Walker, 62-year-old bricklayer of 849 Water Street, died suddenly this morning while discussing details of a bricklaying job with Thomas Taylor, superintendent of the Peterborough Canoe Company, in the back shop of the plant.

In apparent good health, Mr. Walker had seen the job he was expected to do, and in company with Mr. Taylor had walked out into the back shop to gather some materials with which to work. About one-half way down, according to Mr. Taylor, the deceased smiled faintly, and said, "Wait a minute, please," and before he could reach him, he collapsed.

The stricken man was rushed to the first aid room by some of the workers, and Dr. R. K. Magee was called. All was in vain, however, for when medical aid was at hand, life was extinct. Heart seizure was the verdict of Dr. Magee.

A bricklayer in Peterborough for the past 30 years, the deceased was a man well-known in the city, and was a member of the Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his sorrowing wife, the former Mary Agnes West, of Napanee; one daughter, Mrs. Clarence McKinnon, of Napanee; five brothers: Patrick, Charles and Leonard of Detroit, William of Cleveland, and Robert of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. Margaret Hughes of Napanee.

73 Credit Unions

TORONTO, Feb. 27 — (CP). — Credit unions in Ontario have increased in number from 16 to 73 in the past year and will number close to 100 before the end of 1941, it was reported last night by Frank Perkin, Inspector of Credit Unions of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Mr. Perkin listed total assets of nearly $4,000,000 with more than 20,000 members.

186 Pledgers Wanted To Make 7,000

The campaign to obtain pledges from 7,000 people to purchase War Savings Certificates regularly ends on Friday, and the report handed out at noon today reveals that so far 6,814 pledges have been signed.

Committee heads are optimistic that the objective will be reached but it looks like a nip and tuck race, and a special invitation is extended to all people who might have been missed to come in to the committee rooms in the old Bank of Montreal building and sign up. The list of pledges signed so far in the drive indicates that payroll deduction pledges are by far the most numerous, with a total of 4,986. In the retail division there are 1,408 pledges, the bank pledges total 143 and there are 277 honor pledges. Many of the last named are single purchase pledges in which the individual has already purchased the maximum amount possible for any one year.

All canvassers are requested to hurry along their reports so that a complete picture may be available by Friday evening and all small businesses and stores which have not been thoroughly canvassed are asked to make their own reports direct to the committee rooms. Douglas Hammond will be on duty in the committee rooms until ten o'clock tonight for the convenience of the canvassers.

January Has High Total.

A report from Ottawa to Gordon S. Matthews, general chairman of the five counties in this district, reveals that citizens in Peterborough have taken to the purchase of War Savings Certificates with a will. The report is as follows: Payroll deductions 1,080, for a cash amount of $6,980.00; bank pledges 35, totalling $200, and casual individual purchases of certificates total 995, and have a cash value of $11,100. The total for the month is $18,280. This sum was loaned to the government without any campaign being held locally and it will be interesting to compare this figure with the totals for February and March. It is definitely known now that the total for the first fifteen days in February exceeded $30,000.00.

Work in the Women's Division is progressing favorably except that a few have been putting the canvassing off till the last minute and now realize that there is considerable work ahead of them. The women realize that this work is a definite and substantial contribution to the successful prosecution of the war, and have entered the drive with an enthusiasm that is growing daily. No report has been received so far from Harold Cassan on the suburban division but it is known that the women are on the job and have completed several sections.

Norwegian Fliers Give Display To Boost War Savings Fund

Peterborough rocked to the roar of fighter planes at 12.30 to-day when three sleek, low wing monoplaned manned by experienced Norwegian fliers, zoomed over the tops of buildings in an exhibition arranged by the War Savings committee in charge of the local drive.

While two of the pilots sent their powerful crafts roaring low over the city, the third stayed high in the heavens, giving a beautiful exhibition of stunt flying, with upside down flying, barrel rolls, loop the loops and the other difficult manoeuvres.

The speed of these fighter planes amazed local people and the daring of the fliers is indicated by the fact that one of them sent his plane across the city at terrific speed and according to Water street residents he flew lower than the market clock. Residents in Ashburnham were sure the fliers were going to hit the Quaker Oats building but they winged past. In the west end of the city workmen had climbed on the roof of the Bonner-Worth to see the display and the Curtiss fighter planes roared over so low, residents in the district thought the Bonner-Worth employees could have reached up and touched the planes.

It proved to many people who had never seen fighter planes in action, that people in cities are absolutely at the mercy of bomber and fighting planes, unless there is adequate ground defence or a defensive force of planes. It revealed, too, the speed at which a flight of planes may swoop in on a city, drop a load of bombs and get away. Peterborough citizens should have a better appreciation of the fight that English people are putting up, and do their own humble share from the safety of their homes in Canada by purchasing all the war savings certificates they can afford.

Pledge all your savings now, and keep the sky above Peterborough free of enemy planes.

Obituary

MRS. J. A. SHARPE

St. Peter's Cathedral was well attended on Tuesday morning for the funeral of the late Mrs. J. A. Sharpe. The Requiem Mass sung by Rev. Earl T. Grant, who also delivered a most appropriate sermon.

Also present in the sanctuary were Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. C. Begley.

While the late Mrs. Sharpe's remains were resting at the residence, 537 Homewood avenue, many came to pay their last respect and to extend their sympathy to her sorrowing husband and family. The very numerous spiritual offerings and floral tributes gratefully received, bore further evidence to the fact that the deceased was a good Christian mother and a most beloved citizen.

The interment was made in the family plot in St. Peter's cemetery, where Rev. Gerard Maher read the prayers.

The pall bearers were: John Londerville, Frederick C. Browne, Killiam J. Grady, J. McFadden, Edward H. Hickey and Thomas Kelly.

Those attending from out of town were as follows: Miss Marie Ryan and Miss Elisabeth Murphy of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sharp, Detroit, Mich.; and Mrs. Arthur J. Sharp, Boston, Mass.

British Military Attache Arrives In U.S.

Major-General F. G. Beaumont-Nesbitt, new British military attache to the United States, is shown, LEFT, being greeted by Lieut.-Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding first U.S. army, at Gen. Drum's headquarters in Governors Island. The Manhattan skyline makes an impressive background.

Russia Baffles Both Sides In War Strategy

(By JOHN A. STEVENSON.)

Russia with her policies moving in a mysterious way continues to provide a baffling enigma to both sets of combatants now warring for supremacy but the grim realists in the Kremlin are undoubtedly pursuing a carefully calculated plan of diplomatic strategy, designed to keep Russia out of actual hostilities while at the same time seeking to procure for her the maximum possible benefits from the devastating convulsion of the war. It would be natural for the present rulers of Russia to decide her interests lay in seeing that neither the Axis powers nor Britain and her allies should be able to achieve a complete victory in a reasonable time, but that they should continue in a wasting death grapple until both sides were hopelessly exhausted, morally, financially and economically, and the cause of communism had before it fields white for the harvesting. So there is considerable evidence that the fundamental policy of Stalin and his associates is to give diplomatic encouragement and even practical comfort to whichever side seems to be losing ground in the struggle at a particular period, and to bolster up its fortunes by various devices, until the setbacks are repaired by gains and an equilibrium in the fortunes of the conflict restored.

Russia Veers Both Ways

When the Germans, last summer, were making a series of spectacular conquests and on into the fall when their great aerial assault upon Britain was in progress, the Russian Government manifested a distinct coolness toward the Nazis; they caused them great anxiety by such moves as the occupation of Bessarabia, which brought them within striking distance of Rumania's oilfields; they increased their assistance to China, which was fighting Japan, the ally of the Axis powers, and when Molotoff, the Russian Premier, went to Berlin, for a conference, he showed a stubborn indisposition to accede to many of Hitler's demands. Now, hoyever, since during the war the British have got the Italian armies in Libya and East Africa on the run, and definitely established their naval ascendancy in the Mediterranean, the Russians have evidently decided to change their tack and throw the weight of their influence upon the side of their enemies for the time being.

Free Hand For Nazis

The only serious hope that Bulgaria and Yugoslavia could ever have cherished about resisting Nazi pressure lay in the resolute backing of Russia, the traditional protector of the small Slavic nations, but Moscow, after making a few deceptive feints at giving succor to them, has now intimated that she has given Germany a free hand to work her sweet will in Southeastern Europe. And this move almost certainly implies that Stalin has received from Hitler explicit assurances that Germany will refrain from any attempt to dominate the Dardanelles and will confine her southward offensive to the chastisement of Greece. In that event the Turkish Government would be able to argue that Bulgaria's concession of an unhindered passage for the German Army did not constitute a casus belli and that as long as Bulgaria did not give the Nazis military co-operation and Turkish territory was not invaded, her obligations to Britain did not entail active belligerency. Probably, too, Russia is applying restraining hands at Ankara and warning the Turks that, if they go to the active support of Britain and Greece, they themselves will have to begin considering whether the occupation of Kars and adjacent Turkish territory lying south of the Caucasus Mountains is not necessary for rounding off Russia's strategic defenses. However, the enthusiastic reception which has just been accorded Sir John Dill and Mr. Eden in Ankara is an encouraging index of the sympathies of the Turkish people, but it would be unwise to put excessive store upon it, as it is a cardinal principle of Turkish policy not to quarel with Russia and, if Moscow vetoes Turkish belligerency, it will be avoided on some pretext or other.

Cripps Still Working

One thing is certain, that Moscow is determined to avoid involvement in the war at all costs and to ensure the consolidation of the gains which she has secured from it at trivial cost. Sir Stafford Cripps, the eminent Socialist lawyer, is still at his post in Moscow as Britain's Ambassador, but in recent months very little has been heard of his activities and the silence probably means that they have so far been crowned with little fortune. However, the advent of Mr. Eden at the British Foreign Office has resulted in a much more conciliatory attitude being adopted by it toward Russia, and Sir Stafford can now rely upon sympathetic backing for any move that he may make for the settlement of outstanding disputes. However, it does not augur well for his success that Maxim Litvinoff, who has an English wife and was the great advocate of Russian support for the League of Nations and collective security, has just been eliminated from the central committee of the Communist Party and that three of his leading associates have accompanied him into retirement. In the inner councils of the Soviets complete harmony does not seem to reign, as Madam Molotoff, wife of the Premier, has been forbidden to stand for the central committee and notice has been served upon half a dozen prominent Commissars that only greater efficiency can save their political necks. Stalin seems more firmly in the saddle than ever and there is no prospect of Litvinoff and his friends offering effective opposition to his policies.

Peterborough And Keene Once Rivals For Commercial Supremacy

(By T. J. WALLACE.)

It seems almost fantastic to say that, at one time, Peterborough and Keene were rivals for commercial supremacy. But such is the case.

In a sense they had equal chances, Peterborough on a larger river flowing out of Stoney Lake, and twenty-six miles from Rice Lake; Keene on a smaller river also flowing out of Stoney Lake, but only two miles from Rice Lake.

In the early twenties, Dr. Gilchrist a man of vision and enterprise, took up a thousand acres of government land undefinitely located, because as yet it had not been surveyed, and named it Keene after his native village in New Hampshire.

Taking advantage of abundant labor he constructed a raceway nearly a mile long, to tap a dam he erected on the upper reaches of the river. Being assured of plenty of water power, he built a grist mill, a saw mill, an elevator for wheat, a tannery, a shoe factory and a distillery. That was quite a chore for a man who also administered comfort to the sick of the whole country side.

Boat Built

Now for trade and transportation. The Pollywog, a one horse power boat, and I mean a one horse power, for power was supplied by one horse travelling round and round a capstan which turned the small paddle wheels, carried his finished products down the river, across the lake to Gore's Landing from where they were freighted to Cobourg the great port of the frontier. There was always a return cargo of salt, sugar, groceries, hardware, etc. to meet the demands of the early settlers. A substantial dock was built at the foot of River street and quite a commodious warehouse was set on it where the various articles were stored for sorting.

But the new town overreached itself. As new industries sprang up more water power was needed. The opening of the river at Stoney Lake was narrow and full of rock. The enterprising doctor sent a gang of men, headed by Uncle Johnnie Grier, then a young man, up to Gilchrist Bay to clean out the rock, make the opening larger, to allow more water to flow through.

Peterborough Protests

Peterborough then took notice. The citizens, headed by Canon Mark Burnham, notified the government of this unlawful diversion of the natural flow of navigable rivers. The workmen were arrested and lodged in Peterborough jail. Quiet was restored, the men were freed, the rocks were replaced, no doubt in good measure. The Indian River flow dwindled. So did Keene. The good old doctor passed away and the village reverted to a farming community centre.

Peterborough won. I wonder? While it is today a great industrial city with its noise and bustle and thousands toiling daily to make a living.

Keene has its few. They tend their gardens, cultivate their gorgeous flowers, trim their velvety lawns and boulevards that line their delightfully shaded streets. Their homes are substantial, ornate and comfortable. Keene has its "canal" for timid bathers, and its winding river, where even the novice may get his quota of fish. Above it is a community of happy people.

Yes, I think Keene won.

Ex-Dane Princess Lois Booth Taken By Death

OTTAWA, Feb. 27—(CP).—Word of the death of Mrs. Thorkil Juelsberg, former wife of Prince Erik of Denmark, at her country estate near Copenhagen, was received here yesterday by her brother, Col. J. R. Booth.

Mrs. Juelsberg, formerly Lois Booth of Ottawa, was married to Prince Erik in 1924 at All Saints' Church here. Later the marriage was annulled by King Christian X of Denmark in compliance with a petition the couple made mutally.

News of Mrs. Juelsberg's death was relayed to her mother, Mrs. J. Fred Booth of Los Angeles, from Swedish sources. Mrs. Booth had learned last November that her daughter was seriously ill.

Mrs. Juelsberg's first husband, Prince Erik, renounced rights of succession to the Danish throne at the time of his marriage in Ottawa. He had lived in Canada and the United States from 1922 until the marriage.

Following their marriage they went to London, where they were entertained by the late Queen Alexandra and received by King George V and Queen Mary. They lived in California for a time before going to Denmark.

Following the annulment, Mrs. Juelsberg married for a second time and had resided in Denmark ever since. Five years ago she returned to Ottawa for a visit.

Mrs. Juelsberg is survived by her husband and two children by her first marriage, Prince Christian and Princess Alexandra.

The wedding of Lois Booth to Prince Erik of Denmark was one of the most brilliant in Canadian society history.

Members of the nobility were present in numbers never before known in the capital. Police were forced to hold back the spectators as they pressed nearer when the car containing the bride stopped at the church entrance.

Shuns Life Sans Sabu

Because she loved Sabu, the Hindu "elephant boy" actor in vain, Vishundass Vachamah, otherwise known as "Princess Vanessa," exotic young dancer from Ballet Russe of Europe, the night clubs of Hollywood and Chicago, and recent film danseuse of "Tin Pan Alley," told police that she had swallowed sleeping tablets with the desire to end it all, because Sabu had not responded to her affection. She was rushed to Hollywood Receiving hospital, where it is said, she will recover.

Refugees Start New Settlement

NEW YORK, Feb. 27 — (CP). — A hardy band of pioneering European refugees—30 men and women driven from their homes by political and religious persecution—are the central figures in an experiment in resettlement on a tropical island, which has completed—successfully—its first year.

They are the pioneers of the Sosua Colony, 78,000 acres on the north-east coast of the Dominican Republic in the Caribbean, which was set up under sponsorship of the Dominican Republic Settlement Association, representing the United States, Great Britain, and thirty other nations.

James Rosenberg of New York, association president, told a recent meeting of the committee at Ciudad Trujillo that the colony's operations were successful and that its program for producing native products for a ready cash market in the United States was bringing results.

The 300 settlers have built 10 miles of road, constructed 24 buildings, and put up houses on individual homesteads. The settlers get their own homesteads after some training in tropical agriculture.

Hastings Euchre Well Attended

HASTINGS, Feb. 27 — (ENS). — Six dollars will be donated to the local Red Cross through the efforts of Mrs. A. V. German, who gave her home on Tuesday evening for a social time when progressive euchre was played. A small fee was charged each lady towards the worthy cause. Seven tables of euchre were played, the prize going to Mrs. R. Burnham.

At the close of the games a delightful lunch was served by the hostess, who was assisted by members of the Red Cross.

Hastings Red Cross consignment to headquarters in Toronto for the month of February was shipped on Tuesday. It included the following hospital supplies: 13 pyjamas, 18 hospital bed gowns, 3 men's dressing gowns, 2 bed jackets, 4 wash cloths; refugee articles: 10 quilts, 2 childs' nightgowns, 1 boy's pyjamas, 1 girl's coat, 2 women's dressing gowns, 1 child's dressing gown, 2 girls' pullovers; Navy quota: 6 pairs seamen's socks, 7 turtle neck sweaters, 6 scarves, 4 helmets, 6 two-way mitts; knitted goods: 21 pairs socks, 1-3 pairs mittens, 1 helmet, 5 scarves, 2 sweaters. Work was commenced on the quota for the next month, which will include the making of 5 girls' blouses, 5 pinafore dresses, 20 nightgowns for girls 16 years of age, 5 blazers.

The Christian Culture conveners, Mrs. Iden Bonds and Miss Margery Scriver were in charge of Monday's meeting of Trinity Young People's Union. Mrs. Iden Bonds led in responsive reading. Mrs. Cecil Oliver gave an interesting account of the manufacture of soap, and Mrs. Grant Sine "The Uses of Soap." Wallace Stinson gave a reading on "Guilty or Not Guilty," and the conveners took charge of the recreational period.

Stanwood Smithy Is Razed By Fire

TWEED, Feb. 27 (ENS)—Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the frame blacksmith shop owned by Daniel Brown of Stanwood, two miles west of Allan Mills. All contents of the building, including tools and a large amount of custom work in the process of completion was also destroyed by the flames.

Mr. Brown was awakened by the reflection of the flames through his bedroom window, but the fire had gained considerable headway and it was impossible to save the building.

Campbellford To Aid Art Exhibit

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 27. — (gNS). — The Board of Education decided at its regular meeting to renew the grant made last year to the Seymour Agriculture Society. Pleased with the art exhibit provided by pupils at the 1940 Fair, members voted in favor of the renewal following an address by Fair Secretary G. G. Stephens. Chairman Dr. H. O. Richardson declared "There was a vast improvement in the exhibit last year."

Offers Services.

F. C. Bonnycastle agreed with the quality of the exhibits, but felt the showing from the Public Schools was not displayed to the best advantage. He offered his services to assist in the arrangements next year. According to Mr. Stephens, two members of the school staffs, K. B. Ferris and Cecil Stephens, will be in charge of the exhibit again.

Mickey Ellis, in charge of recruiting for the local Frontiersmen group requested the use of a room in the old High School building formerly used by the Midland Regiment, for training purposes two nights a week.

"Since these men are giving their services free I think we should do what we can to help them," said A. G. Thompson, who urged a motion that the request be granted. The motion was moved by H. A. McArthur and E. C. McKeel, and carried.

Charge Club $60.

Chairman of the Property Committee W. R. Loucks said that no definite agreement had been reached with the Badminton Club, which had been using one of the rooms in the old High School. According to the previous motion, no definite rental had been set. It was decided to send the club a bill for $60 for use of the room for the entire season.

In line with other schools which are raising money for patriotic purposes the local school is planning to hold a concert on March 6 and 7. W. Henson told members that the Public School desired use of the High school auditorium for the two evenings and Dr. Richardson recommended that it be turned over to them without charge.

On the ninth day of their War Savings drive High School pupils had invested $126.00, according to Principal E. H. Greig, who commented on the number of "shin plasters" that had been unearthed. Eight were brought in on one day, and on another nineteen bought stamps with them.

Aussie Ladies Are Ready Too

Members of the Australian Women's Auxiliary Service are shown taking time out for a breath of fresh air during gas mask drill at their camp. Although the European war seems far away from Australia, recent Japanese moves towards the south Pacific have been viewed with alarm "Down Under," and Australia's home defence work has been accelerated.

Millions Of Parasites Are Being Reared For Pest Wars

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 27 — (CP). — "When we get an order to supply 1,000,000 parasites, we supply 1,000,000—or at any rate within a small number of the exact figure," declares Dr. A. B. Baird, entomologist in charge of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory here.

Box after box of parasites, some dormant, some moving, are laid on shelves in the 20 rooms of the laboratory, each species and its characteristics known in detail. When required, they are available for the service of man, equipped to fight insect pests which threaten resources in Canada and other nations.

"We do not like to give the figure of how many insects we may have within our buildings at any one time, because the numbers fluctuate according to the season and the demands made on our supply," said Dr. Baird. "But we always know what we can produce and when we can made required insect fighters available."

The entomologist showed an interviewer a greenhouse where tomato plant leaves were whitened by greenhouse whitefly, a pest which used to cost the vegetable industry dear. But also on the leaves were small black specks — the parasite encarsia formosa gahan.

The parasite is an effective control on the whitefly and for that reason supplies are kept on hand feeding on the fly larvae. "Nearly 1,500,000 of these parasites were sent out in 1940," said Dr. Baird. "They have proved just as effective as the parasites of the aphida and mealy bug which have been discovered and have been put to work.

"How did we know 1,500,000 went out? The parasites were sent to the greenhouse men on the leaves on which they rested. To count them, we placed the leaves under a cover through which we could see and marked off in squares. We counted the parasites in one square and multiplied this number by the number of squares in which there were parasites.

"This count is accurate. We count again and again to make sure we are right. We know that a certain number of parasites is required in a greenhouse of certain size and to send any more would be wasteful."

Fighting Sawfly.

In the laboratory's major triumph in controlling the European spruce sawfly, 750,000,000 parsites of two varieties were distributed, and subsequent checks showed their numbers increased rapidly in freedom.

In the constant temperature rooms of the laboratory—a parasite may thrive at 73 degrees and lie dormant at 70—the rate of increase is known exactly. Females in tiny vials produce their eggs in a certain period and a certin number of days later the parasites are ready for shipment to a point where there is work to be done against some pest.

The laboratory can be advised in advance that a certain number of parasites are required on certain days. To meet requirements, so many thousands of millions of parasites can be made available daily.

A schedule of delivering a total of 221,000,000 parasites to fight the sawfly was maintained from May to September in one year.

"We have to be careful of our stock, now more than ever," said Dr. Baird. "Many Canadian pests came to us from Europe and flourished because their natural enemies did not come along with them. These parasite enemies of the pest feed only on the host of the pest they attacks. To maintain the parasites we have to maintain also a large number of their enemies.

"No longer can we turn to European countries for supplies of both pest and parasite. We have to protect out stocks here, and when the numbers of a pest are reduced by our parasites the laboratory problem is sometimes made more difficult because it is harder to find food to keep our warriors for man alive."

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time.

A headache need not be an illness in itself, but it may be a warning symptom that there is intestinal sluggishness within.

To help overcome the cause of headache it is necessary to eliminate the waste matter from the system. Burdock Blood Bitters helps to remove the cause of headaches by regulating the digestive and biliary organs, neutralising acidity, regulating the constipated bowels and toning up the sluggish liver, and when this has been accomplished the headaches should disappear.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 27 — (ENS). — An interesting meeting of the Catholic Women's League, Lakefield, was held at the home of Miss E. Kennedy. The latter half of the meeting was taken up by hearing correspondence and the planning of work in aid of the parish and also war service. It was decided that the ladies present, would make a quilt for refugee help and also knit an afghan to be donated to the parish social.

Refreshments were served from a daintily decorated table and an hour of social intercourse was enjoyed.

St. John's (Anglican)

An old man—going a lone highway,
Came at evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm, vast and deep and wide.
Turned, when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.
"Old man," said a fellow pilgrim near,
"You're wasting your strength with your building here,
You never again will pass this way."
The builder lifted his old grey head:
"Good fellow, in the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim,
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him.

This poem was quoted by A.D.C. Ernie Wolfe as he spoke on the life of our late Chief before a crowded banquet hall as St. John's cubs, scouts and rovers were joined with their parents and guests for their annual get-together.

Continuing Commissioner Wolfe challenged every boy to carry on this work so splendidly carried out by Lord Baden Powell. "To us the Chief Scout shall never die, ours is the task to keep alive the great spirit that the Chief started, to do our duty to God, and the King, to help other people at all times."

Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson welcomed the boys and their visitors, stating his pleasure of such meeting. Patrol Leader Les. Groombridge proposed the toast to Our Parents; Troop Committeeman W. H. Marshall responding. Skipper Groombridge moved a vote of thanks to the Mothers' Auxiliary for the splendid luncheon. Chairman Fred Hooper thanked all for their support.

A camp fire program was conducted in the main hall; Scouter Fred Ford conducting the opening services.

The cubs under Akela Mrs. Fred Ford assisted by Mat. Sargent, gave a display of talent, opening with the song, "There'll Always Be An England," and singing "Carry On," at the finish.

Mr. C. K. Lech then introduced Mr. Ross Dobbin, who showed his movies of the local regiment and other interesting scenery.

Mrs. R. R. Ford was again in charge of the kitchen with many helpers from the Mothers' Auxiliary and girls from the Teen Age group waiting on tables.

174 boys and parents attended.

The Rovers.—A very poor turnout of the Rovers met on Sunday night and some reorganizing work will be carried on. It was learned that Bruce Forsythe, a member of the crew, is leaving for Galt on Tuesday to take up the air training course at that school.

The Pack.—Four new names were added to the roll of scouting when Garry Goselin, Jimmy O'Dette, Harold O'Rouke and Philip Monahan became full-fledged cubs at an investiture ceremony that took place on Thursday last. It was Open Night in the jungle and many visitors were present to witness the ceremony, among them being Mesdames O'Rourke, Monahan and Goselin, parents of the boys invested.

During the instruction periods, Grey Wolf took somersaults; Bagheera, signalling; Balbo, ball throwing, and Akela, skipping and cub laws. Owing to the many activities it was decided to postpone the cub craft show until Thursday of this week, when entries will be accepted.

On Sunday morning the cubs and scouts held a joint parade to attend divine service at 9.15 a.m.

St. George's (Anglican)

The Pack.—Many of the boys are stepping ahead in the studies in preparation to investiture. Cub Thomas Douglas has renewed his cub promise; Chum Robert Styles has completed his test prior to investiture. Chums James Lackie, Benny Jones, Raymond Douglas, Jack Haslitt and Bernard Reynolds have passed in laws and salute.

The Grand Howl will be practised at the next meeting.

The Mothers' Auxiliary has been organized; the following officers appointed: President, Mrs. J. Douglas; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. E. Jones; social convener, Mrs. Martin. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Crouter on Monday, March 3.

All Saints' (Anglican)

The Pack.—Some 36 cubs gathered in the snow-covered jungle to go sleigh riding and singing in the cool, crisp evening air. After a pleasant trip they returned to headquarters, where the Mothers' Auxiliary completed the evening with serving hot chocolate, sandwiches and cake.

2nd Armour (St. Luke's Anglican)

The Pack.—It was test night in the jungle, many boys proving their work. Wayne Ferguson passed compass and message; Bobby McRae, knots, leap frog, ball throwing and time; Billy Davis, Bobby Payne, Union Jack; Allan Northcott Union Jack, leap frog and ball throwing; Allister Fettes, leap frog and skipping. Four seconders were promoted to office and received their arm bands. They were: Bobby Wyatt, Allan Payne, Russell Andrews, Wayne Ferguson.

In a tussle between St. John's and St. Luke's Flyers, the Flyers flew off with the honors.

Owing to Tuesday being Shrove Tuesday the meeting for this week will be held on Thursday, February 27, at 6.30. All boys, please take notice.

At St. James' (United)

The first group banquet was held with great success, with 150 boys, parents and visitors participating. Scouter Stan. Leggett and Akela Mrs. Langhorne were in charge of the boys. The mothers in the group auxiliary preparing the meal. A word of welcome was given by Mrs. Chapman, president of the auxiliary, following which grace was sung.

Immediately following the banquet, the chairman, Rev. Mr. Craik called on all to toast to the King.

With the lowering of the Union Jack and the lighting of the blue candle for loyalty, two minutes silence was observed in honor of the late Chief Scout, Lord Baden Powell of Gilwell.

Toast to the Church by Mrs. Allen, with the white candle lit by Mrs. Wilson. Response by Rev. F. W. Craik. Toast to Parents by a scout, with the yellow candle lit by Mrs. Kearns. Response by Mrs. Cridland.

Song by Mr. R. Hendry. Toast to the group by Mr. Frost, with the green candle, lit by Mrs. Blaby. Response by Commissioner J. T. Hornsby. Presentation to the Sunday school by a cub. A scout presentation by Scouter Leggitt. Harmonica solo by Scout Art Roode. Address by Mr. Edgar Jones, Field Secretary for Eastern Ontario. Short Sing Song. O Canada.

Clergy Opposing Sunday Ski Train

TORONTO, Feb. 27 (CP).—A letter, opposing legislation to legalize Sunday ski excursion trains and signed by the heads of religious denominations in Ontario, was sent to the members of the provincial legislature yesterday.

The letter, the co-signers declared, was despatched following a conference with the Lord's Day Alliance.

The legislation is neither "desirable nor necessary" the petition stated. The Lord's Day Act recognizes legitimacy of personal recreation on Sundays unless it becomes commercialized.

"At a time when we are being urged to forego luxuries and save our money to invest with the government for the successful prosecution of this war, we fail to understand why encouragement should be given to the spending of additional money in expensive sporting activities," the petition adds.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, who is sponsoring the legislation, said he had "no announcement."

The letter was signed by Archbishop Derwyn T. Owen, primate of the Church of England in Canada; Archbishop James C. McGuigan of the Roman Catholic diocese of Toronto; Rev. William Barclay, moderator of the Presbyterian church; Rev. Aubrey Tuttle, moderator of the United Church; Rev. F. Inrig, president of the Ontario Baptist convention and Commissioner P. Orames of the Salvation Army.

Canada Is The Base For Empire War On Insect Pests

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 27.—(CP).—Calls for reinforcements in the Empire war against destructive pests are coming to this Ontario city.

Dr. W. R. Thomson, Canadian-born superintendent of the Imperial Parasite Service, looks forward to sending out these reinforcements in the form of parasites to check the most stubborn insect pirates.

The Imperial Parasite Service has been in Belleville less than a year, coming here to be re-established with the Dominion Parasite Laboratory and to work with Canadian entomologists in directing the natural enemies of insect pests.

"Here in Belleville we believe we can accomplish our objectives," said Dr. Thompson. "This is truly an Empire service, supported by units of the British commonwealth as one of the group of organizations called the Imperial Agricultural Bureaux. In 1927 the service was created and we were established in the village of Farnham Royal, in southern England until war developments made it necessary our work be carried on elsewhere."

Transfer to Canada did nothing to permanently harm the work of the service, said Dr. Thompson. The English climate was not particularly suited for parasite studies, while at Belleville there was "the best equipment in the world" and access, without crossing seas, to climate variations from the Arctic to the tropics in South America.

Call From N. Z.

The cabbage white butterfly's depredations in New Zealand gave the Imperial service a chance to show what it could do. The butterfly had no natural enemies in New Zealand.

Natural enemies were found in Europe and two parasites sent to New Zealand. In two years one of these parasites increased to the extent that it has destroyed 96 per cent. of the butterfly chrysalis. Thus the infestation which threatened the entire New Zealand cabbage crop was controlled.

"But that was not the end of our work," said Dr. Thompson. "We found, after an unusually rainy season, that the parasite's work was less effective. Now, in Belleville, we are studying a parasite we believe the rain will not affect at all."

From South Africa to Belleville has come a request—and a fee—asking that the Imperial service investigate the control of two pests in that country. Dr. Thompson has high hopes of being able to provide a solution.

Progress is being made in establishing parasites to fight the diamond-black moth whose assaults on vegetables cover the world. New Zealand had made progress in this line, and other natural enemies may be found in Canada.

"We hope we can help the Dominion Parasite Laboratory in dealing with greenhouse thrips," said Dr. Thompson. "In the West Indies they have a parasite they obtained from the Gold Coast and have found effective in dealing with thrips. We plan to bring in this parasite and see what it can do in Canada."

Dr. Thompson said the Imperial service hoped to have an entomologist work with California agencies fighting insect enemies of the citrus fruit industry, because discoveries in this field would be vitally important to several Empire countries.

Parasite Who's Who.

"One project of value at the moment is the compilation of a catalogue of parasites being prepared by us,'" Dr. Thompson declared. "We could arrange wide distribution and make available descriptions of insect pests and where their parasite enemies could be found. Such a publication would save time and money.

"Our appreciation of Canadian co-operation and the use of their remarkable facilities is beyond words. We have received every possible assistance and our hopes of giving further service to the Empire are high. We are letting Empire countries know that we are established and asking them for their problems knowing we can deal with them."

Dr. Thompson is a graduate of Guelph Agricultural College who continued his studies as an entomologist in the United States and France, undertaking research work. Durin 1914-18 he served in a scientific capacity in a Royal Navy Laboratory and in 1928 stook over superintendency of the Imperial Parasite Service.

In acknowledging the vote of thanks Mr. Mason expressed the wish that the group would stage another party at his home at some future date.

Spain Goes Easy

London, Feb. 27 (CP)

BRITAIN today announced a provisional agreement under which Spain has promised to refrain from fortifying the Tangier international zone.

Spanish troops occupied the international area flanking the Strait of Gibraltar last June 14 "to protect its neutrality." On Nov. 4 the Spanish military officially took "full charge" of the zone, ousting British employees.

R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons that under the provisional wartime agreement Spain had promised to compensate the dismissed British employees "on a generous scale" and said British institutions there would be safeguarded.

Health Masks

These improved yashmasks have been introduced by the British ministry of health for occupants of air-raid shelters to prevent spread of disease and epidemics. The mask is made of ninon. The triangular area covering the nose and mouth of the yashmask is "proofed" with a coating of cellulose lacquer. The mask is folded over an elastic cord which holds it in place.

Indian Legends Draw Tourists

OTTAWA, Feb. 27 — (CP). — Stumbling giants, forelorn Indian maidens, vanishing dogs and poetic romances are all part of Canada's stock in trade for tourists.

Parks department and Canadian Travel Bureau officials said it was too early to estimate what the tourist business would be like this year, but they emphasized that the story of Canada's attractions was being told far and wide.

"It is clear that the holidayer, in this time of stress, has a lively interest in the romantic legends which surround many of Canada's playgrounds," said one official. "There is no guaranteeing the truth of many of these stories, but they are an intriguing association with scenic beauties available to the visitor."

Most of Canada's legends come from the Indians. The Georgian Bay Islands were explained with the tale of a stumbling giant, lumbering over the icefield that was Canada with a massive boulder in his hands. He stepped on the body of a huge fish, the boulder smashed to the ground and splintered into 30,000 piece—to create the islands.

Beausoleil Island, in the Georgian Bay Islands Park, was instanced as a Canadian holiday-ground when the legend-hunter could have his fill. At Fairy Lake on the island, said the Indians, an ancient chief travelling to council left his daughter since he did not want her to associated with braves at the assembly. In the lonely evenings, waiting for her father's return, she climbed to the top of a bluff at the end of the lake and there sang plaintive songs. Other Indians heard her—and to the tribesmen, henceforth, it was Fairy Lake.

Dog Cave on the island was the habitation of a mysterious small dog seen by Indians to watch their canoe as it approached, and then vanish. They could not explain it. To complete the picture, Beausoleil has a treasure pit, where a fortune is said to have been buried—the date is unknown—and a massacre ground where Indians were slain in 1649.

"Poetic stories like that of Evangeline have brought countless tourists to Canada," said one authority on tourist travel. "In Prince Edward Island the house Green Gables, made famous by the novel "Anne of Green Gables" is an unfailing point of interest."

Naval Tanks

Originally designed by a millionaire sportsman for duck hunting, the U.S. navy has ordered an undisclosed number of troop-carrying seagoing tanks. The tanks cost approximately $16,000 apiece. After changing the original design to meet army conditions, the U.S. navy feels these tanks will be of great value in landing operations.

Canuck Drivers In Good Repute

LONDON, Feb. 27 (CP)—Canadian military sources believe truck and motorcycle drivers with the Dominion forces show a better safety record than British army drivers.

Daily accident rate among Canadian drivers is only 15—and this includes such minor mishaps as scratched fenders. True, Canada has not nearly the number of vehicles the British army possesses but even allowing for the difference in vehicle strength, the Canadian rate is smaller.

Military sources said an additional reason for satisfaction with Canadian driving in Britain was that until they came here few of the Dominion's drivers had any experience in driving on the left-hand side of the road. There are only 44 Canadian vehicles built like those in Canada with a steering wheel on the left side of the car. When these are used, the driver is always accompanied with an observer to watch the road.

NEW HAT AND BAG

NOW is the time of year when all sorts of new and delightful dress accessories tell their story of Spring. Lovely Peggy Diggins models a delightful new hat and an impressive and useful handbag. The forward-tilted hat, which still persists because the girls find it becoming, is of black cire satin, embellished with a luscious white rose and dark green leaves, all meshed over with black fishnet veiling. The bag is of black antelope. It features a large pancake compact which fits into a special compartment on the bag and serves as an ornament when not at work.

Early Keyboard Instruments Are Described In Lecture

A history of beyboard instruments introduced between the period of 1500 and 1600, the golden age when music was more widely practised than ever before, was given by Miss Winifred Searle of Toronto on Wednesday evening at the Y.W.C.A. under the auspices of the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Music Teachers' Association. The lecture was illustrated with slides of early instruments, and records were heard demonstrating the type of music made possible by such stringed inventions as the harpsichord, clavichord, and virginal.

Interesting pictures were shown of the psaltery, used chiefly for vocal companiments in churches or by wandering court minstrels. The first keyboard instrument the clavichord, was made about the time that Handel and Bach were born, and most of the music written by these composers was intended for this instrument. Although peculiarly a German instrument, it was originally made in Italy. Queen Elizabeth's virginal was an Italian instrument of beautiful workmanship, and illustrations of the type of music read by Elizabeth, who was an excellent musician, were of interest. Such music was hand-written by a Royal scribe.

Miss Searles described early musicians as "specialists in tone color" who thought a great deal more of the suitability of music than what it played, trumpets having been used to depict the emotions of war, cornets for tragedy or chuch music, etc.

The slow stages of piano invention were revealed, and Mozart was named as the first composer to turn from the harpsichord to the piano.

Mrs. Ross Williamson, president, welcomed the audience on behalf of officers and teachers of the local O.M.T.A. branch, and presented Miss Searles. Agnes Logan Green was at the piano for the National Anthem following the lecture. Mr. Norman Wilks is scheduled to speak of "Music in Everyday Life" at the second address, which is to be given on March 12.

Mrs. B. Pitchford, was much enjoyed, including vocal solos by Mrs. G. Wallace, accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Doig, who also contributed an interesting reading.

A clever valentine contest was won by Mrs. R. Watson and delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Meeks and her capable committee.

The sincere thanks of the class to all who assisted in the evening's entertainment were extended by Mrs. A. Davis and Mrs. R. Watson and endorsed by the members.

SLIM AND ALLURING

By ALICE ALDEN

WHEN a stage or screen role calls for a mysterious femme fatale, the designer usually creates a gown, long and slinky and very, very covered up, rather than a bouffant model with a deep decolletage. Here is Bette Davis wearing such a gown and showing how sirenish it is with its fabric contrast and pencil-slim lines. It is of black crepe of a rough texture to contrast with the diaphanous net that makes the high-necked yoke and long tight sleeves. As a gown of this type is also an important foil for impressive jewelry, Miss Davis wears a massive bracelet and breast pin of topaz set in gold.

Concludes Successful 3-Year Term As Regent

A few well-chosen words spoken by Mrs. R. E. Clarke closed her successful three-year term of office as Regent of the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E., at the annual meeting on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Clarke expressed the wish that her successor, Mrs. A. W. Turner, would receive the same wholehearted co-operation that had been extended to her.

On behalf of members, Miss M. Rogers called for a vote of thanks to Mrs. Clarke for her inspiring efforts and loyal devotion.

On assuming the duties as Regent, Mrs. Turner voiced the desire that, with the assistance of members, she would be enabled to "guide the ship through the troubled waters, holding the helm as capably as did her predecessor."

The reading of the annual report was extremely gratifying, indicating that the ladies had not been idle many days during the year. Fourteen hundred dollars was realized during the year. The sum of $267 having been raised from January 15 to February 15, 1941.

This was accomplished by the proceeds from teas, bridges, bingo, garden parties, raffles, concerts, and several other activities. It was reported that 640 knitted and other articles were made and sent to headquarters in aid of the war effort. The hospital convener stated that fruit, flowers and magazines had been taken to hospital patients and 614 visits had been made. In May last, 239 graves of ex-service men and deceased Chapter members in St. Peter's and Little Lake Cemeteries were decorated with flags.

At Christmas a large bale was packed and sent to the chapter's adopted school at Minden under the supervision of the educational secretary. On two occasions sandwiches and coffee was served to trainees at Exhibition Park canteen. Donations to numerous organizations included the Red Cross, Navy League, war guests, Y.M.C.A., Canadian Legion, Finnish relief and Endowment fund.

Several more letters of thanks from boys overseas who received boxes at Christmas from the I.O.D.E. were read. Six new members were welcomed into the Chapter, Mrs. W. E. Franks, Mrs. H. R. Howden, Lakefield, Mrs. A. L. Bradshaw, Mrs. M. J. Swanston, Mrs. D. Green, Mrs. Fred Revoy.

The following officers were elected: Honorary regent, Mrs. T. W. H. Young; regent, Mrs. A. W. Turner; first vice-regent, Mrs. J. THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, February 28

The astral influences bearing rule on this day suggest procedures of a bold and original nature, with the abandonment of old habits and customs as well as the orthodox way of doing things. Substitute modern and advanced methods rather than the traditional. It should be a suitable time for engineering new and important projects, under a high pressure and energetic impulse, but be not carried beyond bounds by too impulsive, tempestuous and excitable or rash behavior. This may bring danger of defeat by over-doing as well as physical hazards and upsets. Guard against excesses and extravagance and all will be well.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is should be confronted by a year of outstanding opportunity for innovation, re-orientation, with swinging away from old customs, ideas and traditions in favor of new and progressive ways and means to fit into modern patterns. This is in constructive and creative channels, where highly quickened energies and enlightened mentality point to success and progress. However, some curb must be kept on the urges and impulses lest being carried into strife, excitement or other excessive expression there be defeat and loss.

A child born on this day may be splendidly talented, and ambitious, intellectual, resourceful and energetic, although prone to be carried to excess by impetuosity, high temper, passion and pugnacity. Early discipline might assist to future brilliant achievement.

Red Cross Urges Nutrition Study

Since the outbreak of hostilities the Nutrition Department of the Red Cross has been calling attention to the importance of the nutrition program in relation to wartime problems. Information regarding which the important facts of good nutrition are included in a program of preparedness designed to help the housewife play an important part in the war, may be obtained from Mrs. C. B. Muir at 624 Charlotte street, telephone 9685.

This importance is being stressed in England by Sir John Boyd Orr, one of the greatest living experts on problems of nutrition. In the past year he has been telling the people of Britain what changes they may have to make in their diet if they are to keep fit and at the same time preserve their food supplies. In Great Britain, the greatest problem is the necessity of lowering the importation of food stuffs. Sir John is confident that the health of the people can be maintained if they eat the right foods, and points out that in view of the economic situation the Government should use its wide powers to see that the right crops are raised and the right foods supplied for physical fitness.

Here in Canada people don't have to rely so largely on importations for their food. However, there is every indication that individuals will find themselves forced to eliminate certain articles from their market orders. They will have much less to spend upon food. At this point, the question arises, what food stuffs can be safely eliminated from the health standpoint? If there is a more limited amount to spend, what are the best foods to buy.

These are the questions that many are facing now, and that every man and woman in Canada may have to face at some time in the future, and they are the questions that the Red Cross Nutrition Department has answered in classes throughout the province.

Woman Can Get Good Meal If She Has the Money – But!

By MARY MOORE.

Being away from home on a business trip is a questionable pleasure to me—separation from one's youngsters is always hard on mothers, even though it is only for three days—but visiting one's friends after business hours and having no household care is all fun.

I had some noteworthy meals—one of which my hostess hoped would find its way into this page. It was a meal any garden-variety of cook could prepare and serve—but you must be a watchful cook to give it the finesse my hostess did.

Baked Veal Loaf
Mashed Mixed Turnips and Potatoes with Brown Gravy
Buttered Baked Onions
Celery Hearts, Radish Roses
Ginger Ice Box Cake - Coffee

You will see at a glance there is not one expensive item on the list, yet the meal had a company air

Dormay's Baked Veal Loaf.

Have the butcher put through the mincer together 2 lbs. shank or shoulder veal and ¼ lb. ham trimmings and ½ lb. salt pork, ½ cup crumbs, ¼ cup tomato juice, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons minced onion, ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning or sage, ½ teaspoon utmeg, 2 teaspons salt, ¼ teaspoon peper, 2 tablespoons fat (for basting). Soak the crumbs in the tomato juice for 5 minutes, then mix with all remaining ingredients, mixing very well. Form into an oval roll (shape of rye bread) and place on large enough baking dish that onions may be placed around it. Bake in oven of 300 deg. Fahr. for 2½ hours, basting every 15 minutes with the fat, baste the onions in pan with fat that accumulates. A little hot water may be poured over bottom of pan to start the baking—pan may be covered or not—if it is remove lid during last 15 minutes of baking to brown loaf.

Serve on large hot platter, surrounded with baked onions, with garnish of parsley between each onon.

Brown Gravy.

Make gravy in pan in which loaf was baked by adding 1 pint boiling water, and 5 tablespoons flour which have been stirred into ½ cup cold water to make a paste, and stirring until thick, then straining into hot gravy dish.

Mashed Turnips and Potatoes.

Soak equal amounts of turnips and potatoes, both pared, in cold water for 1 hour. Drain and add boiling water and boil quickly with 2 teaspoons salt until very tender, then drain, shake over low heat, and mash, adding salt if needed, white pepper, butter, and a little cream or evaporated milk—mashing to remove all lumps. Serve with brown gravy. (This method converts turnip-avoiders to turnip-lovers).

Baked Onions.

My hostess used Spanish onions—but local onions can be nice too—bake same length of time as loaf, basting frequently and sprinkling with paprika during last 15 minutes.

The Ginger Ice Box Cake was absolutely new to me—the finely chopped citron peel sprinkled over top of the unsweetened cream was a clever and delicious touch.

Ginger Ice Box Cake.

One cup heavy cream whipped, 2 teaspoons powdered sugar, ½ teaspoon flavoring—almond, vanilla, or lemon, and 18 thin ginger snaps. Add sugar and flavoring to the whipped cream which must be stiff. Pile the wafers on top of each other with a good layer of whipped cream between each two, pressing lightly together. Lay the roll on its side on a flat serving platter, keeping in shape. Coat completely with the remaining cream and chill in the refrigerator (not in the freezing tray), for 3 or 4 hours. When serving cut in diagonal slices. These amounts serve 6—on additional dot of whipped cream, sprinkled with finely chopped citron peel is recommended.

Yearling Lamb Chops.

These were the discovery of a favorite aunt of mine who has a reputation in my mind for providing exceptionally tasty meals out of thin air. With the lamb chops she served cole slaw supreme, caraway rye bread, mince pie with Danish blue cheese, and coffee.

Six yearling lamb chops, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ¼ cup olive oil or other salad oil, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, ½ cup grated cheese is optional. Mix salt, pepper and oil. Marinate the chops in this mixture, then broil on one side for about 4 minutes (to marinate is to soak). Cool and spread uncooked side with white sauce made from butter, flour, milk and Worcestershire. Sprinkle with bread crumbs mixed with grated cheese. Place on glass baking dish and bake about 40 minutes at 325 deg. Fahr, finishing under broiler to brown well.

Question.—I try to follow your dinners of the week, and use a lot of fruit for desserts. We like raisin pie, but I like it full of raisins and do not want to use eggs if you have a recipe without. I've wanted a good lemon pie filling using butter, too, if you have time to give it to me. Thank you in anticipation.—Mazie B.

Answer.—Thank you for your letter.

Raisin Pie (without eggs).

One pastry shell. 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup cold water, 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup chopped seeded, OR 1 cup seeded raisins, 1 tablespoon finely grated lemon rind. Mix ingredients in order given, cook in top of double boiler, stirring until mixture begins to thicken (about 10 minutes). Cook 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Let cool before filling cooked shell. Hot even 15 minutes, moderate oven 15 minues. If a 2-crust pie is preferred, cook the filling in the crusts—not in the double boiler. A lattice top is preferable to a top crust.

Lemon Pie Filling

One cooked pastry shell, 1 cup sugar, 1/3 cup flour, 1 cup scalding milk, dash of salt, 2 egg yolks, beaten, 3 tablespoons butter (1 tablespoon will do), 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 teaspoons finely grated lemon rind, meringue. Mix the sugar and flour well, add to the hot milk in top of double boiler, stirring constantly until it thickens—about 5 minutes. Cover and let cook 15 minutes—stirring occasionally. Add beaten yolks with butter. Cook 2 more minutes. Then add lemon juice and rind when filling is away from heat, and pour into shell. Cover while hot with meringue made by beating 4 to 6 tablespoons sugar into the left-over egg whites. This is best if served very cold. Do not let stand very long before serving.

I hope you like these two pie recipes and that you will write again.

GLAMOROUS GOWN

By ALICE ALDEN

LILY PONS, dainty Metropolitan Opera star, shows how aprons can be glamorous. Her newest recital gown has a trig little white taffeta "market basket" attached to the front of the dress.

Valentina created this beautiful model of white taffeta with a snug bodice, full skirt, three-quarter puff sleeves and a low decolletage designed to show off the feathery diamond neckline. A blossomy crown, an elaborate jewelled clip, diamond bracelets, and a trio of medals complete a most impressive and delightfully young and captivating evening costume.

DOROTHY DIX

WIFE AND HUSBAND SHOULD SHARE ON AN EQUAL BASIS

She Is Entitled to Enjoy Her Own Personal Pleasures With the Same Freedom of the Man She Marries.

We hear a lot about possessive wives, and heaven knows they are perpetual headaches to the unfortunate men who are afflicted with them, but they are nothing like such matrimonial blights as are the possessive husbands who believe they bought and paid for their wives with a wedding ring, and that these women belong to them body and soul. No man is ever so completely in a woman's power as she is in his. Even the most henpecked husband has his avenues of escape. He can slip his leash when he goes to business in the morning and not have his collar buckled on him again until he returns home of an evening. He can fly, as to a haven of refuge, to far places where he cannot hear his owner's voice calling him and he has, at least, the consolation of toting the purse and being able to filch a few pennies out of it for his own behoof and benefit. But the woman who is her husband's slave has not such resources. She is locked up in her home as securely as if she were in jail and there is no way for her to break out except via the divorce route, which she may not wish to take for various and sundry reasons. Frequently, indeed, her owner is good and kind and her only complaint against him is that he has made a chattel of her and turned her marriage into a bondage that makes it dust and ashes in her teeth.

Of course, the possessiveness of husbands stems back to the time when a man's ownership of his wife was a physical fact because he had bought her for so many sheep or oxen or camels. Among civilized people that custom has been abrogated, but the spirit of it still prevails in many men who think that along with her maiden name a woman gives up her personal freedom when she marries.

Men Hold Purse Strings

There are plenty of husbands, for instance, who consider that they are entitled to all of the profits and perquisites of the domestic partnership, and that the position of the wife is that of an unpaid servant.

They expect their wives to work twice as hard as they do in helping them to build up the family fortune, but they do not give them any part of the money they earn beyond furnishing them with their board and keep.

They have elected themselves the Bearers of the Purse and if their wives get their fingers in it they have to use chloroform and a jimmy to do so.

This is true of both rich and poor. The wife of many a rich man has to pad the grocery bill to get a dollar to send to her old mother, and many a working wife has to bring her pay envelope home unopened to her husband and would not dare to take out of it the price of an ice cream soda.

Yet these men are not consciously chiselers and tightwads and oppressors of their wives. They simply feel that they own them and whatever their wives has is theirs.

Don't Share Equal Rights

Supposedly in these days of feminine emancipation a married woman has the same right to freedom of action that a married man has, but this is not true.

Few men are so downtrodden as to have to ask their wives' permission to do thus and so, but nearly every wife has to ask, please, John, may I go to see Grandma, or join a club, or take part in any civic movement.

And, again, this isn't because men are tyrannical towards their wives, for most of them don't care a bean what Mary does, they just demand that little gesture that recognizes that they are the boss.

And it is men's sense of possessiveness that is at the bottom of the mother-in-law trouble. When a man marries he wants a clean bill of sale to the goods he is getting, with no previous liens on it, and it disturbs his sense of proprietorship for his wife still to cling to her mother, and think Mother knows best and ask Mother's advice.

Most husbands are more jealous of their mothers-in-law than they ever are of any other human being. It is only the more broad-minded among them who are willing to concede their wives the privilege of still being interested in their own families.

A Common Fault

Naturally the possessive husband feels that his wife has no right to a mind of her own. He does her thinking for her and enforces his opinions and ideas upon her. She must vote his way, go to his church, play golf or stay at home as he desires, or else there is eternal friction in the family.

Some husbands are even so possessive that they buy their wives' clothes for them and make their Marias wear green because they happen to like that color, no matter how bilious it makes the poor ladies look. Fortunately, however, most men's possessiveness stops at shopping, so marriage continues to be a going concern.

Undoubtedly possessiveness is a vice common to both sexes and ruins more marriages than any other one thing. Pity that husbands wives do not know that the more liberty they grant each other, the less they take.

To Bali Belles Dorothy Lamour Barely Clothed

SAMARANG, Java, Feb. 27 (CP)—Out here in the South Seas, where the sarong comes from, the one worn by Movie Actress Dorothy Lamour is considered pretty hot stuff

The natives giggle and titter when they see it on the screen. There is a murmur of appreciation from the men in the audience. The girls, who can't blush because they are too brown, appear embarrassed. No self-respecting island belle would be seen outside her little bamboo hut in a costume so revealing. It would be comparable in Western life to a movie in which the star played every scene in lingerie

Only Tourists Notice

On Bali, the Eden of coffee-colored beauties, the sarong does not extend above a girl's waist. Nobody notices but the tourist. But it does reach to her ankles. If it didn't everybody except the tourist would notice.

The sarong, actually, is as big as a horse blanket, some six feet square, large enough to reach from shoulder to instep. It is wrapped twice around the body, and tied with a wide sash, about ten feet in length.

When she dresses, the native girl has someone hold one end of it. Then she pirouettes across the room, winding the sash into a thick, iron-hard belt. The final touch is a short jacket, lacy and colorful.

Fully dressed, she wears more clothing than the average white woman would bother with, particularly in the tropics.

A Flower's Something

However, as in Japan where "nudity is seen but not looked at," exposed epidermis seldom attracts much attention along the Equator. An hibiscus or a frangipani blossom, strategically placed in a native girl's midnight hair — well, that would be something. The feminine form divine, by itself, just isn't.

A canal bisects the main thoroughfare in Batavia, capital of the East Indies. The city is as modern and thoroughly Western as any in the world. Automobile and street-car traffic flowing along either side of that canal is very heavy.

Javanese women bathe with pristine innocence. A certain etiquette, to be sure, prescribes complete covering as they enter or leave the water. Even if it didn't, the crowded street wouldn't notice. However, they do notice Dorothy Lamour and her cut-away sarong. They just wonder where those islands are!

W.C.T.U. Recalls Reforms Of Frances Willard

Reforms advocated by Frances Willard, including the calling for action upon the question of housing, of slum clearance, workmen's compensation, capital and labor, social security and old age assistance, were recalled at a meeting of the W.C.T.U. Wednesday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. Her greatest achievement was the work she accomplished for the WC.T.U., which she herself said is the "exponent of what is best in this latter-day civilization."

Mrs. J. H. Rowe, one-time president of the Peterborough organization, was guest speaker, and referred to the local union missionary work, which consists chiefly of sending offerings for foreign temperence and missions. Of W.C.T.U. work in other countries, she said that South Africa is strongly protesting to the Defence Department on its removal of the ban of serving intoxicants to soldiers. The W.C.T.U. has warmly welcomed evacuated British children, and has sent £50 to England for war sufferers. They are distributing literature to soldiers and men "at our gates going somewhere." The National Australian W.C.T.U. is honoring Frances Willard by distributing thousands of folders to soldiers with facts about alcohol. They are also raising £2,000 for educational purposes.

"New Zealand has adopted a resolution to urge the Government to abolish wet canteens in military camps," Mrs. Rowe said. "The government was reminded of the solemn pact in 1864 that the sale of alcoholic liquors should be prohibited all through the King country."

Bermuda W.C.T.U. had a meeting attended by members of other parts of the island preceded by a special prayer service. They have sent 4000 tracts with letters to all parts of the colony. "When we see what other countries are doing," Mrs. Rowe said, "it gives us fresh courage to go on and try to do a bigger and better work—a work that is even more necessary in war time."

Mrs. H. T. Rehill, president, was in the chair, and prayers were offered by the president and Mrs. A. F. Lane. Mrs. E. Manning gave the Bible reading. A report of the meeting of Local Council of Women, at which Miss Margaret Hyndman, K.C., suggested means by which women can do their share during war-time, was presented by Mrs. S. Wildman. Mrs. A. B. Cunningham was appointed delegate to the W.C.T.U. convention to be held in London, May 12, 13 and 14. Mrs. B. Whittington was heard in a sacred solo, "Living for Jesus."

I Didn't Know I Made Such Good Coffee

It's amazing the way the children take to vegetables when you start to make cream sauces with double-rich, creamy-smooth Irradiated Carnation Milk.

USING Carnation Milk for "creaming" brings out the real flavour of coffee. And Carnation costs much less than cream and usually costs less than milk in its ordinary form. No wonder millions of housewives use Carnation Milk regularly for the creamy-smooth, rich flavour it gives to cooked dishes, and for its economy on the table for cereals and fruit.

Carnation is just whole milk with part of the natural water taken out; sterilized so it keeps on the pantry shelf indefinitely; homogenized to give every drop equal creamy smoothness; irradiated for extra "sunshine" vitamin D.

There are glorified recipes of all kinds in the beautifully illustrated deluxe Carnation Cook Book—15¢ (postpaid). Carnation Company Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MORE ABOUT—

Scorched Money

"I want to call on you later," Crown Attorney McElderry said, and the Chief Constable departed reluctantly.

The first charge proceeded with was one against Louis Gallow in connection with the burglary in the C.D.S. Store on February 2.

Store Manager Called.

J. H. Jamison, manager of the C.D.S. Store, was the first witness called by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C.

The store was closed at 9.30 that Saturday night and we left shortly afterward. The caretaker, Jack McConnell, was left in the store, said the witness.

Mr. Jamison said that at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning in response to a call from the caretaker, he found that the safe had been broken into and the smaller safe taken away. The big safe weighed 2,500 pounds and the small one over 300 pounds.

Inside the small safe was money and cheques to the amount of $4,500.

"We cannot determine the exact amount of cash," the witness said.

A small safe was carried into the court and identified as the one taken from the big safe in the C.D.S. Store. It was entered as an exhibit.

"Will you please use numbers in marking the exhibits," said Crown Attorney McElderry. "There will be a lot of them introduced."

Mr. McElderry called the attention of the witness to the damaged condition of the safe.

"The combination was not off and the corner was not damaged when the small safe was in the store on the Saturday night," said the witness.

He said that he identified the small safe by its serial number.

Mr. Jamison said that on visiting the store Sunday morning he had noticed a price tag belonging to an overnight bag lying on the floor. The safe was lying on its back on the floor on a number of blankets and comforters.

The price tag, he said, was found close to the safe.

Witness identified a tag produced as the one he had found at the store on the Sunday morning after the robbery The tag was numbered 9471.

An overnight bag was produced and Mr. Jamison said it was similar to the one taken from the store. On examining the bag witness said it had the same number as the tag—9471.

Ledger Card.

Mr. Jamison identified a card produced as a ledger card that had been in the large safe. He had found it on the floor on the morning after the robbery. There was an impression of a heel on the card, the witness said.

Cross-examined by Mr. Frankel, Mr. Jamison pointed out the serial number on the small safe.

The total in cheques and money in the safe was approximately $4,500, he said. About one-third of that would be cheques.

Mr. Jamison said that the number 9471 on the bag was a manufacturer's mark.

"There might be thousand of bags with that number," asked Mr. Frankell. "Yes."

"In other words you cannot positively swear that this bag produced was the one stolen from the store?" "No."

"All you can say is that it is similar?" "Yes."

Entrance to the store was gained through an adjoining building, Mr. Jamison said. No one remained in the store all night.

In regard to the impression on the ledger card Mr. Jamison said that he would not say that he did not step on it himself when he inspected the safe after the robbery.

Detective Testifies

Detective Edward Tong of the Toronto Police Department was the second witness called. He swore that he went with Detective Sergt. Nimmo to a rooming house at 171 Mutual street, Toronto, kept by Louis Gallow. Two bags, including the one produced in court, had been found in Gallow's place.

A pair of shoes produced by Crown Attorney McElderry were identified as having been found in Gallow's room several days later. They had been turned over to Detective Borland of the Toronto City Police Department, finger print expert.

To Mr. Frankel, Detective Tong said the bags had been found in a room occupied by William Bradd.

"There were no personal effects of the accused there?"

"None that I know of."

"You visited Gallow's place frequently?"

"Yes."

"You carried away a number of pairs of shoes?"

"Seven altogether," said the witness.

Detective Oliver Borland, fingerprint and identification expert of the Toronto Police Department, swore that he had examined the ledger card that had been put in as exhibit. He produced a photograph of the heel impression on the card and then a reproduction of the mark made by the right shoe of the pair that had been identified by Detective Tong as obtained by him in the house of Louis Gallow.

Impressions Similar

"On comparing the impressions," said the witness, "I found that in my opinion the heel impression of the right shoe was similar to the mark on the ledger card. They were the same size, the same make, had the same number of nail holes and their were two similar wear-and-tear marks on each."

"My opinion is that the right shoe of Louis Gallow made that impression on the card," said the witness.

Mr. Frankel objected to the statement and was sustained by Magistrate Langley.

Cross-examination by Mr. Frankel failed to shake the witness's statements in regard to the impressions.

Eighteen Dollars Found

Detective Sergt. John Nimmo of the Toronto Police Department said that eighteen dollars in bills was taken from Louis Gallow when he was arrested in Toronto, and this had been turned over to Detective Sergt. Meagher of Peterborough. Nimmo told of finding of an overnight bag in one of the rooms in Gallow's house and said that when asked about it Gallow had said the bag belonged to a little fellow called Jimmy. "All he could say was that he was a short man but that he did not know his name."

Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher produced a number of iron bars, two axes, a bolt-cutter and jemmy found in the C.D.S. store after the robbery and these were entered as exhibits. He told of going to Toronto to bring back Gallow and another prisoner and receiving an envelope containing $18 from Detective Sergt. Nimmo, which he had turned over to Chief Constable Newhall. Later he had gone to Windsor and brought back two packages of money and the small safe entered as an exhibit.

Lorne Henderson, criminal investigator for the T. Eaton Company, told of turning the ledger card with the heel impression on it over to the Toronto police.

Professor Joslyn Rogers identified the envelope produced as a package of money given him by Chief Newhall. He had examined these bills thoroughly and had found that all of the bills showed evidence of scorching.

He pointed out those evidences to the court.

Asked about the small safe he said that it was apparent it had been opened by means of a blow torch of very high temperature. If the bills had been in the safe at the side nearest the hole it might be expected that they would be scorched.

"Would you say on oath that these bills were in that safe?" asked Mr. Frankel.

"Why certainly not," replied the witness. "All I said was that they could have been in there and got into that condition."

Joe Bergeron, clerk and waiter at the Munro Hotel in Windsor asked if he knew Louis Gallow, Bergeron said "No," and when the prisoner was pointed out to him Bergeron said that he did not know him at all.

Bergeron identified a card produced by Crown Attorney McElderry as one used as a registration card at the Hotel Munro. It had the name Louis Gallow, Toronto, as registering there on the night of February 2. However the witness said that he could not identify Gallow as one of the men who had registered there.

William McIlwain, Peterborough, identified Gallow as one of the two men he had seen on George street on the afternoon of February 1, but Mr. Frankel objected to the manner of identification. At this stage the court adjourned for luncheon.

Easy to Reduce Weight When You Limit Calories

You Lose Two Pounds a Week

A true slimming story! And a really happy ending, too, when a stout woman diets the calory way.

By limiting food calories to around 1,200 a day, she not only loses—as much as 24 pounds in three months—but feels radiantly younger. And the lovely part is that while reducing you eat as much as ever!

The trick is to have a calory chart and never be fooled by harmless-looking foods—like prunes.

Just think: 200 calories in four little prunes, a whole sixth of your 1,200-calories-a-day reducing allowance. And after a lunch of corn chowder (300 a cup), creamed chipped beef on toast (400), and lemon meringue pie (300) you'd have to quit eating for 24 hours!

But what delicious foods you CAN have! A normal-sized lunch of chicken soup (100 a cup), stewed mushrooms on toast (140), and ¾ cup of lemon jelly (150) has only 390 calories.

Have a graceful, girlish new figure—soon! Our 32-page booklet gives 42 tasty low-calory menus, a newly enlarged calory chart. Also tells how to gain.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of THE NEW WAY TO A YOUTHFUL FIGURE to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

HIDE YOUR INTENTIONS

ONE fundamental of strategy, in any kind of contest, is to conceal your intentions, to keep the enemy from knowing what you are preparing to do. Carried to high degree, this amounts to deliberately misleading him and making him definitely count on you for something entirely different from your true plan. If you can make him expect just the reverse of what you intend to try, then you have attained the zenith in this respect—or the pinnacle, if you prefer that term.

This was in a duplicate tournament, and South didn't like to see the opponents get away with playing the hand at their little 2-Heart contract, hence his 2-Spade call which kept the bidding from dying.

North was a demure little lady whose husband is known as one of the game's stars, but whose opponents did not expect anything very tricky from her. So, after East led the heart 9 to the J and A, she went to the dummy with the diamond 3 to the Q and led the spade 6 to the Q and K. East knew she was trying to drop the trumps. Refusing to oblige her with a trump return, he fired back a heart. West took two tricks in that suit and shifted to the club K. East signaling for a repeat with the J. The Q then was ruffed, the diamond K scored, a third round club was ruffed, the diamond 10 ruffed with the spade J and over-ruffed by the A. West returned the heart 7, ruffed by the spade 9. The spade 10 and diamond A then accounted for the last two tricks.

By leading spades herself, she had kept the opponents from leading them. Had they done so, when they got in, and taken out the dummy's three trumps, she would have had to lose six tricks—two in spades, two in hearts and one each in the minors. As it was, her ruff of the diamond 10 saved a trick and made the contract, even though West over-ruffed with the trump A, which would have taken a trick anyway.

Spirit Is Tough In Troopers Newfoundland

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, Feb. 27 — (CP). — In a quiet part of beautiful southern England, hundreds of youthful Newfoundlanders are training to perpetuate the First Great War fame of their fathers.

Sons of men who gave their lives as "shock troops" in the war of 1914-18, these young men have left behind their fishing nets and trap lines, deserted their school rooms and offices to rally to the support of the Empire in the greatest struggle in British history.

Newfoundland has no army of its own, so the Islanders—residents of England's oldest colony—retain their identity principally in the "Newfoundland Regiments" of the Royal Artillery. They also have their own forestry unit, in which lumberjacks put to good use knowledge gained in the forests of the island.

Crossed As Civilians

All the Newfoundlanders serving with the Imperial Forces in Britain are volunteers. They were examined and attested at home and crossed to Great Britain as civilians. They enlisted and were equipped on this side of the Atlantic. Most of the men are lumberjacks and fisherman but include, too trappers, solicitors, school teachers, college students and office workers. Some of them hiked hundreds of miles to the recruiting offices at St. John's the capital.

Recruits travelled from as far afield as inner Labrador which sent two Eskimo brothers, 24-year-old F. Benoit and M. J. Benoit, 27. One is a fisherman and the other a trapper. Their companions call them "Bennett," and both are anxious, in the words of their commanding officer, to "have a go at the Germans."

Majority of the men with the artillery regiment training in this section of the Eastern Command are from Newfoundland's outports, and life in England is strange for them. They are billeted in palatial homes which are a far cry from the small, frame buildings of the fishermen's villages of the Island.

H. Russell, a fisherman from Carbonear, said his companions like nothing better than to spend a lively evening "in town." The town is a small English village.

Preferred Imperials

The commanding officer, a Briton who knows Newfoundland like a book although he never has been there, is satisfied with the progress his charges have made since their arrival here several months ago.

"They are a patriotic bunch and their spirit is tough," he said. "They can hardly wait to meet the enemy. They have a job to do and they'll be ready when the time comes."

He said the Newfoundlanders were so anxious to retain their identity that they preferred to join the British army rather than enlist in the higher-paid Canadian Army, in which 3,000 men served in the First Great War, besides the 12,000 others in the British forces.

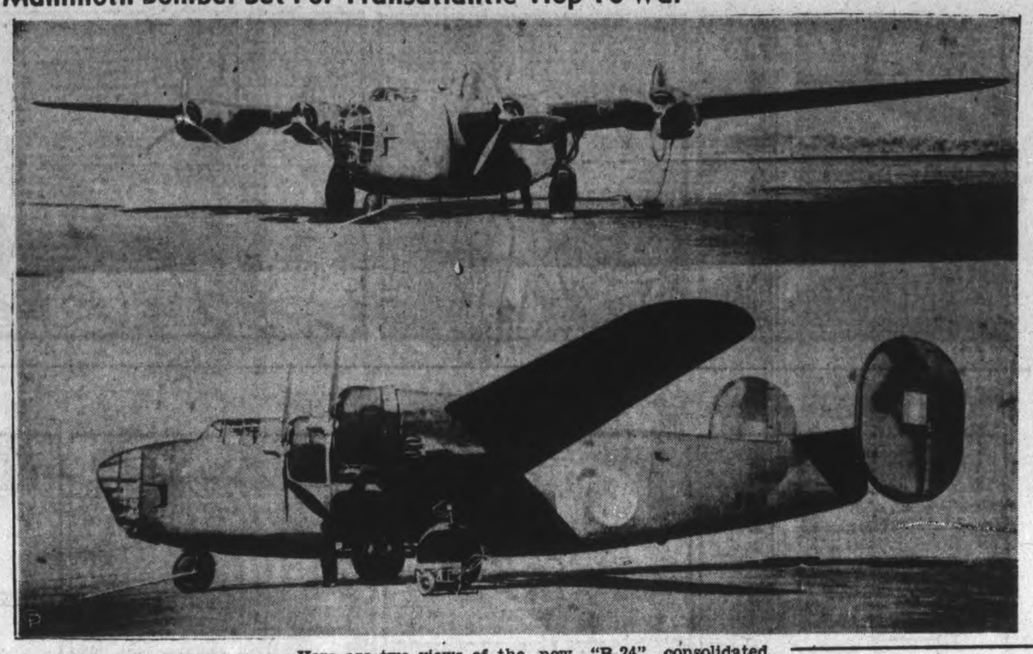
Commendation

Viscount Cranborne, Dominions Secretary, and D. J. Davies, Newfoundland Trade Commissioner, visited the regiment and commented favorably upon the efficiency of the men. The artillerymen carried out a flawless demonstration at some of their gun positions.

The gunners chuckled when a London war correspondent, after watching the men go through their paces behind a vicious-looking 9.2 howitzer, asked one of subalterns if it was an anti-aircraft gun.

The regimentaly officers are all British but a number of the Newfoundlanders are studying to obtain commissions.

Mammoth Bomber Set For Transatlantic Hop To War



Here are two views of the new "B-24" consolidated bomber that is expected to play an important part in Britain's war effort. There are 26 of these mammoth planes on order, built, or being built for England in the United States. They each weigh 20 tons and can carry four tons of bombs. This plane already has the R.A.F. emblem on it and was pictured just before it took off for the flight across the Atlantic.

FDR Favors Use Of Wiretapping

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—(AP).—President Roosevelt said yesterday he favored the use of wiretapping against aliens and "traitors" who engage in "espionage or sabotage against the United States."

His statement was in a letter to Representative Thomas Eliot (Dem. Massachusetts), member of the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee which is studying wiretapping legislation. Eliot made the letter public.

Mr. Roosevelt said a pending Bill by Representative Sam Jobbs (Dem.-Alabama) "goes entirely too far" and contains provisions "unnecessarily broad" in that it would permit the head of any executive department of the Federal Government to authorize his investigators to tap wires provided he believed that a felony had been or was about to be committed.

Mr. Roosevelt said the only "domestic" crime in connection with which wiretapping might be advisable was "kidnapping and extortion in the Federal sense."

"There is, however, one field in which, given the conditions in the world to-day, wiretapping is very much in the public interest," the President wrote.

"This nation is arming for national defence. It is the duty of our people to take every single step to protect themselves.

"I have no compunction in saying that wiretapping should be used against those persons, not citizens of the United States, and those few citizens who are traitors to their country, who to-day are engaged in espionage or sabotage against the United States."

HAVELOCK

RedCrossBranch Shows $139 Balance On Hand

HAVELOCK, Feb. 27—(ENS). — The weekly meeting of the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Council Chamber, with an attendance of 26, and the president, Mrs. A. McLauchlin, presiding.

Two quilts were quilted during the afternoon, and in the surgical department many compresses and bandages were made and packed ready for shipping, others were busy labelling goods and preparing more work.

At 4.30, the president called the meeting to order, with the members standing, repeating the war prayer. The treasurer reported a balance of $139.35 in the bank and also of receiving a cheque from the Campbellford salvage for $14.50. The proceeds of the afternoon tea on Monday were handed in and also a donation of $2.50 was received, signed from "a friend." A donation of a quilt was received from Mrs. John Anderson and a donation of a crib quilt was received from Helen Price, a public school pupil, which was made by hand.

A letter from the Red Cross Society in Toronto asked the branch to make 32 pairs of rifle mitts and 10 pairs of pyjamas. As there is a tremendous need for mitts, the conveners of the wool department were asked to have these mitts knit at once. The cutting committee advised the president that the ten pairs of pyjamas would be ready for shipment next week.

The president thanked all who had helped with the afternoon tea, which was a real success and also announced that The World's Day of Prayer, was to be held in the Anglican Church on Friday, and urged all the Red Cross workers to attend.

A crokinole party, sponsored by the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Anglican Church, under the leadership of Miss Jean McNeely, was held in the basement of the church on Monday evening, with a good attendance. The ladies' first prize went to Beryl Rice; ladies' consolation to Reta Flemming; the men's first to Mr. A. Gay, and the men's consolation to Alvin Post. A dainty lunch was served after the games.

Little Lois Wilde entertained six little guests at a dinner party, held in honor of her sixth birthday. The attraction of the evening was the centrepiece, which held a Jack Horner pie; from this pie little ribbons pointed to each guest and on the end of the ribbon was a little gift.

After dinner, games were played and the little hostess opened her gifts. The following girls were present: Jean Hubble. Joy Little, Joan Paige, Loraine Paige, Patricia Cummings and Eleanor Wannamaker.

Stomach And Kidney Troubles Gone; Praises Syntona Tonic

Tells of Grand Relief, from Gastritis, Cramps, Dizzy Spells, Headaches and Constipation. Had Rheumatic Pains in Shoulders and Joints.

MR. ROBERT THOMBLISON

How many times have you said you would give ANYTHING to be able to eat three good meals a day without getting that heavy, bloated feeling in your stomach that almost makes you gasp for your breath? Those cramps, dizzy spells or nervour headaches; pains in the back and limbs caused by excess acids and impurities in the system. Do you know that EVERY DAY reputable men and women who have suffered with one or more of these distressing ailments tell how Syntona has relieved them after everything else they tried had failed? Here, for example, is the experience of Mr. Robert Thomblison, well-known Burlington man, residing at 5 Caroline Street West, as reported only recently:

"I suffered with a gassy, upset stomach and cramps after every meal and I had to take strong laxatives for constipation. When I would stoop over or get up quickly I would get dizzy spells and I was subject to frequent severe headaches. At night I had to get up at all hours to relieve my kidneys, so I felt tired out and weakened right from the beginning of each day. Then rheumatic pains set into my shoulders and joints.

"I had tried every treatment I ever heard of, but I couldn't get any satisfactory results, and I often wondered if I would ever feel any better. It was my son who first got me started taking Syntona. He brought some home one day and suggested I try it. Well, I could tell it was helping me right from the first bottle. I liked the way it acted on my stomach and bowels, so I took a full treatment and it fixed me up fine. I soon got so I could eat regular meals and my food digested well. Then, the kidney trouble and pains left me. It surely was a great relief and I would take Syntona any time my system gets upset again."

Go to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and get yourself a treatment of Syntona to-day.—(Advt.)

51 Tokyo Ships Sighted Off Indo-China Following Ultimatum

TOKYO, March 1 (Saturday).—(AP).—Japan's ultimatum to the French that they agree to yield to Thailand large areas of the Indo-China provinces of Cambodia and Laos or face action by Japanese armed forces expired at midnight Friday without a reply.

Authoritative sources said the Japanese Foreign Office was planning a conference of key officials later this morning, to which Indo-China peace conference delegates would be invited.

Japanese Foreign Office officials had waited up in their wooden building until midnight, although it had been apparent that the French were not going to meet the ultimatum deadline.

Canada Producing New British Surprise, Secret Gadget Spelling Doom For Subs

TORONTO, Feb. 28—(CP).—A Toronto paper said today in a newspage story that it had learned "a secret device now being manufactured in Canada may be Britain's 'ace in the hole' against Germany's threatened all-out U-boat attacks."

"This anti-submarine apparatus practically assures the doom of any underwater craft once its presence in a certain area is known it is stated.

"Even though the U-boat may be hiding at a great depth it is possible for planes or destroyers to drop depth bombs with accuracy.

"Should the U-boat be caught as it is in the act of submerging, it is said, the periscope surface is rendered of no further use until it is replaced."

From Washington comes the story that Britain can maintain present rations of essential foods, according to the United States Agriculture Department, even if sea warfare slashes imports to 40 per cent. of average pre-war levels for fats and 30 per cent. for bacon and ham and sugar.

These estimates were based upon the assumption of no startling shifts in domestic production and discount the influence of changes in reserve stocks.

The Department's survey found Britain faring better than Germany in essential foods, but said the war had boosted prices there but not in the Reich.

Ace Division Shattered In Somaliland

3,000 Prisoners Taken Along River In British Sweep

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 28—(AP). — British headquarters announce today that the British and Free French column which has been driving into Eritrea from the north "is now in contact with enemy troops holding covering positions north of Cheren," Italian defence centre which has stalled the British advance for weeks.

This contact was declared to have been made after a vigorous advance by the forces which swept into Eritrea from the Anglo-Sudan two weeks ago.

The object of this pincer movement is to break Italian resistance around Cheren, mountain key to Asmara, the Eritrean capital 42 miles to the southeast.

"Meanwhile," to-day's war bulletin said, "by local activity we have improved our positions west of the town." British forces have been held up there since driving westward across Eritrea.

To the south, in Italian Somaliland, where British troops control the entire colony following capture of the capital city of Mogadiscio, the Middle East Command said: "Operations in all sectors are developing successfully."

In Ethiopia, "in the face of increasing pressure" by native patriots, the Italian withdrawal from military posts in the Gojjam area in the northwest is continuing.

Tripoli's Power Hit.

Royal Air Force headquarters said reconnaissance flights had shown that two of the power station buildings at Tripoli, chief port in Western Libya and headquarters of the remaining Italalian forces in North Africa, had been burned out as a result of an air raid Monday night.

Air units supporting the Eritrean offensive caused many casualties and much damage in bomb and machine-gun raids on Italian positions south of Cheren, the R.A.F. communique said. The Cheren-Asmara railroad likewise was attacked.

Plaies ranging ahead of land forces in Italian Somaliland reported a number of Fascist lorries were destroyed beyond Bulo Burtin on the Webbe Shibeli river, 150 miles north of Mogadiscio. The position of the Italians indicated they were withdrawing along the river toward Ethiopia.

Another Axis raid was made on Malta yesterday but there were no casualties or damage.

Gort's Son Shot

London, Feb. 28 (CP)

CHARLES STANDISH VEREKER, son of Viscount Gort, commander of the British Expeditionary Force in France 1939-40, was found dead with a service revolver in his hand in southern England yesterday, it was disclosed today.

Vereker, 29, was a second lieutenant in the Brigade of Guards. An inquest will be held tonight.

The body of the young lieutenant, one of the last officers to be removed from Dunkirk during the British withdrawal last June, was found in the village of Corfe Mullen, Dorset.

His father now is inspector general of the forces for training and aide de camp to the King.

Report Germans Clearing Channel Coast

VICHY, France, Feb. 28—(AP)—Unconfirmed but creditable reports were received here today that Germany is removing the French population from the English Channel coast. The report were taken by some French observers as indication of preparations for attack on the British Isles.

Neutral circles said the move might be a military precaution to prevent leakage of information.

The best information was that the removals began in the middle of February and are proceeding.

One source said the coastal strip was being cleared to a depth of 22 miles.

Bombless Night Given Britain

LONDON, Feb. 28 (CP)—Britain spent an apparently raidless night it became known today as the air ministry and ministry of home security announced simply: "There is nothing to report."

Last night, however, the air ministry announced the Royal Air Force had carried out devastating raids on Cologne, Germany's third largest city, leaving 150 fires visible when its bombers finally turned for home.

For 2½ hours the planes swept back and forth, those following guided to their targets by the fires set by those who went before. Docks, harbor buildings, industrial plants and oil tanks were observed aflame in this thrust, the 58th Cologne has experienced since Britain launched its air war on Germany.

In addition other planes smashed at the German-held French port of Boulogne and the German-controlled Netherlands port of Flushing, both considered possible "invasion" ports should Hitler ever decide to strike at Britain by sea. In both places docks were set afire.

Police Ring Bulgar Capital Closing All Roads, Exits; One 'Phone Line To Belgrade

Bulgaria Joins Axis Saturday Says Berlin; London Warns Sofia Leaders German Move Means Break—And Bombs

BELGRADE, Feb. 28—(AP).—A mass movement through Bucharest of German troops in battle dress was reported today in diplomatic dispatches from the Rumanian capital.

All Bucharest's main streets were reported reserved for the German military, with business at a standstill.

(Dispatch gave no indication of the direction in which the troops were moving. The Bulgarian frontier is 50 miles from Bucharest).

SOFIA, Feb. 28—(AP).—A cordon of police was thrown about this Bulgarian capital last night, making it impossible for anyone to leave the city, and telephone communication, internal and international, was suspended for nearly 23 hours.

No reason was given for the cut-off.

Communications ceased at 8 p.m. last night (Thursday) and were not restored until the single line was opened to Belgrade at 6.45 p.m. tonight.

It still was impossible to communicate with the provinces to learn what was happening along the Danube—German troops have been massed across it in Rumania—but the entire city, including government officials and diplomats, was extremely apprehensive.

No authentic reports could be received from the frontiers.

The British Legation was packed and ready to get out of the country ahead of any invasion of Nazi troops.

There are some 600,000 German soldiers in Rumania.

(Diplomatic dispatches reaching Belgrade today told of a mass movement of German troops in battle dress through Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, which is 50 miles from the border).

The police cordoned Sofia on the advice of the military, it was learned.

British Embassy Cut Off

All diplomatic missions were cut off from any kind of communication.

Unofficial reports said King Boris was closeted in his palace, refusing to see his ministers. Attempts to obtain any word from the palace of what was going on proved fruitless.

Shortly after dawn, secret police raided the homes of 10 or more Bulgarian journalists, oil men and others, seeking incriminating documents; then all were arrested.

They were described as "men with British connections."

Those arrested were sent immediately to a newly-established concentration camp somewhere in the provinces.

Britain Closes Entrance To Singapore

SINGAPORE, Feb. 28. (CP). — Eight additional square miles of the waters off Singapore will be mined beginning March 3 as a means of closing the eastern approaches to the harbor and the roads to navigation completely, it was announced today.

The extension will close the last gap in the minefield protecting the east coast of Malaya from the great naval base at Singapore to a point 60 miles to the north.

This minefield has been laid since Feb. 16. After March 3 the only approaches to Singapore will be from the southwest through Malacca Strait.

Warning Goes Out

LONDON, Feb. 28 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported today from Singapore an official announcement that the eastern approaches to Singapore harbor and the roads would be closed to shipping by mines from March 3.

This will mark an extension of existing minefields guarding Britain's great naval base.

Vessels will enter the area at their own risk, the announcement said.

Another Gets Home

London, Feb. 28 (CP Cable)—

ONE of four missing vessels from a convoy attacked Feb. 12 reached a British port undamaged, it was learned authoritatively today.

Nothing is known of the three ships still missing.

The Admiralty had previously reported that 10 ships of the convoy of 19 had returned safely to port and that five were sunk.

(The Germans had claimed that 14 ships were sunk in this attack, made by a surface raider in the Atlantic off the Azores.)

C.P.R. Foreman Saw Burns In Bowmanville

"His face looks very familiar" declared Everett Osborne, C.P.R. section foremen at Bowmanville, indicating Lawrence Burns, in the dock at the police court this morning, when asked if he saw any one in the court room who looked like any of the four men he said he had seen in a maroon car at Bowmanville on the afternoon of February 1.

That was the most important feature of the evidence given at this morning's session of the preliminary hearing of the charge against Burns of having cracked the safe of the C.D.S. store here on the morning of February 2.

Osborne testified that on that Saturday night the tool house at Bowmanville had been broken into and he identified a number of bars, hammers, etc. as tools that had been stolen on that occasion.

Abandon Island

London, Feb. 28 (CP)

BRITISH forces which occupied the Italian island of Kastelorizo in the eastern Mediterranean have been withdrawn, "having accomplished their object."

A joint Admiralty and war office communique tonight said "our forces which landed on the island of Kastelorizo last Tuesday have now been withdrawn, having accomplished their object."

The island is a few miles off the southwest Turkish coast and is the easternmost of the Italian Dodecanese group. An Italian seaplane base had been located there prior to the British arrival.

Semi-official sources said they were unable to amplify the communique. The reasons for the occupation remained unknown.

Planes Bring Out Banting's Body

NEWFOUNDLAND AIR PORT, Nfld., Feb. 28 (CP Cable) — Two military airplanes carried to this airport today the bodies of Sir Frederick Banting and two companions who died last week in a plane crash in an isolated region 50 miles from here.

The bodies were flown here from Musgrave Harbor, where they had lain since a search party brought them in Monday night after the wreckage of the Britain-bound plane and its one survivor had been found in the deep snow. Thick weather had intervened to delay their transport here since then.

Officials announced they were to

Second Division Leads Canucks In Major Test

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Feb. 28—(CP Cable).—In another three-day manoeuvre to polish up on anti-invasion tactics, the Canadian Corps has swept through to the English coast again, the 2nd Division leading the advance.

Moving forward day and night, more than 20,000 Canadians fought a mimic battle in the area where they will probably go into action if the Nazis land in England. This was the largest Corps exercise so far, with several thousand more men participating than in the 1st Division attack three weeks ago.

The 1st Division was held in reserve this time, but units from practically every other formation in the Corps were on the move, including a Royal Canadian Air Force Army Co-operation Squadron.

Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the Canadian Commander, followed the manoeuvres through every phase and told war correspondents that "the Corps is learning most valuable lessons from these moves, which are fitting the troops for a battle role in the British defence."

Traffic control is a major problem with mechanized columns on England's narrow roads, said the General, and large scale practices are held to find out mistakes and correct them.

Odlum In Charge

Directing the main operations, Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, commander of the 2nd Division, stood at a muddy crossroads and watched the battalions of infantry marching forward to take up their positions.

"This is just the type of move we would make if ordered to smash the invader on the coast here," he said. "The spirit of the men under difficult conditions has been excellent."

The advance was launched in mid-afternoon as a reconnaissance battalion of motorcycles fanned out ahead of the division and aircraft hovered overhead. Forward units took up positions with the home guard along a river and during the night traffic poured in behind them, bringing up infantry, artillery, bridging companies, machine-gunners, and ancillary troops.

From dawn until late afternoon the troops pushed ahead on foot or in trucks as Gen. Odlum jockeyed his forces to cope with the hypothetical enemy confronting him.

Initiate New Bomber

London, Feb. 28 (CP)

NEW, four-motored short Stirling bombers were sent against the Germans for the first time a few nights ago, it was disclosed today.

The magazine Aeroplane said these craft combined ability to carry big loads with speed and powerful defensive armament.

Aeroplane added that the short Stirlings, plus plane reinforcements from the United States, would "make possible more intense attacks on selected objects."

Conant Urges Red Cross Aid—"Must Not Delay Preparations"

TORONTO, Feb. 28 (CP).—Attorney-General Gordon Conant asked for Red Cross co-operation in the work of the civilian defence committee in Ontario when he addressed the annual meeting today. The price of security is adequate defence, he declared, and we must not delay preparations against enemy activities from within or without.

Civilian defence work is based on the air raid precaution plan in Great Britain and the committee's efforts at present are directed at the formation of units in municipalities designated as vulnerable by the Department of National Defence.

"Civilian defence is becoming increasingly important and urgent," Mr. Conant said. "At the present time discussions with the Federal authorities are under way and I hope that before long a more intense and effective program will be possible."

Ontario division of the Canadian Red Cross Society now is the largest voluntary social organization in the province with 451 branches and approximately 500,000 members, Col. John A. Cooper, president, said.

Total receipts at the Ontario head office last year were nearly $2,500,000; five times the amount contributed in 1938, Col. Cooper said. Total amount collected by the 451 branches was about $4,500,000, of which $2,000,000 was forwarded to head office.

Col. Cooper reminded members that the Red Cross could not help raise money for bombers or munitions of any kind because "then our hospitals and hospital ships would lose the protection they now enjoy under the international code."

"We may build and equip hospitals and send ambulances to carry wounded soldiers but these hospitals and ambulances must render service to enemy soldiers if required. We must relieve suffering whether it is British or enemy suffering.

RAF Rules Air Over Albania

Bag 7 Italian Planes Thursday For Toll Of 50 In Seven Days

ATHENS, Feb. 28.—(AP).— The end of four months of the Greek-Italian war launched by Mussolini early in the morning of Oct. 28 found Greek troops deep in Albania to-day and confident of their ability to win.

Military quarters said the outstanding feature of recent operations, which have been restricted on the ground by heavy snow and torrential rains, had been the successes of British and Greek aviation which now dominates the air. In the early stages the situation was reversed through the Italians' superiority in number of planes.

Allied planes daily carry out heavy bombing of important military concentrations and debarkation ports, and in the latest engagement yesterday nine Italian planes were downed over Valona.

The Italians have lost 50 planes in the last seven days.

In the Valona fighting seven Italian planes were shot down by British Hurricane fighters. The remaining two crashed when they collided in the air.

Heavy losses were inflicted on an Italian force of unstated size which was "trapped" by Greek fire on the Albanian front, the Greek High Command announced last night.

A government spokesman said reconnaissance reports had shown that the Italian forces were busy reorganizing their defence positions at several points along the front.

(Reports at the Yugoslav frontier said rain and snow were causing the Greeks considerable difficulty in the transport of food and supplies to the front. Some units were said to be on reduced rations.)

Enough Steel For All

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP)

PRESIDENT Roosevelt made public today a report declaring that ample steel production facilities existed to meet all domestic defence and civilian needs as well as those of nations fighting to uphold democracy.

Commenting at his press conference on the report, which came from the office of production management, Mr. Roosevelt said there had been loose talk about the adequacy of steel production capacity and that the report was exceedingly encouraging.

He told questioners it would not be necessary at the present time to establish priorities for steel and said production could even be increased if needed.

U.K. Cheese Preference Spares Canada Rationing Her Butter

OTTAWA, Feb. 28—(CP)—Canadian farmers can make the most helpful contribution to wartime economy and the British food supply situation by pushing their cheese production as high as possible and keeping butter production just about level with Canada's domestic requirements, says Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

Speaking in the House of Commons last night on estimates for his department, the minister said there is not much possibility that agricultural difficulties will end this year. In the first great war the turning point for agriculture came a little more than two years after the war began, and it seemed that in this war the difficult period "probably will be somewhat longer."

The House did not reach Mr. Gardiner's estimates of $13,134,736 until late in the evening and made little progress on them, but it approved all of Justice Minister Lapointe's appropriations.

During the afternoon there was a brief debate on defence of Canada regulations, during which Mr. Lapointe said the regulations would be strictly enforced and that court action would be taken against the Reliable sources reported the ultimatum, conveyed with the threat of "forceful action" if rejected, would expire at midnight tonight (11 a.m. E.D.T.), and significantly the Japanese government took steps to remove its nationals from Indo-China.

Koh Ishii, spokesman of the cabinet Information Bureau, said Japanese nations in Indo-China had been advised to prepare to leave and reliable sources asserted the actual evacuation order had been given to 200 Japanese in Saigon.

"A final clear-cut answer" is expected today, Ishii said, adding that Japan had no intention of further modifying proposals which were described as "fair to both sides."

He added:

"I leave everybody to suppose what evacuation means."

Japanese - language newspapers published reports that Vichy already had rejected the settlement, which reliable quarters said had been pared down from original demands by Thailand for roughly 60 per cent of the Indo-Chinese provinces of Cambodia and Laos.

Just a Strip of Coast

The first proposals, which would have left Indo-China a mere strip along the coast, were rejected and the French in a counter offer were said to have been willing to yield 10 per cent of the original claim.

The Japanese mediators then countered with a "final compromise of 30 per cent.

(Direct reports from Vichy said the French Government, taking a strong stand on the issue, was massing troops on the Indo-Chinese frontier for possible hostilities if the armistice is ended.

(The French were reported unwilling to yield anything beyond a small strip around Bassac on the right bank of the Mekong River.)

Meanwhile some 400 business men, professionals and others comprising the Japanese colony in Indo-China were preparing to depart.

There are at least 6,000 Japanese troops garrisoned in Indo-China by terms of the settlement of the latter's dispute with Japan last Fall, when the Japanese demanded bases for use again China.

The O.S.K. Line (Osaka Mercantile Steamship Co.) wirelessed instructions to two of its vessels, the Saigon Maru and Bangkok Maru, both 5,350 tons, to make every possible preparation to aid in removing Japanese nationals from Indo-China in event of a break-down of the peace conference.

be flown to Canada tomorrow. Meanwhile, an inquest was to be held here this afternoon.

Soon after the broken bodies were landed at this base airport, a Canadian Airways plane left on the 50-mile flight to Musgrave Harbor to bring Pilot Joseph Mackey, the civilian flier from Kansas City who was at the controls of the military plane being delivered to England when it plunged into a clump of woods at night.

A doctor was attending Mackey, the only survivor, whose injuries were reported here to have become infected during the days and nights he waited in bitter weather for for rescue. Navigator William Bird of Kidderminster, Eng., and William Snailham of Bedford N.S., apparently had been killed instantly in the crash, while Sir Frederick died later.

Burial At Halifax.

It was expected here that Snailham and Bird would be buried at Halifax. Meanwhile, all three bodies remained at an undertaking establishment here.

No ceremony attended their arrival at the airport at 11 a.m. (10.30 a.m., EDT), though Sir Frederick, co-discoverer of insulin, was a major in the Canadian army. At the time of his death he was flying to Britain on a mission of high importance in connection with his wartime duties as army scientist.

Investigation of the tragedy, underway from various directions for several days, continued today. The plane that went to Musgrave Harbor for Mackey carried a group of officials who, it was believed, would inspect the wreckage of the plane, 10 miles from that coastal village.

On the return trip the doctor attending Mackey was to fly with him. An Ontario bush pilot—his identity undisclosed—dared thick weather two night ago to take him to Musgrave.

Over 500 varieties of grains and legumes were shown at Moscow's farm show.

TORONTO, Feb. 28 — (CP). — The few bills already submitted to the present session of the Ontario Legislature will be open to debate to-day as the House moves into Committee-of-the-Whole.

Since none of the Government's major legislation forecast in the Throne Speech has been brought down, it is expected there will be little of a controversial nature to occupy the members in to-day's proceedings.

The question of liquor was injected into the debate. Fo. Lamport, appearing in his uniform of the Royal Canadian Air Force, spoke strongly against any move to close the beverage rooms. He added that

The War Today

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

If Bulgaria joins the Axis, as some believe she is about to do, she will lay two countries open to British air attack — herself and Rumania.

George Rendel, the British minister at Sofia, made it clear yesterday in an interview with newspapermen that Britain will not tolerate again the nonsense she endured in Rumania before breaking off diplomatic relations.

Mr. Rendel's remarks were occasioned specifically by disappearance of Vladimir Grinewitch, a British legation passport official who, apparently, was removed from a train by Bulgarian police, probably acting on German instructions.

The minister emphasized the British government took an extremely grave view and might recall him. If he went, he added, Bulgaria could consider herself in the war.

The forerunners of an "invasion" of Bulgaria already had arrived by "thousands" from Germany, Mr. Rendel said. Extra telephone wires have been strung, villas requisition for the German headquarters staff when it arrives and schools closed to provide billets for German soldiers.

The minister was asked if British air forces would bomb Bulgaria without a formal declaration of war and he replied in the affirmative. He explained that a declaration would not be necessary if German troops occupied the country as that act would place it in a similar position to Denmark which Britain attacked immediately after the German occupation.

There appears little useful purpose at the moment in a German occupation of Bulgaria, even though it does provide a somewhat hazardous road to Greece over which the Germans might send help to Mussolini's failing legions.

The country is rough and spring floods will break soon spoiling the roads for transport. There are only two single track railways leading toward Greece, one terminating in the extreme north. The other crosses the Turkish border before it approaches closely to that of Greece and the prospect of Germany carting troops into Turkey to get at Greece are slim.

Theoretically and under perfect conditions the two railway lines would be used as the bases of a pincer move against Macedonia. Actually they undoubtedly would be bombed to pieces by the R.A.F. and rendered useless.

An unneutral act on the part of Bulgaria would open Rumania to an air attack which has been waiting for her these many weeks. Mr. Rendel made it clear the only reason Britain had not bombed Rumania was because she did not wish to infringe upon Bulgarian neutrality. Eliminate that neutrality and Rumania will be in for a dose of fire from the heavens.

Exiled Alfonso Dies In Rome, Heart Victim

ROME, Feb. 28—(AP). — Alfonso XIII, former King of Spain, died at 11.50 a.m. (5.50 a.m., EDT) today in the hotel room which had been his home in exile for a decade. He was 54.

He suffered a series of heart attacks beginning on February 13 and had been sitting in a chair for the last seven days, too weak to be placed in bed. His mind remained clear and he was cheerful until the last.

At his side when he died were Queen Victoria, from whom he had been estranged for many years; his son and designated heir to the Spanish throne, Don Juan; another son, Don Jaime; a daughter, Beatrice; three doctors, and a Spanish Jesuit priest, Padre Ulpiano Lopez, who administered the last rites when death seemed inevitable February 22.

Another daughter, Maria Cristina, was summoned from Turin but was unable to reach Rome. She is expecting a child.

Alfonso was King from his birth, May 17, 1886, and reigned until April 14, 1931—a period marked by turbulence and political unrest which finally broke into civil war in 1936, when Spain was a republic.

Alfonso left Spain April 15, 1931, after signing a manifesto expressing his conclusion that anti-monarchist election results showed he no longer had the love of his people. But in his own estimation he remained King of Spain.

Earlier reports to the same effect had evoked in Berlin the statement that "nothing is known" on the subject.

A British Warning.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—(AP).—Authoritative sources in London declared to-day that Bulgaria must "bear responsibility for German aid."

Repeated British warnings to Bulgaria to avoid any act which might lead to a break in diplomatic relations was interpreted here as a move to force Germany to show her hand—whether she means to fight in the Balkans or is bluffing to screen an attempted invasion of Britain.

No date has been set for the departure from Sofia of the British minister, George Rendel, a spokesman said, but added: "Obviously it can't be delayed.'

An imporant political victory was seen in the announcement that full agreement on all points had been reached with Turkey.

Official circles frankly said that assurances which Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden received from the Turkish government at Ankara had been the foundation for the firm stand taken yesterday by Mr. Rendel.

Commenting on Mr. Rendel's warning, an informed source said:

"We still think it possible that German activity in Bulgaria may be a screen for offensive operations elsewhere, but Rendel's declaration makes it perfectly clear that if the Nazis mean business in the Balkans so do we."

Mr. Rendel declared in an interview that "the forerunners" of a German invasion of Bulgaria already had entered that country "by hundreds — no, I say thousands," and hinted of the imminent possibility of a break in British-Bulgarian relations.

He added that if such a break occurred Bulgaria would "have to face the consequences of being a theatre of war."

Britain, Mr. Rendel said, would feel "free to attack the Germans on Bulgarian soil without any formal declaration of war."

Turk Pact No Obstacle

One important point, one informant said, had been cleared up by Mr. Eden in his visit to Ankara—namely, that the recent Turkish-Bulgarian non - aggression pact would in no way be an obstacle to British bombing of Bulgarian communications and oil fields by way of countering German moves as Mr. Rendel threatened.

Assurances received from Turkey also were regarded in London as having strengthened Britain's hand with Russia. Observers noted the timing of Mr. Eden's announcement with the arrival in Turkey of Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Moscow, for a conference with Eden on British-Russian relations.

The conference will be the first Mr. Eden has had with Sir Stafford since the latter assumed his post at Moscow last June.

Mr. Rendel's statement at Sofia, added to steps Britain is taking to increase aid to Greece, also was expected here to counter any German pressure British said might be aimed to "cajole or scare" Greece into a separate peace with Italy.

British sources said they viewed the friendship pact signed yesterday between Yugoslavia and Hungary as an effort by the Yugoslavs to obtain a guarantee that Hungary would not join Germany should the latter make any hostile move against Yugoslavia.

These sources said there was no evidence that German pressure had played any part in signing of the pact.

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN JUBALAND, Feb. 28—(CP).—West African Gold Coast Forces have shattered an entire Italian division in fighting on the Juba River in Italian Somaliland, it was reported today.

The British troops captured three Italian Brigadiers, two of whom won distinction fighting for the Allies in the First Great War.

Dispatches from the front said that a least 3,000 Italians had been captured and that the thick brush along the banks of the Juba was littered with dead and dying.

It was indicated the final count of prisoners might reach an even higher total. Long convoys of captured Italians were rolling out of the town of Gelib, overrun by British troops in their push up the river.

The Italians rushed two crack battalions to the front from Harrar, Ethipolia, in an unsuccessful attempt to stem the assault. They were smashed.

Obituary

JOSEPH HAGERMAN

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 28 (ENS)—Joseph Hagerman, 62, former Campbellford citizen, died in Kingston General Hospital, Thursday afternoon following a stroke. Mr. Hagerman was rushed to Kingston Monday following a seizure. Although he left this town nearly twelve years ago he was well known first as a butcher and later as a plumber and tinsmith.

Born in Rawdon Township he spent his youth on the farm, from there going to Belleville where he got his early training in plumbing and tinsmithing which culminated in the partnership of Howe and Hagerman.

Before coming to Campbellford he disposed of his business interests in the city of Belleville in 1923. Five years later he returned to the Belleville district, again entering the plumbing business and also operating a factory for the manufacture of cheese boxes. He is survived by his widow, the former Laura Holden of Stirling and one daughter, Ruth, both of Belleville. Funeral services will be held on Saturday in Belleville.

DOGS WILL BE DOGS.

A huge police dog guards a garage at McDonnel and Reid streets, and its habits are strange. Stories have been told about his affection for postmen, but now he has worked into the news in another way.

Each day about 2.00 p.m. another police dog, just as fierce in appearance, approaches the garage, and though a sheet of plate glass separates the two animals, they fight. When the noise finally becomes unbearable, the door of the garage is opened, and dog number one goes outside in search for his foe, but as soon as both are in the open, the fight is over, they simply won't.—J. Chief Newhall Identifies Gallow As Man He Saw On George St. At 11:20 Night Of Buglary

Surprise evidence by Chief Constable Samuel Newhall that at 11:20 o'clock on the Saturday night before the C.D.S. was burglarized and $4,000 in cash and cheques stolen, he had seen Louis Gallow on George street between the C.D.S. store and Dean's restaurant was the afternoon feature of the preliminary hearing of a charge against Gallow of breaking and entering the C.D.S. store and committing theft.

Chief Newhall's evidence was given after Mannis Frankel, defence counsel, had pressed for a statement from the chief constable as to whether or not he intended to give any more evidence against Gallow and had drawn the reply from Chief Newhall that he might find after reading his notes that he had further evidence to offer.

At Mr. Frankel's suggestion the court adjourned to give Chief Newhall a chance to refresh his memory and it was after the hearing had resumed that he identified Gallow as one of the three men he had seen near the C.D.S. store on the Saturday night before the burglary.

"I entirely disagree with counsel," said Magistrate Langley, at the conclusion of the crown's case when defence counsel moved for a dismissal of the charge, contending that no evidence to connect Gallow with the offence charged had been adduced.

Magistrate Langley said there would be a committal for trial.

In the second charge against Gallow, of burglarizing the office of Wonder Bakeries, Gallow and his counsel agreed to committal for trial on the evidence of one witness and Detective Sergeant W. E. Meagher testified as to the bakery office being broken into, the safe forced open and a quantity of money stolen.

When the afternoon session opened William McIlwaine was recalled and in answer to a question told Mr. Frankel that one of the two men he had seen on George street on the afternoon of February 1 was short and stout.

Finding The Safe

Provincial Constable Raymond C. Truax, stationed at Windsor, told of finding the safe three quarters of a mile from the Windsor city limits. The safe had been taken into the Windsor quarters of the provincial police and turned over to the Peterborough police.

Chief Constable Newhall identified an envelope containing money as one he obtained from Detective Sergeant Meagher. He had given the money to Professor Joslyn Rogers.

"I want to ask you, chief," said Mr. Frankel in cross-examination, "if you have any other evidence you intend to offer against Louis Gallow."

"Not against him alone; there may be something come out in the evidence in the other cases," replied Chief Newhall. Defence counsel asked for a more direct statement from the witness as to future evidence against Gallow and finally secured from Chief Newhall the reply that there was nothing in his memory at that time in regard to further evidence. He said he had made notes but had not had a chance to read them over.

"Then it is possible that if your memory were refreshed you might be able to answer," said Mr. Frankel.—"Yes."

"Then I am asking that the court adjourn to give the witness a chance to refresh his memory from his notes," said Mr. Frankel and Magistrate Langley concurred in the suggestion.

Identifies Gallow

When the session was resumed Chief Newhall was asked if he had any fresh evidence to offer.

"Yes," replied the witness. "On Saturday night, February 1, at 11:20 o'clock I saw three men outside the C.D.S. store, between the store and Dean's Cafe, a tall one and two shorter men. One of the shorter men was this man," indicating Gallow.

"Did you tell the Crown Attorney about this evidence?"—"Not until today."

"Did you tell Detective Sergeant Nimmo?" — "Not this particular thing."

Chief Newhall said he had been driving home in a police car when he saw the three strange men near the C.D.S. store. They were jostling each other and a remark had been made by one of the other officers in the car that these men were not drunk and that they were not local men. There were a lot of drunks on the street, the witness said.

"Did you stop and arrest any of the drunks."—"No."

"Why not, isn't it your duty to arrest these men?"—"If I wish."

"It is not your duty to enforce the Liquor Control Act?"—"Yes, with discretion."

"Do you tell us that you had this extremely important piece of evidence and you didn't remember if fifteen minutes ago when you were in the witness box?"—"Yes."

"It slipped your memory until you saw your notes?"—"Yes, I knew I had a note about one of these men but I couldn't remember which.

"That's enough," said Mr. Frankel as he concluded his cross-examination.

Picks Out Tool

Everett Osborne, C.P.R. foreman at Bowmanville, identified several bars, an axe, a sledge hammer and other tools, previously produced as having been found at the scene of the C.D.S. burglary, as tools that had been stolen from the C.P.R. tool house at Bowmanville on the night of February 1. Osborne said that he had been shoveling off a crossing on Saturday afternoon, February 1 and had noticed a maroon colored car come along containing four men. It had passed him travelling slowly and after going a short distance had turned round and come back.

"Could you identify any of those men," asked Mr. McEldery.

"I believe I could identify three of them," said Osborne. "The gentleman in the prisoner's box looks like one of them."

"I expected that," said Mr. Frankel who had previously objected to the witness being asked to look around the court room.

In cross-examination Osborne declared that he had seen three of the men in the car clearly. Three of them, he said, wore hats and the other was bare-headed. He was cross-examined as to his identification of a photograph of a car as very like the one he had seen at Bowmanville. He had picked one picture out of a group of four on a card and Mr. Frankel asked if he did not know that all four pictures were of the same car.

"They could be," was Osborne's reply.

Detective Oliver Borland identified the photographs as some he had taken at Toronto police headquarters. The car had been brought there by John Fairchield. "He is Louis Gallow's half brother," said the witness.

Mr. Frankel objected. "You do not know that of your own knowledge; all you know is something you have been told."—"That is right."

"Then you should not have said it."

Borland's evidence concluded the crown's case and committal for trial followed.

Mr. Hepburn Was Ready

A deputation of Ontario Mayors waited on Premier Hepburn to see what is to be done about paying for relief since the Dominion Government has dropped out as a contributor. Mr. Hepburn told them the province would pay 75 per cent. of the cost, and the municipalities could take up the remaining 25 per cent. The reply on behalf of the deputation was that such an arrangement was better than they had hoped for. The previous plan was that such costs were distributed: Dominion, 40 per cent.; Province, 40 per cent., and the municipalities, 20 per cent. The new plan means a 5 per cent. increase for municipalities and a 35 per cent. increase for the province.

It is purely an Ontario question now, and the people of Ontario will pay their own bill, no matter whether they hand the money to the municipal treasury in the form of taxation or pay it to the province. With the approach of Spring and the increasing industrial activity the matter of relief should call for a much decreased outlay.

Mr. Hepburn intimated he would not increase the income tax to secure the needed money, as the Dominion Government was already doing that, and right there his judgment was sound as could be. The Dominion Government at the moment must have preference, and provincial or municipal financial authorities who accept that view and act accordingly are making their contribution to war financing.

The Car Allowance

It came out in a debate at Ottawa that members of the Cabinet are allowed $2,000 a year for a car, and that would mean something like $30,000 a year to be paid for by the people of the Dominion. What each contributor would have to pay we know now; it would be a small amount. But we have a feeling that he does not like paying it, and we dare say he also feels he should not have to pay it.

If he is a car owner himself the citizen knows he has to attend to his own problems; he has to look at his own gas tank and figure whether he will buy much or little or none at all. If he comes to the point of turning in his car he knows he has to dicker himself and make what arrangements he can. And nearly all these people drive their own cars (except when other members of the family have got there first).

Possibly it adds something in the way of dignity to have a chauffeur drive a car in Ottawa. At other times we have seen some of the cabinet ministers being wheeled up to the front door. The man in uniform got out and opened the car door while the ministers stepped out. It looked quite smart, and perhaps something like that actually adds to the atmosphere which is needed to impress people with the importance of our men in high places.

And yet there is something about it which sticks in the crop in these days. Many of these same people before entering public life would have driven their own cars; they would have ridden on street cars or they might even have been pedestrians.

It is not so many years ago when Premier Hepburn had the same sort of problem on his hand in Ontario, and he had an auction sale of government cars. Whether he actually made any money for the government out of it we cannot say, and he may have been rather spectacular in his methods, but as we recall the incident it met with the approval of the people.

We have not the slightest desire to see anything done at Ottawa which is going to make it more difficult for cabinet members to come and go, but we have to remember that Ottawa is right now laying the burden on the people of this country and they are not complaining. They are handing over to Ottawa money which they used to spend otherwise and they will keep on doing it. They have to cut down here and there and they have to come to the conclusion that this and that will have to go. It is just that general atmosphere, a right and fitting one for war time, which causes one to wonder if the $2,000 allowance for a car is something which should survive in its entirely.

Dealing With France

There is undoubtedly a degree of suspicion attached to the Canadian government's maintenance of diplomatic relations with the Vichy government of France.

We doubt if it would be possible to correctly analyze that government at Vichy. We can learn only from such reports as we receive regarding its actions and intentions. We realize it is more or less dominated by Berlin, and on that account the hand of Berlin is suspected in all that takes place and in all the statements which are forthcoming.

The matter came to the front in Ottawa when Hon. R. B. Hanson brought it in. He was willing to continue relationship with the Vichy government, but only so long as it showed tendency to stand firm or straight against German pressure.

It was well that Prime Minister King took time out to explain the situation. Canada's relations with the Vichy government has the entire approval of the British government, and it has also earned its thanks. The government of Marshal Petain is actually the only medium through which official access can be had to the people of France, and the policy is to keep that door open. Actually there is no other course to follow.

Carry No Weapons

A soldier who had been stationed at Petawawa went to his home in London, and while there shot two men, and that has raised the question of soldiers carrying firearms when away on leave.

We believe that is all covered in the regulations, and when off duty or on leave soldiers wear waist belts but no side-arms.

In the case at London it is reported the soldier carried a revolver which he had purchased himself. The only question there appears to be if he complied with all the regulations when making the purchase. A soldier is just another citizen if he applies for permission to secure or carry a weapon.

There are occasionally special cases where permission is given to carry arms, but such cases would all be recorded and they are few in number. The rule is that the soldier on leave is unarmed.

They Are Looking Ahead

There were three Norwegian planes over this city, and after watching them in action it was easy to come to the conclusion that the men flying them mean business.

We are informed that these machines have a speed of 250 miles an hour. If there is anything in the way of turning and twisting in air battles of today with which these Norwegians are not familiar it would be interesting to have information on the point.

They flew high and they came down low. They gave one adequate idea of what it would mean to have dozens of such machines loaded with bombs making an attack. It would take quick and decisive work to deal with them and even then the damage they would inflict would be tremendous.

These Norwegians know well enough why they are in training. There is within them a grim determination, and they look upon their days of advance training merely as a stepping stone to the real work to which they have pointed their course. They want a free Norway and they are going about it in a practical way. The day will arrive when they will strike at Hitler, and they will strike hard.

A Good Story In These Days

In times like these it is well to turn aside when the opportunity comes to look at something quaint. It may serve no useful purpose, but it does show that all the quiet spots in the world have not ceased to exist.

For the moment we turn to Cornish Flat, N.H., and consider the town clock. Charles W. Crane is the offiical clock-winder, and his salary is $13 per year, and it is gathered by subscription from the residents, and Cornish Flat has between five and six hundred of them.

The clock was purchased in 1882 for $25 by a railroad manipulator who had quite a political career as well, and he received permission to place it in the steeple of the Baptist church. He attended to its upkeep as well until his passing. Then the clock stopped and for 30 years it was idle.

Seven years ago we learn there was a committee of the town folk named to repair the clock. Which they did. Better still, after the repairing was done it was found the clock would run.

Then it was that Charles W. Crane undertook to keep it wound up for $13 a year. He explains it has to be wound once every five and a-half days. For good measure he throws in a couple of other chores; he lights the fire in the Baptist church Sunday morning and tolls the bell to let people know the place is warm and the hour for worship is at hand. In the summer the official clock winder says it is a little difficult always being on time as he is in a fire lookout in a nearby mountain, and in the winter he is "spare man" on a county highway sand truck.

At the moment a committee is working to get together the $13 for the clock-winder of Cornish Flat, N.H., and we cannot refrain from expressing the fervent hope that they are successful.

A Wise Selection

Ian F. McRae entered the plant of the Canadian General Electric Co. in Peterborough in 1925, going into the test department. The announcement is made that he is now named Works Manager in succession to Carl Salmonsen, and that is travelling quite a distance in those sixteen years.

Citizens will congratulate Mr. McRae, and they will congratulate the company. The position is an important one not only from the outlook of the Canadian General Electric, but for the city of Peterborough. It has been interesting to watch the expansion of that industry, and with all phases of that expansion Mr. McRae is familiar. He has been there through it all. The time is not far distant when we believe it will be correct to say that about 50 per cent. of the industrial workers in the city will be engaged in that one place. For that reason Mr. McRae holds a position which is highly responsible.

Fully qualified technically, Mr. McRae has also an abundant capacity for facing a problem and finding the solution. We are certain he will find the people of Peterborough fully in agreement that a wise decision has been made in filling the post of Works Manager at the Peterborough plant.

They Prefer Night

Two young men were interrupted at Woodstock where they were delivering tracts issued by the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society and the International Bible Students' Association of Brooklyn, N.Y. The pair were taken to police station for questioning and were then released waiting for instructions from the office of the Attorney-General.

These organizations have been declared outlawed in Canada, but it is necessary in this province to secure authorization from Toronto before action can be taken against members.

There have been several such cases, and when it comes to the business of peddling literature we notice the custom is to attend to that at night. It was so again in Woodsock.

There is nothing particularly commendable about that. The cover of night is used so that greater progress can be made before detection has been accomplished. We rather prefer people who go about their business in the hours of daylight.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The suggestion is made that a statue be erected in honor of Sir Frederick Banting. That's one way, but insulin is a world-wide property and wherever it goes the memory of Banting goes with it.

On Shrove Tuesday the Kitchener Record claims 1,600 pancakes were eaten at church suppers by 300 people in that city. The figures may be interesting, but there is nothing of the record variety. In fact we'd be inclined to view that as half-hearted.

John T. Whittaker, Rome correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, must leave Italy because his dispatches are not satisfactory to the fascist government. They hesitated to expel him, but intimated he "must go." The News is pro-British in its outlook, and that explains much.

THRIFT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ John Henry paid his income tax, decided he had been too lax, he'd have to whittle down; his taxes mounted up so high, to be he figured he would try, the keenest man in town.

¶ There really wasn't any sense, in running up such great expense, it robbed him of his peace; he'd start at once around the home, and have things cut there to the bone, free spending then would cease.

¶ He showed the figures to his wife, said she must use the butcher knife, or they'd be on the street; he'd close at once a room or two, before he got his program through, he'd save a little heat.

¶ His wife could run the laundry tub, 'twould do her good to bend and scrub, enemy must reign; when he looked at the household bills, John Henry felt a spell of chills, likewise another pain.

¶ The daughter had to cut down too, this Spring she'd purchase nothing new, then warnings for the son; John Henry laid the rules down firm, it was no use for them to squirm, the cutting must be done.

¶ What else did this John Henry do, to try and cut the bills in two, what discipline for him; his task is just to supervise, to watch each day with bulging eyes—to see that others trim.

Britain's List Close Guarded At Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Just what Britain wants in the way of war supplies from the U.S. is known to only the merest handful of men in Washington.

Arthur Purvis

Arthur Purvis, head of the British purchasing mission here, knows. He tells it positively to nobody but President Roosevelt. Even Purvis' subordinate buying agents aren't informed in detail. Each has his own particular job to attend to and understands what is expected of him, but they're not allowed to hint to one another. Purvis alone is familiar with the whole schedule.

That purchasing mission's suite of Washington offices is the most mysterious place in the western hemisphere. When the mission arrived in the capital, it engaged an entire floor near the top of the Willard Hotel, which is right in the centre of the city. From my seat in front of the machine on which I'm writing this column, just under the roof of the National Press building, I can see, directly across the street, the barred windows of the mission's quarters. The mission had the bars put in as soon as it had leased the apartments. But, nearby as I am, I'd have about as much difficulty in getting into that suite as I'd have in getting out of Alcatraz, if I were incarcerated there. It's watched as the mint isn't.

Last fall, the mission having established itself in Washington, William S. Knudsen as head of the U.S. war production outfit, pointed out to Chief Purvis that he'd have to have a complete idea of Britain's plans and requirements, in order to adapt American industries to supply the latter.

PURVIS GOES AFTER IT

Well, Purvis himself wasn't adequately posted on the subject. His superiors, at home, seemed to have assumed that he could order whatever they needed, as they needed it, and that the U.S. would let 'em have it promptly. Knudsen had to explain to him that the contract promised to be too big to be handled without some advance preparation to gear up to it.

Accordingly, Purvis flew to London to ask for a schedule.

The army, navy and aviation managers there didn't like to let him have it. Their argument was that such a schedule, if it got out, giving the Nazis a chance to study it, would advise 'em exactly what to do to counteract the British program.

Finally, however, Purvis got his schedule and flew back with it.

To say that it was a secret is to express it mildly. Nevertheless, it was a secret that Purvis had to let President Roosevelt in on.

The president necessarily had to pass it along, in turn, to a few (darned few) of his most trusted assistants. One of them unquestionably was Bill Knudsen. And the rumor is that it was a schedule the size of which nearly knocked Bill's eye out.

Besides Bill Knudsen, probably Sidney Hillman, Bill's labor associate, and War and Navy Secretaries Stimson and Knox are posted.

The best guess is that nobody on our side of the Atlantic is 100 per cent familiar with Britain's war plan and war needs outside that sextet—Purvis, the president, Knudsen, Hillman, Stimson and Knox.

Knudsen must be the worst worried of the bunch.

HOW IT WORKS

Purvis simply says to the president, "We want so-and-so." Thereupon the president says to Bill, "We MUST HAVE so-and-so," thus getting the problem off his mind. But Bill has to produce the goods. Hillman's stunt is to keep labor pacified. That may be difficult but it shouldn't be impossible. Bill, though, is called on to produce things out of nothing.

As for Secretary Stimson, what he has to say is, "Britain can't have as much as it asks for, or it's cut into supplies that our army needs for itself." Secretary Knox is due occasionally to make the same remark as to the navy.

Yet Britain HAS TO HAVE what it asks for.

Thus it's up to Bill to produce considerably in excess of American productive capacity for Britain's benefit and then to produce still farther in our capacity's excess to prevent a shortage in America's own supplies.

"Surely I'm entitled to test your claims before I buy it."

Letters To The Editor

FAIR PLAY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Through the pages of our local paper we read from time to time advertisements from local concerns urging our citizens to be loyal patriotically and to help our war effort—and to buy locally in our own city to help Peterborough, and using the slogan, "If you buy out of town and I buy out of town, then what's going to become of our town?" That is very good sound advice and I appreciate it, but in all fair play I would like to draw our citizens' and readers' attention to the fairness of these same concerns. If they could re-arrange some of these words so used in the slogan and apply this to read as follows: "If you hire out of town and I hire out of town then what is going to become of our town?"

I believe in fairness to all people but I think that the unemployed girls of our own city should be given the chance of employment before outsiders are hired on in our local factories. The writer has tramped the streets from plant to plant, and day to day, week after week, etc., only to receive the reply "nothing doing," but to find out that girls from every place but our own city are given a chance of employment before those of our own city in a great majority of instances. We are interested in our fair city, one of the best in this Dominion, if given a fair chance.

We are its respected citizens, its taxpayers and would also like to be better purchasers to boost our town. They tell us to boost the town that boosts you, but what are local manufacturers doing to boost unemployed local girls? These firms who receive privileges from our city should really give us service instead of just lip-service. A great deal of this outside help comes into the city each morning to work, even bringing their dinners and lunches with them and away again to the towns, villages and country sides for the night. Others secure a room at a very low price and bring their board in from the farms with them, and, what does the city get out of it? Nothing!

Those who would assist with the up building of our city are turned away each day from local factories without a chance of employment. I would therefore challenge the managements of these concerns and the council of our city to co-operate and to do unto others as they would that others should do unto them. There is a saying that charity begins at home and there is no use putting up a big front to others and telling them what they should be doing towards our national and civic efforts when they will not give us that chance to help in this great and needy effort.

I ask you is it fair that the youth of Peterborough should have to go elsewhere to seek employment? If so, it is a very poor advertisement for our city and its future.

I want to do my part. Will Peterborough give me a chance?

DISCOURAGED, PETERBORO' BORN GIRL.

CARING FOR ORPHANS

IN a question put to the Government in the House of Lords, Lord Noel-Buxton asked whether it was intended to make special provision for the maintenance, care, and upbringing of children of the civilian population who have become orphans through enemy action in Great Britain.

Lord Templemore, in a written answer, has replied: The Government have decided that the State, through the Minister of Pensions, should assume a similar degree of responsibility for these children as will be exercised in regard to orphan children of ex-Service men, and the necessary arrangements are now being prepared in consultation with the other Departments concerned. —London Daily Telegraph

SPENDING MONEY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—At a time like this I think the overburdened taxpayers are within their right when they protest against huge expenditures of their money that serve no helpful purpose. For instance there is that $500,000 squandered on the Rowell-Sirois Commission. Governments have a habit of employing commissions that sometimes serve a useful purpose. If a government should wish to foist a raw deal on a credulous and suspicious public a commission is appointed and when the raw deal becomes odoriferous the commission takes the blame. If however the government has some deep question to consider and finds it necessary to appoint a commission to do what they are well paid to do, they, not the taxpayers should pay that commission. As these commissions are not responsible to the people they are not consistent with democracy any more than those orders-in-council are. Too much of this sort of thing makes a joke of democracy.

Then another small item of expense from which we fail to see any benefit is that $120,330 contributed to the League of Nations. This institution created ostensibly for the preservation of world peace soon became a standing joke and a by-word in the mouth of the people. Its disarmament conferences proved to be a colossal farce. The whole outfit is now absolutely discredited and just why our government found it necessary to contribute $120,330 to humor a standing joke is beyond our conception. $500,000 plus $120,330 is $620,330. Perhaps a mere pittance to those large minded gentlemen who are accustomed to dealing in billions but it means a whole lot to the taxpayers.

If however this government with an opposition overly anxious to watch and criticize it should spend some what recklessly what would happen with a union or national government relieved of any opposition whatever? Such a government would not only become reckless spenders but they would soon become dictatorial and even tyrannical like the outfit of 1917. Mr. King may have some faults like all of us but he is not naturally cruel or tyrannical nor has he any desire to become a dictator. The people are doing more for Mr. King voluntarily than they would do for a dictatorial union or national government under pressure which as a free people they would naturally resent.

It is only fair to admit that criticism of extravagance does not become anyone from Peterborough for we have here not only extravagance but incompetence right here in our city council and our so-called school board. Those two ideas extravagance and incompetence are so intimately associated with one another that the mere mention of the one suggests the other.

JOHN SERVIUS.

RENTS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Could I take up some of your valuable space to ask a question that is causing a lot of comment at present?

Is it legal for landlords to raise the rents in Peterborough?

I have lived in this house for five years. Now the landlady has decided she has to have an increase of two dollars a month on the rent. This war is costing her so much in taxes. It is not only the money it is costing, that affects me. My husband has been overseas since last spring, helping protect her property. Surely soldiers' wives and families are entitled to some consideration.

A Bit of Nonsense

Fine!

He wanted to join the Army, but the medical officer grimaced when he discovered that the would-be soldier's hearing was far from perfect.

"But surely good eyesight is more important," pleaded the young man, "and mine is fine!"

The doctor switched on a radio set and a man's voice came through.

"What is that fellow talking about?" asked the doctor, wishing to test the aspirant's hearing again.

"Oh, er, I—I can't just hear him," replied the young fellow, "but he's wearing a dark grey suit!"

My Friend

"What's she like?"

"She? The selfish, stuck-up little puss! If she weren't my friend I could tell you a few things about her!"

LESSON FOR DOROTHY

MISS DOROTHY THOMPSON is a clever columnist, but she should read her Alice in Wonderland again. In a recent column she spoke of the croquet game in which flamingoes were used as croquet balls. Lewis Carroll never thought of such a silly thing. The croquet balls were hedgehogs, which had a habit of unrolling themselves and walking off, while the flamingoes were the mallets and would curl up their heads and look at Alice when she wanted to hit a hedgehog. Tenniel's picture in the old edition of Alice shows the game very clearly and Miss Thompson might look it up. — Fort William Times-Journal.

ALBERTA CATCHING UP

ONTARIO farmers had better look to their laurels. In the first six weeks of 1941 Ontario farmers have delivered to packing plants 225,000 hogs. Alberta farmers have delivered 176,000. Last week Albertans delivered 31,000 against Ontario's 33,000.

Competition for markets for farm products within Canada has never been great while the west could rely on selling its wheat crop. With the wheat market badly clogged western farmers are turning to mixed farming products which compete more directly within Canada. What is happening in hog production shows what the west can do when forced to it.—Lethbridge Herald.

Post Publisher Denies Sabotage Idea

TORONTO, Feb. 28—(CP).—Horace T. Hunter, president of the MacLean Publishing Company, declared in a statement issued here last night that "any criticisms that have been made by the Financial Post or other publications of the MacLean Publishing Company have been based upon a thorough study of all the available facts."

The statement was in connection with the charge made by Munitions Minister Howe in the House of Commons on Wednesday that the number one saboteur in Canada since the beginning of the war is the Financial Post." Mr. Howe said "the Financial Post attempted to stop Bren Gun production in Canada," and added that he understood the Financial Post was buying space in other newspapers "to make untrue and damaging statements against the Department of Munitions and Supply."

Mr. Hunter's statement declared that criticisms made by the Financial Post and other publications of his company "have had but one purpose; to inform the public and arouse national sentiment for the total effort that the Prime Minister declares to be necessary for total war...There have been basic weaknesses in the organization of our war effort. This was to be expected in view of the prodigious task which has had to be assumed by the government and the people. Our anxiety has been to see that they were remedied at the earliest possible moment."

Criticized Contract

"Mr. Howe's statement that the Financial Post opposed manufacture of Bren Guns in Canada is absolutely and entirely false," the statement continued. "We criticized the original contract because of its unbusinesslike terms and the circumstances under which it was let. Mr. Howe recently admitted the soundness of our criticism by cancelling that contract.

"Mr. Howe questions our right to re-publish our advertisements in other newspapers an editorial from last week's issue of the Financial Post. Those advertisements were published by the MacLean Publishing Company in the public interest. We believe that the speeding up of aircraft production in Canada is vitally important. We published the advertisements to secure a wider audience because we believe that an informed public opinion is the strongest assurance that any weakness in our war effort will be quickly corrected. The government spends the taxpayers money to reprint the speeches of Mr. Howe and other ministers...

"Constructive criticism based on accurate information and designed to achieve greater efficiency in our war effort is not sabotage..."

North Alberta Gets New Rose

EDMONTON, Feb. 28 — (CP). — An attractive variety of red rose that will withstand the rigors of Northern Alberta's climate without special care and one that will bloom for two months instead of three weeks has been developed by George S. Bugnet of the Rich Valley district.

The 62-year-old pioneer who was the first settler in Rich Valley, 40 miles north-west of Edmonton, has cross-bred cultivated roses with native kinds for 16 years as a hobby.

His new variety of semi-double roses have various shades of red, with blooms 3½ inches in diameter.

Mr. Bugnet said he does not intend to turn his hobby in a money-making proposition and is not interested in selling roses.

At present the pioneer homesteader is working on a yellow rose, but this work will take "five or six years" to bring to the standard of the red shades, he explained.

J. S. Rosenfeld, Survivor Of Airplane Tragedy, Tells Of Long Hours Of Waiting After Death Crash

(Following is a description of the crash of an Eastern Air Lines airplane near Atlanta early Thursday, written for British United Press by a survivor, J. S. Rosenfeld, Sr., executive of a New Orleans clothing manufacturing firm. He aided in pulling some of the nine injured from the wreckage and summoned aid. Seven were killed.)

(By J. S. ROSENFELD, SR.)

ATLANTA, Feb. 28—(BUP).—The plane began losing altitude about midnight and I thought we were ready to land at the Atlanta Airport.

It was very warm in the plane and I called the steward to unbuckle my safety belt so that I could move about in my berth. I think now it was lucky for me that he did.

A minute later, the right side of the ship, on which I was sleeping, lurched sharply and I heard a terrible noise—a shearing, crumpling sound that is hard to describe. Then there was a quick jolt, and I was sailing through the air, tumbling over and over. I remember thinking, This is the end.

But I landed on a soft mound of earth and rolled over several times. Then I remember thinking how lucky I am. I didn't seem to be hurt. It was hard to realize what had happened.

It was raining and so dark we couldn't see anything. I was clad only in my pyjamas. I was barefoot. It was very cold.

Buried In Wreck

BRANTFORD, Ont., Feb. 28 (CP) —Buried in the wreckage of his crushed cab for half an hour, Norman Morningstar of London, Ont., escaped unscathed early today when police and firemen cut him loose with a hacksaw and heaved him out with a rope.

Morningstar was driving from London to Hamilton when his transport truck overturned at a sharp curve and the cab of the truck became crushed against a pole. Witnesses said he apparently had turned out to avoid a car.

I went over to the wreckage and felt around until I found someone's leg. It was Brady (P. M. Brady, Hollis, N.Y.). I pulled him out of the wreckage and helped him over to a log.

Then I went back to the plane and found a blanket. Sewell (R. B Sewell, Atlanta) had a pillow over his head to keep off the rain. He and I got under the blanket and huddled together to try to get warm.

Some of the passengers yelled to try to attract some one to the scene. Only a dog barking somewhere in the night answered our cries.

A dog came by after a while and one of the men followed it off. When he didn't come back we were afraid that he was out of his head and lying out on the hill somewhere.

A plane flew over and some one suggested building a fire to signal it, but Captin Rickenbacker, who was pinned in the plane, stopped us. He was afraid that the high-test gasoline dripping from the plane would be ignited.

After a couple of hours, I borrowed Sewell's shoes, and, wrapped in the blanket, started out to try to find help.

I hadn't gone far before I stumbled into a deep ravine. The fall didn't hurt me, but the walls were steep and it was so dark that I couldn't get out. I stood there in water nearly to my knees for about two more hours, until it was light enough to see how to get out.

I went on down and found a house where I got a man up, but he didn't have a telephone. He drove me to a store, where I called the sheriff and reported the accident.

BEES TROUNCE DOMINIONS 74 TO 48 IN SENIOR CITY BASKETBALL

League Leaders Fail To Hold Fighting Bees

Bees heaped coal on the fire surrounding first place in the senior city basketabll race by trouncing Dominions 74-48 at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night. The winners pulled Dominions back from a first place tie with Quaffers, simultaneously helping themselves to a deadlock in the runner-up spot. Quaffers are now a half game in front of Bees and Dominions are a full two games ahead of the last place Juniors. Dominions, who opened the race with a three game victory splurge were no match for Bees' scoring punch, and were far behind most of the way. The Thorburn-McArthur scoring combination was clicking in top form from the outset and the pair of Outboard Marine stars tossed in 57 points to spell the difference. The winners held a 39-20 edge at the half and after Dominions rallied to open the last half and cut down their deficit. Bees got rolling in the dying minutes to once more pile it up. Both teams played wide open offensive basketball with attack the theme going both ways and the winners scoring most of their points on break-aways.

Bees dropped in four for six free throws and the losers failed to cash in on any of their four tries. Outside of McArthur and Thorburn, who starred on the attack, Johnston and Rogow were outstanding of the defence, and Gemmell set up numerous good plays. Ferguson, with 24 points and Wolstenhome, were outstanding for the losers. The teams:

Dominions (48) — Ferguson 24, Caumrick 6, Grose 6, Gardner 8, Holmes, Wolstenholme.

Bees (74)—McArthur 27, Johnston 3, Rogow 8, Thorburn 30, Gemmell 4.

Referees—J. Stewart and J. Craig.

Training Camp Briefs From Sunny South

(By The Canadian Press)

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 28 (CP)—When it comes to clowning, the Cardinals may have another Pepper Martin in Ira Hutchinson, 200-pound pitcher. He's the noisiest player on the squad—but one of the hardest workers.

TAMPA, Fla.—Coach Jewel Ens has the Reds pitchers melting with his expert fungo hitting. Determined to reduce paunches developed during the winter, he has been hitting "where they ain't." And Johnny Hutchings, for one, has lost 25 pounds.

AVALON, Calif. — Chicago Cub holdouts now are reduced to a small list of big names—Hank Leiber, Bill Lee, and Lou Novikoff. The management indicated today that it is waiting for Novikoff to make the next move.

SARASOTA, Fla.—The mystery of Ted Williams' silence is due to be explained today. He will be considered a holdout if he fails to report to the Red Sox by tonight.

The last time Red Sox officials talks to Williams was in Minneapolis, before they sent him a contract calling for a salary boost from $12,000 to $18,000. Nothing has been heard from him since and efforts to locate him have been unavailing.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Rudy York, member of Detroit Tigers' famous home run firm of Greenberg and York, arrived in the Tigers camp yesterday to join other early birds in training. York indicated he is well pleased with his contact. Formal workouts start Sunday.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Peterborough's Junior B squad have a chance tonight at Brock Street Rink to win the group championship when they clash with the Oshawa Bees in the fourth game of the playoff series. A win for Archie Weir's kids will send them into the playdowns and Oshawa into the discard as the series now stands at two wins for the Petes and one for Oshawa. Tonight's games should prove by long odds the most hotly contested junior game staged here this season. The Petes were battered and bumped in a rough-house game at Oshawa the other night and seventeen penalties failed to save them from taking a real beating at the hands of the Oshawa club. In addition Oshawa introduced a couple of new players that had not figured at all in the group race and the combination of rough tactics and last minute reinforcements has the whole Peterborough squad hot under the collar.

* * * * * *

The Oshawa Times found it necessary to read the riot act to some of the worst Oshawa offenders because of their conduct Monday night and it is to be hoped the timely criticism will be reflected in a different brand of hockey tonight. That kind of stuff is bad enough in the pro loop; when it is tossed into 'teen age hockey it should be rooted out in a hurry even if the offending players have to be suspended for a game or two to teach them that hockey is a sport and not a bar-room brawl. The Petes should remember when they go out there tonight that their big job is to score more goals than Oshawa and thus win the group and they should have their mind on that and on that alone. It will be a big help if the O.H.A. has detailed an efficient referee to handle this important battle. Some of the officials handling junior games seem to be trying for a place on the N.H.L. staff.

* * * * * *

There should be a real crowd at tonight's battle. With the seniors out of the running the Colts are carrying Peterborough's hockey hopes and in this crucial battle for the group finals they are entitled to the support of the home fans. For the most part this season they have been performing before empty pews and that is always a heart-breaking proposition. The kids have turned in some decidedly game performances this season and are entitled to backing on their color and fight. Now that they have a royal chance to grab off the group and enter the playdowns surely the local lovers of hockey will give them enough backing to supply the encouragement that a game bunch of kids deserves from the community they represent. A little rooting tonight will give Archie Weir's gang that extra bit of drive they may need to take the series.

Group Playoffs Next Week

Although it was intimated earlier in the week that the Trenton Flyers' cage team would be here Saturday night to meet the Outboard Marines in the first game of the O.A.B.A. intermediate group playoff series it has been found impossible to stage the game Saturday night. The series will be played next week with the Outboards visiting the Flyers first and the Air Force men playing the return game here a week from tomorrow night. It should be a great round. The Peterborough team is undefeated in the group this season and reports from Trenton say the Flyers are travelling at a much faster clip than earlier in the season. Although the O.A.B.A. game is off Saturday night there will be cage entertainment anyway for the junior O.A.B.A. squad and the Quaffers are billed to play a City League game in the Y.M.C.A. gym at 8 o'clock.

* * * * * *

The bill-of-fare in the Ladies' Basketball League at the Y.W.C.A. gym tonight offers an attractive card for followers of the girls' cage loop. Two important games are on the list. In the first fixture, billed to start at 8 o'clock, the St. John's team which staged an upset by defeating Westclox in a sparkling recent game have a chance to better their own position and throw a bomb into the camp of the Quaker Aces. The latter have been travelling at top speed and if the church team plays back to the form it showed against Westclox this contest should be a real battle. Quaker Cubs, a very much improved team, will meet Westclox in the second game and both outfits are expected to turn on the heat early. Westclockers will be out to regain the ground they lost in their last start and the Cubs will be out to stop them. Monday night at 7 o'clock the two Y teams, the Y Gym and the Cadets will hook up.

* * * * * *

The slogan in local basketball seems to be keep on throwing and you are bound to keep on scoring. All season there has been a carnival of big scores with the snipers looping in basket after basket. Last night for instance in a City League fixture the Bees piled up a total of 74 points against 57 by the Dominions, a total of 131 points for the two teams. That is just a sample of the wide-open brand of ball that is being played here this season. Jimmy Thorburn tossed in 30 points himself, a total that would have been considered a good night's score for a team a few years ago and Pete McArthur, his teammate, also equalled the mark by hanging up 27. Bees victory put them out in front in the loop race which threatens to get hectic as the teams draw closer to the last roundup.

Rangers Are Heating Up

We imagine that more than one managerial eye in the National Hockey League these days is being directed on the New York Rangers. Lester Patrick's club is showing distinct signs of heating up and if that outfit really gets hot just time for the playoffs there is trouble ahead for some of the outfits that have been kicking the Rangers around. The New Yorkers stopped Boston's string of defeatless games with a shutout the other night and last night they took Canadiens to the cleaners with a convincing 5 to 2 score. More than that they bobbed up with a new line of Kilby Macdonald, Alf Pike and Lynn Patrick that really clicked. Last night's win pulled the Rangers up to a tie for third place with Detroit Red Wings who lost to Chicago when Dahlstrom scored the only goal of the game for the Hawks in the final period.

* * * * * *

There was an unusual development in the South-End League playoffs last night when all three leading teams in the three divisions who had gone through the regular scheduled games in their respective series without a defeat found themselves scuttled by the teams that had finished in second place. Canucks were beaten in the bantam division by the King Edward team 2 to 1, the unbeaten Royals were trimmed by the Colts 3 to 2 in the midget section and in the juvenile series St. Peter's scored a goal in every period to defeat the Aces 3 to 2. Goals count on the round in each case, so that the championships of the three divisions are still anybody's. The second game in each series will be played Tuesday night.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Bryan Hextall, always a prolific scorer, shot his 20th goal of the season for Rangers last night....Red Heron has been delegated to take Apps' place while the Leafs' captain is out. He'll have a tough job....Lou Ambers will essay the comeback trail against Lew Jenkins in New York tonight....Giants and Dodgers are starting a spring playoff series....That sounds like summer wasn't so far away after all....Phil Watson who just recently rejoined the Rangers is injured and out again....Some critics claim the New Yorkers go better without fighting Phil....A Peterborough team is likely to enter the Felt Cup series in Lindsay.

Curling Notes

By HERB MARTIN

Two rinks skipped by C. Westbrooke and C. Giroux will fight it out to-night in the finals for the Harry Foote Cup and the club championship.

In two well played games in the semi-finals last night Giroux beat McArthur by two shots, but it was close. In the other part of the draw, Dr. Lawrence, sub-skip for Ray Bacon, made things very uncomfortable for Frank Jobbitt, subskip for C. Westbrooke. In either of these games the result might have gone the other way. Any little aid from Lady Luck would have turned the tide.

C. Giroux 10, T. McArthur 8.

C. Westbrooke 12, R. Bacon 11.

It is expected that the draw for the Leads and Seconds will be made to-day and play will commence at 7 o'clock Monday night. Two games each night until the finals are reached.

Two rinks from Bobcaygeon will from our club will go up to Bobcaygfromour club will go up to Bobcaygeon to play for the Bottum-Fitzgerald Shield. Total score to count.

Now it looks as if we are going to have a big crowd out to-morrow afternoon for our first week-end mixed bonspiel. Remember, the draw is made from the board at 1.45 p.m. sharp. Telephone in your name if you wish, but be at the rink on time. The fee is a straight 25c piece for everybody. It is likely we will play three 4-end games.

Leading Teams Retain Their Margin

The battle for first place in the City League standing between the Tamblyn and Nationla teams wages hotter all the time and may only be decided on the last night of bowling when the two outfits are matched against each other. In the roll at Duffus' last night the Nationals whittled down the Tamblyn lead again to a three-point margin as they swept the card from Peterborough Lock while the Kinsmen, who are battling to keep out of the cellar grabbed a valuable point away from the pace-setting Tamblyn outfit.

But the real hot spot in the loop standing at present is around third place, Huffman's being responsible for the mix-up when they beat out Capitols 3 to 1 last night while the Big Five and Green's halved things up and took two each. The Big Five watched their 400-pin lead in the first game vanish to a mere 42 at the finish. Grafton's, tough medicine when the chips are down, rolled over the Westclox 3 to 1, for a landing one point below the Grill team and Big Five. They are now waiting for a crack at the latter squad when they meet next week.

In the tie match between Raine's and Centre it was so close that 7 more pins for the Centre boys would have created a deadlock in the standing for them with Raine's and Kinsmen.

The old poker-face from Grafton's, Walter Firth, nailed the high three of the evening, 846, followed by Fred Scates' 808 and Tommy Martin's 806. Big singles included: Warren Ferguson's 366, Len Anthony 332, "Bun" Rose 328, Tommy Cupoli 321, Fred Scates 315, "Lefty" Kearns 314, Bill Milliken 312, Walter Firth 307 and Jack Playford 300.

The league standing now: Tamblyn's 58, Nationals 55, Big Five 41, Capitols 41, Grafton's 40, Westclox 36, Huffman's 33, Green's 32, Peterborough Lock 28, Raine's 24, Kinsmen 23, Centre 22.

Three Leaders Are Beaten In Loop Final

The final series in the play-offs in the Southend League got under way last night at the Sacred Heart Rink with the first game in all three divisions being played.

In the opening encounter, the Bantam contest, the fast-stepping King Edward team handed the league-leading Canucks their first defeat of the year by a count of two to one, and will carry a one goal lead into the final game of the series.

In the Midget series, Dundas' Colts edged out the previously undefeated Royals by the score of three to two, and will carry that one goal lead into the final game.

In the third game of the night, St. Peter's Juveniles, scoring in every period, managed to nose out the Aces in a bitterly fought game, again by the score of three to two.

All three games were close, hard-fought games, and in all three divisions, the league-leaders previously undefeated throughout the season went down to defeat at the hands of second place teams. However in all divisions, the margin was but a single goal, and the final games of the series, scheduled for Tuesday should produce the finest hockey of the year, and worthy champions in all divisions.

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 — (AP) — Coast pals of Lou Novikoff say he was offered only $4,000 for 1941 despite his $150,000 purchase tag... and Bill Lee, principal factor in the Cubs' 1938 pennant drive, says his salary has been slashed $7,500 in two seasons and he faces another $2,500 cut if he doesn't report at camp...Dorothy Round Little, twice Wimbledon winner, who wants to turn pro, thinks that after the war pros and amateurs will be allowed to compete against each other.

Today's true story

Jockey Johnny Adams had seven mounts scheduled at Agua Caliente last Sunday...at the last minute he found he couldn't make it down from Santa Anita in time....so Trainer Leo Haskell was forced to take Adams off seven horses and find new riders for each and every one....but here's the payoff.... sounds unbelieveable, but every one of those seven nags won.

Today's guest star:

Lou Smith, Cincinnati Enquirer: "The field where the Reds are training is in poor shape and they are talking about putting a bunch of Florida convicts to work on it... but they'd better not do that...If Judge Landis hears about a chain gang on the diamond, he'd declare them all free agents."

Willie Hoppe, the billiard king, doesn't like his front handle and much prefers to be called Bill, only nobody will do it...Umpire Brick Owens, who is writing his life story for the Chicago Times, so far has failed to mention that he was the first arbiter to wear silk pants.

RANGERS WHIP CANADIENS TO TIE RED WINGS FOR THIRD PLACE

Detroit Loses By 1 to 0 To Black Hawks

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (CP)—If Coach Frank Boucher finally has solved the riddle of New York Rangers, the answer may go a long way to deciding the disposition of the Stanley Cup for one more year.

Repeated time and again, the enigma of "what's wrong with the Rangers?" occupied a prominent place in this controversial National Hockey League race. A correct solution at this stage would take the blue-shirts through the gauntlet of defending-champion, to flop-team, to "dark horse" for the cup honors.

Either the answer is at hand or near, judging by the club's showing in its last few games. To finish third, after their early floundering, would establish the Rangers as almost co-favorite in the playoff round and their 5-2 victory over Montreal Canadiens last night was a lengthy stride to that end.

The triumph—fourth straight for the New Yorkers—lifted them into a tie for the third berth with Detroit Red Wings, who were beaten 1-0 by Chicago Black Hawks in one other league match.

Chicago's victory kept the Hawks within four points of the third-place teams, with prospect of a red-hot fight for the coveted berth in the remaining few games.

Since the league merged its two sections, third place has been regarded as a choice spot to wind up. One of the two top clubs, this time Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leas, is knocked out in the League Championship series, while the third-place team has all the breaks of home ice in its supposedly easier route to the final.

With three games in hand on the Rangers, Detroit remains the favorite for the berth but the Rangers' recent drive may yet offset the edge.

Good enough to halt Boston's amazing unbeaten sequence at 23 games Tuesday, the Rangers held a wide edge on play over the sixth-place Canadiens at New York last night. They built up a 3-1 lead in the first two sessions and outscored the Habitants 2-1 in the final frame.

Leading the New York attack was Alfie Pike, who bagged a pair of goals, and Kilby MacDonald, who scored once and helped on two others. The others went to Shibicky and Bryan Hextall, his 20th of the season, while Ray Getliffe bagged both tallies for the Canadiens.

Hogan Snatches 36-Hole Lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 28—(AP).—Belting Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and Herman Barron of White Plains, N.Y., shot into the 36-hole leadership in the $5,000 St. Petersburg open yesterday as Henry Picard's score zoomed in a high wind.

Hogan, the year's leading money winner, and Barron finished the second round all square at 136, six under par, while Picard, who shot a 73, fell back to an eight-way tie at 139. Hogan had a second-round 69, and Barron a 68.

Felix Serafin of Scranton, Pa., scored a fine 67 to move into third place at 137. Three others shared fourth with 138's.

Among them was Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, who scored the day's lowest round, a 66, before a chill breeze began sweeping the Pasadena course. Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Texas, who likes the wind, shot a 68 to pull even with Keiser and Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich. Harbert equalled par 71 after a first-round 67.

Picard, whose first-nine 30 paved the way for an opening 66, needed 40 blows on the second nine yesterday. Three under par through the twelfth, he lost five strokes to regulation figures from there out.

Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Ralph Guldahl of Chicago both slipped to 72's for 130 totals, tying with Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass.; Sam Byrd of Ardmore, Pa.; Ky Laffoon of Chicago; Johnny Perelli of Lake Tahoe, Calif.; and Clarence Doser of Sarasota, Fla.

Scores of 146 or better were necessary to qualify for to-day's final 36 holes. National open champion, Lawson Little of San Francisco, qualified at 145, but withdrew after straining a neck muscle.

Irvin Predicts Teams To Use 2 Goalies A Game

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(CP). — Reticent Richard Irvin, who guides the destinies of Montreal Canadiens, predicts that the time is not far distant when all National Hockey League clubs will dress two goalkeepers and use them alternately throughout a game as they do other players. The Canadiens may give the theory a whirl before the end of this season.

Irvin told of his brain-child in the Canadiens' dressing-room last night, and then used the 5-2 defeat New York Rangers handed his team as an example.

"If we'd had an extra goalie last night we might have used him along with the regular goalie in an effort to improve the situation," Irvin said. "Those Rangers really were boring in, and sure kept little Wilf Cude busy."

The Canadien coach said that a goalkeeper, laden with heavy pads, is a mighty tired athlete after the opposition has put on a ganging attack "for say five minutes."

"That's where the extra goalkeeper comes in," Irvin said. "When we change a line, we'd put out a complete new team, including the netminder. That would give a harassed and perspiring goalie time to cool off mentally and physically.

"The two-goalie debut might not develop for a season or so, and on the other hand it might be experimented with this season. However, I don't think there's any doubt it's a certainty for the future. All other players on the ice are changed, why not a goalie?"

Thumbing through the N.H.L. rule book, Irvin pointed out a rule that says in part that "not more than 14 players, exclusive of goalkeepers, shall be eligible to play in any one match."

"Notice that the word goalkeepers is plural," Irvin said. "That means a team can dress as many goalies as it wants to."

Jenkins and Ambers Meet Tonight In Championship Match

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP).—Dr. Lew Jenkins, the specialist in knockout drops, gives Lou Ambers a second injection tonight in Madison Square Garden to see if he can make the first one stick.

The Texas thumper flattened Laughing Lou last May in three rounds, and expects to equal par for the course tonight, although it's scheduled for 10 rounds. For Ambers, it's either reverse that verdict or go back to the laundry in Herkimer, N.Y. Ambers definitely is at the crossroads this time—and Jenkins is the traffic cop.

For this reason, so much interest has been attached to the match that the Garden is going to do a rush business. Promoter Mike Jacobs expects 15,000 customers for a gate of $40,000 to $50,000.

Jenkins, whose only setback since winning Ambers' crown came at the hands of Henry Armstrong, is a 1-to-3 favorite to win and even money to do it the hard way—by putting the crusher on Lou somewhere along the route.

This corner goes along with that idea, picking Jenkins inside of five rounds for no other reason than that Ambers, in his training chores, no longer is the little man who wasn't there. For years he has been noted for his special speed afoot and his lightning head bobbing that would drive attacking enemies daffy missing punches. Without it—if it definitely is gone—Lou changes from one of the best of the boxing lightweights to just another guy named Joe, and, with no more than that faces a fellow who has a brick in one glove and a shillaleh in the other.

Roslin Shades Tweed 6-4

TWEED, Feb. 28—(ENS). — In the third game of the semi-finals of the East Hastings Rural League Roslin Imperials trounced Tweed Terriers 6-4, in a closely contested game. As a result of the win, Roslin now meets Farnsworth Bees for the Dr. Welsh trophy.

Tweed jumped into a two goal lead with G. Geraldi tallying the first foal while Sharpe was serving a penalty. Shanques then soloed.

In the opening minute of play Shanques took the puck in the second period from Sinclair to put the Tweed boys three goals up. Roslin then put on the pressure, with Collins tallying the first Imperial counter, and Garrall taking a pass from Green to make the count 3-2 at the end of the second period.

The Imperials ran wild in the last period, Garrell tallying unassisted. Guay then rapped home a pass from Green, Hart then slid over a pass which Parks rammed into the nets. In a scramble around the Imperials' nets Orr banged in the fourth Tweed counter on a pass from G. Geraldi.

Roslin had the better of the play in the last two periods, and only brilliant net minding by McIlroy kept the count down. When time was called with two minutes to go, when two Roslin players went to the dressing room, the Terriers left the ice and refused to return. On the face-off with no Tweed team on the ice, Roslin raced towards the open net, but failed to score on the final play. Lineups:

Little Farm

Ottawa citizen for a recent editorial which he described as "subversive."

Administration of Mr. Lapointe's department was criticized by M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House leader. He contended too much power was vested in the minister.

Mr. Gardiner revealed Britain asked last fall if Canada could deliver 10,000,000 pounds of butter, offering 21 cents a pound, three cents less than the current price in Canada.

They Preferred Cheese.

"The reply we gave was to the effect that if she needed 10,000,000 pounds of butter we would deliver it to her, even if we had to put our own people on rations to do it," he said. But when British officials were told the sale might curtail the Canadian shipments of cheese they said they would prefer cheese.

Britain would take "at a price" any surplus butter Canada produced, but the Government believed that if the farmer was to get an adequate butter price "it will be necessary for us during this coming year at least—whatever we do next year—to keep our butter production about equal to our butter consumption in Canada and get our cheese production just as high as we can get it."

Mr. Gardiner said he thought the Ontario Government's subsidy of two cents a pound on cheese was "a move in the right direction and it will probably get cheese production where it ought to be." Ontario produced 70 per cent. of all Canadian cheese. With the bonus the Ontario farmer was getting "approximately what he asked for," somewhere between 17 and 18 cents a pound.

But Mr. Gardiner said he would hesitate to suggest a subsidy on cheese across Canada to raise the price to "say 19 cents a pound." The result would be to induce people in certain areas not particularly suitable for cheese production to go into cheese, and he did not think a price of 19 cents a pound could be maintained over any long period in peacetime.

2 Years' Supply of Wheat.

Canada has something over 500,000,000 bushels of wheat in store and without this year's production that was at least two years' supply for the Dominion, Great Britain and the other countries to which there might be any chance of exports "unless something happens in the course of the war."

"So there is no reason for saying to-night that we should increase the production of wheat in Canada. Possibly there is some reason for saying that we should reduce production....during the coming year ....I think it would be advisable.

"But I would not be at all sure that two or three years from now someone could not get up in this House and say I had made a mistake in giving that advise."

Not Calling For More Hogs

Mr. Gardiner said no one in his department is asking farmers to produce more hogs at present. The existing agreement with Britain called for 425,000,000 pounds of bacon and ham for delivery this year. Since the beginning of the contract deliveries had been about 3,000,000 pounds a week over the contract. Britain was taking 1,000,000 pounds extra and 2,000,000 pounds was going into storage.

Mr. Lapointe, replying to Mr. Coldwell's contention that he had too much power, said discretion was necessary to Canada's internal defence against spies, saboteurs and agitators. If the House lacked confidence in the way the discretion was exercised, the remedy was to change the man, not to withdraw the discretion. In this Mr. Lapointe was supported by Conservative House Leader Hanson and Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South).

"I believe we have applied these laws and regulations with calmness and discretion," said Mr. Lapointe. "We have not yielded to hysteria."

Mr. Coldwell insisted the powers wielded by the minister, his legal advisers and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are "the antithesis of British and Canadian democracy. Every accused person, organization or newspaper should have the right to a hearing before a competent and impartial tribunal, the findings of which would be binding on the Department of Justice. As matters stand, he said, the minister is not bound to act on the recommendations of the tribunal which hears appeals from interned persons.

Many Secrets Known

Mr. Lapointe said "there are things with which the secret service of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Minister of Justice are acquainted which could not be given to the public.

Mr. Lapointe said no man was interned because he belonged to a trade union or was a trade union official. Some members of trade unions were interned because they were Communists from their ranks.

"We know from our records in the secret service that instructions have been given to their members by the heads of Communist party to join other associations and organizations to try to spread their ideas and to sabotage the war effort of Canada," said Mr. Lapointe. "They were even instructed to join the army."

Several members, including Thomas Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) and Mr. Green said they wondered if it was not time to appoint a solicitor-general to relieve Mr. Lapointe of part of his work.

Mr. Lapointe said the matter had been considered but so far it had not been thought necessary. The work of enforcing the defence of Canada regulations was becoming less onerous as dangerous persons were interned and their appeals finally dealt with.

During his afternoon address Mr. Coldwell charged the government with failure to prosecute subversive actions in high places and mentioned the citizen editorials as an example. He also asked the government what action would be taken against the Financial Post of Toronto which had been described in the House Wednesday by Munitions Minister How as "No. 1 saboteur in Canada."

Means To Charge "Citizen"

Mr. Lapointe did not discuss the Financial Post but he said Mr. Coldwell was right in that the Citizen editorial was "a subversive article." "They will have to answer for it before the courts of the country," he said.

The discussion on the justice department operations took place partly on Mr. Lapointe's estimates and partly on motion to set up a special committee to review the defence of Canada regulations, along the same lines as the committee which functioned last year.

Indications were that Fisheries Minister Michaud might be chairman of the committee as he is the only minister nominated to it.

Debate on the motion to appoint the committee was adjourned in mid-afternoon and the rest of the sitting was devoted to estimates.

On these Mr. Lapointe re-affirmed his intention to appoint a commission to administer the penitentiaries under the act passed in 1939. Conservative Leader Hanson chided the minister on not acting sooner and suggested the commission plan could now be dropped permanently.

Mr. Lapointe told the House at one point that he had recommended pay increases for Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables. Many members expressed support for his recommendation.

"Pay a Disgrace"

Arthur Slaght (Lib., Parry Sound) said the pay of constables was "a disgrace to offer men who serve in that force." The men had to be highly trained specialists in many ways and perfect physically.

W. Ross MacDonald (Lib., Brantford) approved the move for higher pay, but said the House should remember the constables were sure of their wages 365 days a year, that they received uniforms and other perquisites and were pensioned at the end of their service.

"What about our private soldier?" he asked. "In the last war he received $1.10 a day and now he is more fortunate—he makes $1.30 a day."

"Not enough," shouted George Cruickshank (Lib., Fraser Valley).

Mr. MacDonald said it was all right to consider higher pay for R.C.M.P. constables, but at the same time consideration should be given to the pay of private soldiers.

Arthur Roebuck (Lib., Toronto-Trinity) said it was wrong to compare the R.C.M.P. with soldiers or day laborers who worked only part time. He said the soldiers referred to were not making the army their life work.

"But they are saving our lives," Mr. Cruickshank said.

"Some of them will give their lives," Mr. Roebuck said, but he stressed that they were not in the army as a lifetime career. He was "amazed" to learn how little the constables were being paid.

Mr. Lapointe during the discussion said the estimates under consideration provide for a total R.C.M.P. strength of 2,515, but he said he believed that under the War Appropriation Act the force had 2,000 special constables, and out of an increase of 500 new members the force had enlisted so far 250. The total force would be about 4,700.

charges of disorderly conduct in beverage rooms were "an unwarranted slur on the working classes."

Mr. Acres suggested that beverage rooms should not have chairs and tables, but that men and women be allowed to have their drinks standing up "and then they'll go home." He also suggested hotels be allowed to sell liquor and wines.

Col. T. L. Kennedy (Con. Peel) opened debate, stressing the necessity of co-operation between Federal, Provincial and municipal governments if farming were to be extricated from its "terrific mess." Neither Premier Hepburn nor Conservative Leader George Drew were present.

The Government Rate

Both Col. Kennedy and Mr. Acres said the farm labor situation was aggravated by the fact that hourly wages of 50 cents were being paid on government contracts calling for ordinary laborers. Mr. Acres criticized the government's plan to release secondary - school students early to enable them to accept farm work.

"School children just can't do the work, and to take them for main labor was useless."

Mr. Acres also touched on the Sirois report and his stand differed from that of Col. Drew, who criticized, in opening the debate Tuesday, the Ontario delegates for "running away" and "scuttling" the Dominion-Provincial Conference on the report at Ottawa last month. "If we had a good premier of Ontario he wouldn't have stayed there two hours, let alone two days," said Mr. Acres, adding that the report was a peacetime measure and should never have been considered during the war.

Switching to hydro matters, Mr. Acres said that the chairman of the Hydro Commission, Dr. T. H. Hogg, was an engineer and should be working in that capacity. He said the commission was not independent of the government because two of its members, Hon. William Houck (Lib. Niagara Falls) and J. Albert Smith (Lib. Waterloo North) were members of the legislature.

In his speech, Lamport condemned speeches by Henry Ford and Col. Charles Lindbergh on the war and called the American automobile manufacturer "a black-hearted American Quisling." He said the Federal government should take measures to see that Ford did not receive "one penny of profit" from his Canadian interests.

Exiled Alfonso

He declared again and again, "I will never abandon my throne." His hope and prediction were that some day he would return.

He Finally Yields.

His final yielding, dated January 15, 1941, was a renunciation of the throne in favor of his third son, Don Juan. This announcement was issued February 13 when he already was under treatment at a Rome hotel for a heart condition.

For days Alfonso's condition wavered between "grave" and "slightly improved." On Thursday night he took a definite turn for the worse.

Alfonso was the posthumous son of Alfonso XII and was under the regency of his mother, Queen Maria Cristina, until at 16 he ascended the throne. He was married May 31, 1906, to the British Princess, Victoria Eugenia of Battenberg.

The wedding cost $10,000,000 but the day was marred by the first of eight attempts on Alfonso's life. A bomb, hidden in a bouquet, was thrown at the royal carriage after the wedding ceremony, and 24 bystanders were killed. A splinter hit the King.

Alfonso and his wife were estranged for many years but she was with him today when he died.

For years they had appeared together only in such public ceremonies as weddings of their children and the baptism of their grandchildren.

Alfonso was something of a playboy, with a fondness for dancing, polo, bull-fights, yachting and fast driving.

Tragedy stalked his family.

His eldest son, Alfonso, Prince of Asturias and Count of Covandonga, died in Miami in 1938 after an automobile accident. He was a victim of haemophilia, hereditary affliction marked by the failure of blood to coagulate. His youngest son, Prince Gonzalo, bled to death in 1934 after minor injury in an automobile accident in Austria.

His second son, Prince Jaima, was born deaf. Because of this affliction, Jaime renounced his rights to the succession. There also were two daughters, Princess Beatrice and Princess Maria Cristina.

Phone Exchange Burns

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 28.—(CP). — Brockville's fire-fighting equipment was called at 8:30 a.m. today to the village of Mallorytown, 12 miles west of Brockville on Highway No. 2, to lend assistance against a serious outbreak which then had burned the telephone exchange.

A double house owned by the Mallorytown Telephone Co., Ltd., in which the exchange was situated, was destroyed and considerable damage resulted to an adjoining residential premises.

No Insurance With Axis Firms

LONDON, Feb. 28.—(CP Cable.) —Regulations designed to make it impossible for goods exported from the United Kingdom to be insured with enemy companies and to limit further the amount of foreign exchange available to the Axis were announced last night.

Under an order issued by the Ministry of Economic Warfare, the Board of Trade and the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, certificates of origin and other documents will be refused for goods insured with enemy companies. The regulations are expected to become effective within six weeks.

The right of neutrals to insure their goods with whatever company they prefer remains unchanged, but if the insured ships goods of benefit to the enemy, Britain will refuse them "passports" which give them benefit of British control of the seas.

Ships bacling necessary documents will find difficulty in obtaining supplies and facilities in British-controlled ports.

War Savings Drive Goes Over Top

MAIN STREET TOPICS

WINNERS OF DRAW

The following were the winners of St. Peter's hockey club draw on Tuesday: (1) Dick O'Brien, 636 Union street; (2) Kenneth Gibson, 481 Albert street.

GATES DAMAGED.

NEW LOCATION.

Another Peterborough business has moved on to Charlotte street, with Elcombe and Grottick opening up their electrical sales shop at 196 Charlotte street. The shop was formely at 547 George street.

ELECTED TO RED CROSS

Miss Emma Morrow of Peterborough and D. McQuarrie of Lindsay are amongst those who were elected to the executive committee of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross Society at the annual meeting in Toronto today. Mrs. Wallace R. Campbell of Windsor was elected president succeeding Col. J. A. Cooper of Toronto.

DARE-DEVIL FLIERS

Many citizens commented on the devil-may-care style of flying exhibited by the Norwegian fliers who were seen in action over this city yesterday. In several sections of the city, they flew very low, so Paige Rowell, manager of the Dominion Life had this comment to make when he met Gordon S. Matthews: "If you bring those Norwegian fliers down here again, tell them not to fly so low through my back lane, I'm afraid they might upset the garbage cans."

BANK CLEARINGS

Clearings passing through the Peterborough Clearing House in February amounted to $2,247,126, while for the same month in 1940 the total was $2,281,055.

SKI TOURNEY PLANS

The Peterborough Ski Club members are planning a club tournament in the near future. The events, it is reported, will include cross country racing, downhill, and slalom, and jumping.

SKIDS INTO CAR.

Oliver Glaspell, 286 Park Hill Road, reported to police yesterday that while driving south on George street his car skidded and struck the rear of another automobile that had stopped at Hunter street. The other driver did not report and his identity was unknown to Mr. Glaspell.

ICE CUTTING STARTS

The Allin Ice Company started the usual ice cutting operation on the Trent Canal on Thursday afternoon and seven trucks are busy hauling the blocks to the ice houses this morning. The ice measures close to 21 inches in thickness, and sixteen men are working at the unloading with an equal number cutting on the canal.

HEARD ON THE AIR

Quite a few people in the city were pleased last night when listening to a British Broadcasting Company, overseas broadcast to hear acknowledgment of War Victims Fund money from this city. The announcer voiced the thanks of the Lord Mayor of London for the fourth contribution of £500, bringing the total from the local fund to £2,000.

THE LARGEST ONE YET

Mr. Maurice Holt, manager of the Household Finance Company, was given a ride by his colleagues on the Kinsmen Club Thursday night because the neon sign outside their new suite of offices on Charlotte street is the largest neon of the new two color type in the city. It helps to smarten up this fast growing business section and has been in place now for several weeks.

SUFFERS LEG INJURY.

When the car in which she was a passenger collided with another automobile, Madeleine Whaley, 336 McDonnel street, received a cut in the leg. Both cars were damaged. The accident happened as W. S. Johnston, 465 McDonnel street, was driving west on McDonnel street. Between Aylmer and Bethune street his automobile skidded in a rut and met in collision with an eastbound machine driven by Don Sproule, 190 Stewart street. No one else was hurt in the crash.

FAST SERVICE

Harold Ephgrave, who has the general contract to repair the damage done by the recent fire in the Bridgeway Building and Charibond Apartments is doing a fine job. It is just two weeks since the fire, but in that time, complete repairs have been made to the roof, to the apartments, and to the ceiling, and the first coat of plaster is on. All rewiring is also completed and it looks as if the job will be finished in record time.

ANOTHER BATTLE LOOMS

Ivan Fletcher and a few other bus drivers in the city and district are brewing a little pot of trouble for the police department hockey team. The bus drivers hope to interest a bunch of truck drivers and all the bus drivers in a hockey game, and if they can secure the support of a sufficient number of huskies, they will challenge the police to a game at the Brock, with the proceeds going to the British War Victims' Fund.

GIFTS FROM MAYOR

Mayor Hamilton presented the members of the council last night with copies of Daphne du Maurier's book "Come Wind, Come Weather," which Alderman Sands described as a series of short stories reflecting the spirit of the British people in standing up to the German bombing raids. "Seven cents of the twenty-five cent price for each book is to be turned into the fund for the relief of British war victims," Alderman Sands said. Miss du Maurier is broadcasting from a bomb shelter Saturday evening over CBC.

7,200 Pledges Reported; More To Come

Peterborough continued to set the pace for Ontario cities today in war work when it was announced at ten o'clock this morning that the drive for 7,000 War Savings Certificate subscribers had gone over the top by 200 and this in the face of incomplete returns in every division, retail, industrial and the house-to-house. The report from the suburban area of North Monaghan was still to be tabulated and added to the total, and Doug. Hammond reported returns from that section were on the same high standard as that shown in the city.

It was a magnificent effort and particular credit goes to the citizens as the War Savings Certificate drive came on the heels of the Community Chest drive for $85,000 which was oversubscribed by more than $45,000. The objective in this latest campaign was high, yet when complete returns are in it is expected the total will run considerably above the 7,200 mark already established, indicating beyond all doubt that Peterborough as a community has no equal for patriotism across the Continent.

How Pledges Divided.

At ten o'clock this morning the big thermometer in front of the committee rooms had reached the 7,200 mark and the total consisted of the following pledges: Bank pledges, 181; retail pledges, 1,401; industrial, 4,995, and honor pledges, 523. It is believed that the industrial division is 98 per cent. complete, while the retail division and the women's division are both about 80 per cent. finished. Complete reports from all campaign captains and ward chairmen are expected in the office before ten o'clock tonight, so that a complete report may be compiled.

Another Factory Bats 1,000.

This morning another of the larger factories in the city reported that the employees were pledged 100 per cent. to buy War Savings Certificates, and this was more or less of a formality, the reporting of it, for this factory, the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, has been in the War Savings Stamp business since last July. At that time a system of weekly sales was introduced for the convenience of the employees and sales have been increasing steadily ever since. There are about 240 employees in this plant and about two-thirds of the number are girls. The Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, better known as the Bonner-Worth, was the first factory in the city to start a program of selling for the benefit and convenience of the workers.

G. Whitaker and Co., wool importers, with 25 employees, reported 100 per cent. pledged, along with the Peterborough Examiner, which has 42 employees, all signed up as regular war savers. The Regent Theatre staff was another to come into the hall of fame.

R. E. Layfield, hard working industrial division chairman, was busy on the phone picking up a few loose ends of his work, and he expected that by night a complete report of the entire factory division would be available. He has been one of the busiest workers in the drive, and has been given wonderful co-operation by the heads of the various factories throughout the city.

Gordon S. Matthews and his right hand man, Ross Dobbin, with Chris Hughes, head of the Retail Division, were keenly appreciative of the spirit shown by citizens in the city, in all walks of life.

Home On Leave

Aircraftsman C. Gordon Kennedy who is now serving in the R.C.A.F., is training at the Technical Training School at St. Thomas. Gordon was formerly employed by the Peterborough Canoe Co. He played solo cornet in the local Salvation Army Band and is now playing in the Air Force Band. He is spending his leave with his wife and son, Robert Gordon of 694 Stewart street.

Business Associates Of C.G.E. Give Banquet To C. S. Salmonsen

A farewell dinner was given in honor of C. A. Salmonsen, works manager of the Canadian General Electric on the eve of his departure from Peterborough by business associates of the Company at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club on Thursday night.

R. J. Murray of Atlas Steels Ltd. acted as toastmaster and after a toast to the King expressed the appreciation of all those who were acting as host of the evening for the kind consideration they had always received at the Peterborough plant due to the policy established by Mr. Salmonsen in seeing that outside business representatives received every courtesy. He then called on Charles Westbrooke to take the chair.

Mr. Westbrooke in a speech sparkling with wit one moment and deep sincerity the next said that Mr. Salmonsen was a fisherman who after getting his count and a few over, mostly undersize, could always find time to do something good among the children of the countryside. He was more than a fisher of fishes, he was a big brother to the boy, a big brother to the big brother and if a text was in order it would be, "Think not because no man sees such things will remain unseen."

Memory Of Friendship

Mr. Westbrook congratulated Mr. Salmonsen on being chosen for the responsible position he was about to fill. While regretting his departure the loss would be moulded with the memory of his friendship and good will which was a gain for all time. In conclusion he asked Mr. Salmonsen to accept from the hosts of the evening a box of fish hooks and bait which in reality was a handsome Pullman wardrobe trunk and a pen and pencil set.

Mr. Salmonsen in thanking the gentlemen said that the friendships formed among his business associates was something he would never forget. He had established a policy at the plant whereby a representative of an outside concern could meet and discuss his product with the party directly interested, this had resulted in an interchange of ideas which had proved beneficial to both the vendor and purchaser.

At this juncture Mr. Salmonsen walked over to I. F. McRae who was seated at the head table and said I wish to introduce to you my successor from whom you can expect the same courtesy and consideration you received from me. They both stood clasping hands while those assembled cheered lustily.

The proceeding concluded with the singing of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow".

The guests: From the Canadian General Electric Co., Messrs G. C. Solmes, W. C. English, J. Knights, I. F. McRae, J. F. Reed, W. Rogers, J. E. Girven, A. Spicer, Alex McGregor, L. Vass, C. D. 1941 Tax Rate Is Further Cut By Half A Mill

Peterborough's 1941 tax rate will be a full mill less than last year when the council puts its final stamp on it next Monday night.

The half-mill cut previously recommended this week, lowering the rate from 33 mills last year to 32.5, had been accepted as a satisfactory accomplishment for the benefit of the taxpayers. On the strength of the Ontario Government's undertaking to assume 75 per cent. of the cost of relief this year it was decided by the Finance Committee on Thursday night to clip off the odd half-mill, leaving the new rate at 32 mills.

When the Federal Government decided some weeks ago to discontinue its relief assistance to the provinces, the local committee had no intimation as to what contribution the Hepburn government would be able to make in carrying on alone. The Dominion authorities contended that the Federal employment insurance which is expected to come into effect this year, and the great increase in industrial expansion were factors which did not warrant their continuance of relief grants.

$29,000 In Estimates.

Peterborough's relief committee included in its budget the sum of $29,000 for relief needs this year. This was estimated on the basis that the Ontario government would pay half the cost and the city the rest. The former arrangement was 20 per cent. by the local municipality, 40 per cent. by the province and 40 per cent. by the Federal Government.

Premier Hepburn met the members of the Ontario Mayors' Association more than half-way on Wednesday in his statement that the province would pay 75 per cent. of relief costs this year, leaving 25 per cent. to be borne by the municipalities, an increase to them of only 5 per cent.

Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Dutton brought the news back from Toronto, and the Finance Committee last night decided that the additional half-mill advantage should be passed on to the ratepayers immediately. Alderman Gordon's motion, seconded by Alderman Bradburn, directed City Solicitor Huycke to prepare a new bylaw to be passed at the regular meeting of the council Monday night striking the rate at 32 mills. Incidentally, three-tenths of a mill will be taken from the relief rate and two-tenths from the general rate, an allocation that does not affect the taxpayers in any way. Assessment for relief purposes includes all properties, without exemptions.

A Final Appeal.

The Finance Committee went further afield in their last swing over the budget, and in a motion by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman Ovens, asked the Board of Education to reduce their requisition by $4,000, an amount which they included in their demand to meet an anticipated cut in the Provincial Government's grant this year.

Alderman Gordon declared that he was reasonably assured the government was going to continue its school grant on last years basis, and the Board of Education, for that reason, should not be asking the people to raise even $4,000 that was not going to be needed.

Alderman Dutton was framing a resolution to the effect that "we respectfully suggest," etc....

"Leave the respectfully out," Alderman Gordon remarked.

It was pointed out that the School Trustees did not meet until Thursday night.

"Is there any reason they can't hold a special meeting," Alderman Roy enquired, rhetorically.

"We ought to put a red label on the tax bill, pointing out to the people that the Board of Education is responsible for an increase of 1½ mills in the school rate this year," Alderman Gordon suggested.

"I don't like that at all," Alderman Dutton protested, and Mayor Hamilton also said it sounded too provocative.

"You know how they do up there," Alderman Gordon said to Alderman Dutton. "You've been on the Board. There's one fellow running the property committee and the others are falling for it, hook, line and sinker."

$20,548 For Relief.

The new relief scale of payments does not come into effect until April 1, the beginning of the government's fiscal year.

In the new arrangement Peterborough's estimate for relief is reduced from approximately $29,000 to $20,854, a reduction of around $8,000.

Then the Finance Committee dipped into its $13,000 miscellaneous account and took out something in excess of $4,000. That provided about $12,000, the equivalent of half a mill which the committee decided not to ask from the ratepayers. Alderman Bradburn said half a mill was something more than $11,200.

This expedient leaves $8,500 in the miscellaneous account, and Alderman Bradburn said he believed it was sufficient. In 1939 the miscellaneous appropriation was $8,093 and the amount spent was only $1,856.

And last year the appropriation was $13,641, and the council used only $3,727.

Hospital Board Requires Vote Of $20,000

The Finance committee of the Council refused Thursday night to assume the responsibility of recommending the appropriation of an additional sum of $10,000 for an extension to the Nicholls Hospital without obtaining the assent of the ratepayers.

A resolution by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman Ovens, proposing that a bylaw be prepared submitting the question to the qualified ratepayers was adopted with the following support: Aldermen Gordon, Ovens, Bradburn, Swanston, Sands and Curtis.

Aldermen Dutton and Roy voted against it.

The request of the Nicholls Hospital Board was presented by a deputation headed by Frank Kitney, chairman of the special extension committee.

"We had in mind at the outset the building of a temporary addition that would accommodate 25 beds," Mr. Kitney said. "The idea came from the army hospital at the Exhibition grounds. The building was to be 32 feet by 100 feet, good for four or five years, constructed and equipped at a cost of $10,000. However, the Department of Health demanded certain utilities. We have tried to cut down cost and keep within the amount which the Municipal Board decided we could have without taking a vote of the people. But, this would reduce the number of beds. Your committee are agreed that anything less than 25 beds would be a mistake.

To erect a building costing more than $5,000 it must be supervised by an architect. Mr. Blackwell has prepared plans for a 26 bed wing, and added the needed utilities called for by the department. This building would be 40 feet by 102 feet, and is approximately 25 per cent larger, would be of better construction and could be used for 10 to 20 years longer, if needed. This would increase our hospital bed capacity by 25%.

We have been able to look after our free and public ward patients fairly well. It has been our private and semi-private patients we have had to turn away."

The original proposal for a temporary addition, Mr. Kitney told the the committee, grew out of the superintendent's monthly report, calling attention to the number of persons who had to be turned away every month, and also from a letter by Dr. Cameron requesting the Hospital Trust to do something about it.

May Abandon Plan

Referring to the action of the Finance committee, Mr. Kitney told The Examiner this afternoon it would probably result in the Hospital Board deciding to abandon the project of a temporary extension.

"I think I can speak for the extension committee," he said, "in stating that if the Council does not provide this additional $10,000 without taking a vote of the qualified ratepayers we will not go any further with the matter. We have given it a great deal of attention this winter. It is certainly not our fault that we could not confine the expenditure to $10,000 as we had hoped. The Department of Health told us we had to do certain things, and we simply could not do them with only $10,000 to spend. Personally, I do not want to go through any campaigning to get this extra money, and I certainly would not want to lay out any money at all for that purpose. We feel that we are simply doing our duty, and if the Council does not wish to endorse what we propose after months of thought and effort, I cannot see what more we can do."

The Gordon-Ovens resolution was an amendment to a motion by Alderman Dutton, seconded by Alderman Roy, that the Council recommend the issuing of $20,000 debentures for the projected extension to the hospital without submitting the question to the protestant ratepayers of the city.

How much would the vote on the by-law cost?" Alderman Dutton enquired.

Alderman Dutton argued that the construction of this addition would no doubt halt the demand for a new hospital for many years. He said the cost spread over ten years would not be much of a burden on any one.

Mayor Hamilton, presiding, said he would vote for the Dutton-Roy motion if he were not "in the chair."

"They got us part way into the water with the first $10,000, and now they want to push us all the way in," Alderman Gordon said. He contended that the Board had not adjusted upwards its rates for private wards which, he said, ought to be $7 or $8 a day because they were used by people who could afford to engage them at that rate.

Mayor Hamilton said the Hospital charge was $35 a week for some of the private wards, and he considered that was about all that could reasonably be charged.

"They say only the poor and the rich can go to hospitals nowadays," Alderman Roy remarked.

Alderman Gordon said Kingston General Hospital had steadily adjusted its rates upward until "they nearly break even." No one expects that a hospital can make any profit these days.

Jack W. Allen, son of Wesley Allen of Peterborough, who is with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders. Jack is at present at home on what is believed to be his last leave before going overseas.

45 Engineers' Home On Leave

The second section of the members of the 3rd Field Park Company, R.C.E., who have been given furlough on what is rumored to be their last leave, arrived in Peterborough Thursday evening. Numbering 45, the men who returned in this group have been busy looking up other member of their unit who preceded them, and acquainting them with happenings in the camp since they left.

Debert, the home of the Engineers for the past few months has changed much since their arrival, and more men from Peterborough are now there. The S. D. and G. Highlanders are station within five minutes walk of the Engineers, and the 4th Anti-Tank Battery which recently left Lindsay is little farther away.

School Donates $20.00 In Aid Of War Victims

Immaculate Conception School in Ashburnham sent along the largest single contribution received so far from any primary school in the district for the Peterborough British War Victims Fund, when they handed over $20 and today the total climbed to $9,584.45, just $415 short of the $10,000 which is hoped will be raised by Saturday noon.

Last night at the Kinsmen Club banquet every member of the club was asked a question, and if he failed to answer it cost him a quarter, then somebody stole Dr. Bill Gordon's pipe and this was raffled off at 5 cents a throw raising more money. The quarters were used to buy War Savings Stamps and when they filled a certificate Vern Selkirk handed over $4.00 for the certificate. Altogether they raised $5.70 and this was sent up to the fund. The Men's Club of St. George's Anglican Church sent along a donation of $6 and a group of ladies whose spokesman is Mrs. Thomas F. McArthur handed over $35 to the fund today. This group has made several substantial donations since the fund came into existence early in December.

F. G. Mann, fund treasurer, announced today that the silver tea service donated by Mrs. David MacPhail is on display in the Examiner and further information on this gift will be made on Saturday.

This morning official acknowledgment of the fourth £500 donation came by telegraph from the Lord Mayor of London, England and reads as follows: "The Mayor, Peterborough: Gratefully acknowledge generous new gift my air raid fund, citizens Peterborough. Please give them my renewed thanks and congratulations their splendid efforts for alleviation distress air raid victims." Signed, Lord Mayor, London.

The money turned in by the Immaculate Conception School has a story behind it. The pupils under the direction of the teachers made an Afghan and a large cushion, then the pupils sold tickets at a dime a throw or three for a quarter, and almost $100 was raised. This money was split up between the War Victims Fund, the Red Cross and parish charities, and all in all the pupils and teachers deserve credit for a nice piece of work. The draw for the prize was made last Friday night in the Community Hall in Ashburnham and was won by W. H. Hubbard, 710 George street.

763 Planes Aided Franco Rome Bill Shows

ROME, Feb. 28 (CP) — Stefani published a "balance sheet" on the Spanish war aid which Mussilini promised in his speech last Sunday. It included these claims, for which Italy presented a bill to General Franco Sunday.

Italy sent Spain 763 planes for use in Italian squadrons and Gen. Francisco Franco's own air force, along with 1,414 motors, 1,672 tons of bombs, and 9,250,000 rounds of ammunition for them.

For land forces Italy sent 1,930 cannon, 10,135 automatic guns, 240,747 small arms, 7,514,537 rounds of artillery ammunition, 324,900,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, and 7,668 motor vehicles.

Ninety-one Italian warships were engaged in Spanish war actions while 92 steamships ferried the material.

Franco returned all the warships to Italy after the war with the exception of two submarines, four destroyers and four armed boats, which were ceded to Spain.

(Official totals of Italian casualties in the Spanish civil war were given as: 3,132 killed and 10,765 wounded, of whom 2,000 were permanently disabled. These included aviation casualties of 175 killed and 193 wounded).

Claim Nazis Use New Type Mine

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Feb. 28—(CP).—The Germans have developed a new type of mine, exploded by the vibrations of a ship's propeller, the first officer of a freighter in port here said yesterday.

He said the new mine was brought into use after the British began using the De Gausse nullifier, which killed the effectiveness of the magnetic mine.

"The British will solve this, too," he predicted.

The officer, whose ship left Norway just before the German invasion of that country, claimed also the Nazis were camouflaging some of their planes to resemble British Spitfires.

On one occasion, he said, he was in a convoy guarded by two Spitfires when a third plane approached. Of much the same shape, it had been painted to resembled the famous British fighter.

The British pilots discovered the ruse and shot the intruder down within 100 yards of his ship.

Three Former Hart House Artists Present 'Town Tonics' For Y's Men

Mirth, drama and burlesque at its best were skilfully blended in a gay revue that brought forth chuckle after chuckle of appreciation from the audience who witnessed the "Town Tonics" presentation by three former Hart House artists Thursday night in the Collegiate Auditorium. Versatile to the last degree, the three members of the cast were adept at pantomine that can only be attempted with success by finished artists, and an opening parody on a treasurer's report done by Frederic Manning put the audience immediately into a responsive mood.

Although she provoked much hilarity with her imitation of a youngster playing publicly at the piano after a year of five-finger exercises, France Adaskin is actually a serious musician, and the wife of Harry Adaskin, one-time member of the Hart House Quartette. Her musical ability was later displayed in compositions by Mozart and Debussy.

Jane Mallett, widely experienced in radio work, did an excellent bit of comedy in "Brides Can't Sneeze," depicting the emotions of a bride on her way to church to clinch a sound financial marriage. Other highlights of the performance included "The Dance Recital" when the children take uncle (Frederic Manning) for a ride; "The Gay Nineties," picturing the old parlor evenings when the guests obliged with a piano solo, song or recitation, and "The Music Box," when the prima donna does an encore.

It was Frederic Manning's inspiration, during the depression to present humor in this form to Toronto audiences, and Mrs. Mallett assisted in the venture, which has been successfully produced for the past seven years, Mrs. Adaskin joining the pair later. It was not until this fall that they began playing in outside places, when they toured cities from Windsor to Montreal, always finding receptive audiences. Mr. Manning is also a musician, and has appeared in Peterborough as a stage singer.

The program was under the auspices of the Peterborough Y's Men's Club, and a welcome was extended on behalf of members by the president, John R. Stuart. Proceeds will go towards the promotion and maintenance of the recently acquired boys' camp at Clear Lake.

Germans Boast To Bolster Fading Italians

(By KIRKE E. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP).—German claims that more than 300,000 tons of shipping has been destroyed in the Atlantic within a span of days still lack confirmation.

If they prove true, it would be a jarring blow to Britain, not not decisive. If they prove false or greatly exaggerated, it would raise a question as to just why Berlin put them out at this time. It might give a more definite indication of what the Germans actually intend to do in the Balkans.

British spokesmen have not gone beyond the statement that nothing out of the ordinary has happened recently in the war at sea. However, there is an element of denial of the Nazi versions to be found in other circumstances.

First word of the claimed German sea raid last February 14 came from United States radio listening-posts, not from London or Berlin. They reported hearing a prolonged flurry of distress signals, and even a message saying that a powerful Nazi surface warship was in action. No such radio reports support the present German claims.

Britain has announced the loss of five out of nineteen ships in the February 14 action. She said ten ships were safely in port and four others still at sea, but not overdue. Berlin claimed fourteen were sunk.

Britain Has Facts

The Germans still cling to their original version. They can only guess at the results, however, while British officials certainly know exactly what happened.

What seems most probable is that Berlin deliberately exaggerated for propaganda purposes, and may be doing worse than exaggerating now for the same reason. Just what reason might be can only be conjectured, but it could have to do with the shaping of Nazi Balkan policy.

German delay in actually marching to Italy's aid is becoming possibly significant. In the face of the extensive and widely advertized Nazi preparations for such a move, it does not seem possible that weather alone is holding up the predicted Nazi thrust across Bulgaria or Yugoslavia.

It is also quite clear that Britain is taking every advantage of the German delay. She is making both military and diplomatic moves of vital importance. These are illustrated by the Eden conferences in Turkey and British seizure of a possibly useful Italian island on the Turkish side of the Aegian Sea.

No Gestures to East

Yet Britain continues to stress sea warfare as the road to victory. It becomes increasingly significant that Hitler, in this recent talk to the Nazi faithful, made no threatening gestures eastward, except to claim that Germany would be ready to meet her foes on any front.

The Balkan crisis is so acute, however, that it seems impossible that a definite break there can be long delayed, whether it comes as a German march to Italy's aid or as a clarification of the course Turkey and possibly Russia might elect to take in that event. Not until Germany actually moves can it be certain that all her manoeuvring in the Balkans is not primarily defensive, and designed to ensure protection of all Rumanian oil sources, not to aid Italy.

If that is Nazi policy, smoking up claims of staggering sea losses being inflicted on Britain might be understandable. It might be designed to convince the defeat-shocked Italian public that it is in the west, not the east, that the Axis war with Britain can be won most certainly and quickly.

New Jap Venture?

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(CP).—Advices received from the Orient today indicate Japan may be about to make another major diplomatic move, perhaps rivalling in importance her adherence to the German-Italian alliance last Sept. 27.

This is likely to take the form, the advices say, of a journey abroad by Yosuke Matsouka, Japan's Foreign Minister, in the course of which he may visit one or more of the cities of Hankow, Moscow, Berlin, Rome.

United Kingdom Ace-in-Hole Now In Readiness For Submarine War Against The Axis

LONDON, Feb. 28.—British naval authorities, claiming to have an "ace in the hole" against Adolf Hitler's threat of merciless U-boat warfare this spring, said tonight that both Nazi and Italian submarines are being destroyed at an increasing rate.

The actual Axis U-boat losses thus far in the war were not revealed, but it was indicated that Germany alone has lost more than 100 submarines.

It was said many German submarines undoubtedly were destroyed in the Royal Air Force's recent large-scale attacks on the Nazi submarine bases at Flushing, Lorient and Brest, along the Channel invasion coast.

"It is difficult accurately to gauge the damage of air raids, but the fact that the R.A.F. has heavily plastered the submarine bases, and the fact that U-boats are known to have been based there would lead to the reasonable assumption that some of these submarines were sunk," an authoritative naval quarter said.

"The types of bombs used by the R.A.F. certainly would sink a submarine hit by them."

The British Admiralty is taking Hitler at his word and is confident that the Nazi submarine offensive will reach its peak this spring and summer.

"But the British Navy also possesses an 'ace in the hole,'" it was stated in high quarters, although no clue was given to the nature of the weapon or weapons awaiting the start of the all-out U-boat warfare.

"Hitler may or may not have hundreds of vest-pocket submarines, but we certainly have an antidote for them," it was said.

"The battle will be long and arduous, but we beat the U-boat menace in 1917 and we have no doubt that we will do it again."

Asked if the recent huge German claims of ship losses had any factual foundation, an authorized spokesman said the German figures had reached "nonsensical proportions" and that "the German propaganda service seems to have gone hay-wire."

"The Germans are just fishing to get our bites," the British spokesman said of the German claims.

Apsley Service Club Aids Bomb Victims

APSLEY, Feb. 28—(ENS).—The Apsley War Service Club met on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Downing and completed a warm quilt, this making four quilts and one crib quilt to be sent to the British bomb victims.

One of the quilts was donated by the Women's Association of the Apsley United Church. Many other articles of children's and adult clothing were also made by the members in their spare time at home. A box of woollens was packed to be sent to the Red Cross. The box contained 13 scarfs, sweaters, many pairs of socks, helmets, mitts and cuffs. The ladies are planning to send another box of clothing in the near future.

Institute Euchre

The Women's Institute sponsored a euchre party on Saturday. Mrs. Roy Brown was the hostess. Four tables of euchre were plaed. Laugh Saves The Day

Toronto, Feb. 28 (CP)

WHEN a German bomb destroyed part of Buckingham Palace last year the King and Queen were leaning from an open window and the concussion was so great that each feared for a moment the other was dead, Mrs. Marcus Dimsdale, noted British war guest in Canada, told Empire Club members here yesterday.

A few minutes later the humorous incident of two little page boys crawling from beneath a table in the Queen's quarters made them laugh, she said.

Argentina has decreed that only government-owned corn may leave the country.

HARDLY A PAIN AT 78

She Feels Like 48

Aches and pains are not inevitable in old age. When they do come, there is always a cause for them. Here is a little lesson on growing old, by a woman of 78:—

"For the last five years I have taken Kruschen Salts and I tell you truthfully I could not live without them. I am 78 years old. I have hardly a pain in my body, and I feel almost as young as I did at 48. I give the credit to Kruschen Salts. No one will believe my age."

—(Mrs.) C. M.

Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually they start the Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in years, they start getting rid every day of all waste matter from the system. They begin to feel energetic and happy. In a word, they've go that "Kruschen Feeling."

A Continuing Challenge!

If we are to keep faith with our armed forces we must not only buy War Savings Certificates regularly, but buy to the limit of our real ability.

Canada's Answer!

It is inspiring to watch the returns from the War Savings Certificates drive piling up day by day. The response is magnificent.

"But we must not flag nor fail in our efforts".

We must not let down for a single day. We must keep on buying. The task is tremendous and our responsibility continues.

Canadians will keep on!

Arts Guild Hears Of English Ware

The life-work of Josiah Wedgwood, the creator of British pottery as an art, was sketched by Mrs. F. W. Burnham Thursday evening at a meeting of the Home Arts Guild. Several Wedgwood pieces were on display, including a tobacco jar 150 years old.

Josiah Wedgewood was born in Staffordshire on July 12, 1730. His father was a potter, and at ten years of age he had been set to work at the same business, although his education was of the scantiest. After an absorbing attempt to settle himself at Stoke with a partner named Harrison in 1759, Wedgwood returned to his native place and there commenced business as a potte.

The history of Wedgwood ware, and an explanation of the stamps which distinguish the various types of pottery, as given by Mrs. Burnham, contained information of value and interest to collectors.

The Guild meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Girven, with Mrs. C. L. Upper and Mrs. B. I. Burgess as co-hostesses.

Daphne du Maurier Will Broadcast

"The Britain Behind the Headlines" will be described by Miss Daphne du Maurier, the brilliant young English novelist, in a radio broadcast from London on Saturday evening, March 1. Thousands of Canadians have been fascinated by her prize-winning novel "Rebecca." They have read the book, seen the film, and will now be able to hear the voice of this well-known author in her first broadcast to Canada.

Daphne du Maurier is the wife of the youngest brigadier in the British Army and mother of three small children. Seeking to use the gifts of her pen for national service, Miss du Maurier has turned from fiction to write true stories of men and women in Britain who have stood firm under fire. She has seen romance in the lives of these loyal workers behind the headlines in Britain—the miners, the housewives, the mothers who have given their sons to serve, the doctors, and the tradesmen, who in following the common daily round, have turned the dangers and difficulties of wartime into opportunities to spread a spirit of victory on the Home Front.

From her experiences with these people she has written her latest book, "Come Wind, Come Weather," which in a few months has become the war's best seller in Britain, and it is of these men and women that she will speak to Canada over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's network on Saturday, March 1, at 7.45 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, March 1.

Very definite and enduring progress may be predicted from the interesting aspects of major planets. This sound and steady growth may be inspired by some surprising or unusual set of circumstances, speedily developed, but calling for decisive action. There may be dramatic moves in such connection although substantial and persistent effort is needed to give firm foundation to whatever brilliant or spectacular plan is involved. The mind and energies are keyed to high creative urges although sound and practical.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which the sound, basic and stable may develop aspects of a dramatic, sudden and surprising swing. Business as well as finances, property, and other real possessions as well as labor, invention and speculative enterprises are under sign of swift or sensational developments. Steady and persistent work may have unlooked for returns. Elders, particularly women, seem influential in this, and an element of romance and adventure are not wanting despite trivial anxieties. Opportunity may incite to change of place and plans.

A child born on this day should be studious, earnest, and responsible although having many extraordinary talents, skills and inventive ingenuity. It will also have tender and humane qualities, and enjoy a happy life.

SEVENTH COMMANDMENT IS STILL THE LAW OF MORALITY

The Price You Pay for Breaking the Law of Civilization Is High, and It Goes On to the End of Your Days.

✧ ✧ ✧

Dear Dorothy Dix—I would like your opinion on a question which I feel troubles many girls today. Should a boy and girl who are in love with each other and who plan to marry have pre-marital relations? I have always felt that this was wrong, but my girl friend, who has gone with many different boys of all types, says boys all feel that if a girl loves a fellow she should give in to his desires. My friend thinks this makes for a happy marriage. This makes me wonder if a girl who goes with a boy steady and intends to marry him is right in living with him as his wife before marriage. Can you clear up this matter for me? JEAN.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER—The Bible is considered such an old-fashioned book and the Ten Commandments such an outmoded document that I don't suppose there is any use in calling the attention of the modern young girl to what it says about committing adultery. However, I should like to remind her that the Seventh Commandment has not been repealed. It still stands, and every woman who breaks it has to pay for it in one way or another. Every mail brings me many letters that are virtually duplicates of yours, written by girls who are still held by the teachings of right and wrong that they have learned at their mothers' knees, but who have come to the parting of the ways when they must choose between their own honor and having dates with boys, and who are misled by other girls who, having soiled their own skirts, wish to drag all other girls into their bedraggled group.

To you and to all these girls I would say this: Putting aside all questions of morality and decency, consider what a poor bargain you make when you become one of the sisterhood of the streets, because you sell out cheaper than they do.

You Always Pay

When you become a man's mistress, whether for love or money, you have no right to draw your skirts away from any harlot. You have broken the law that civilization has imposed upon women from time immemorial, and if your crime is discovered you pay for it with disgrace.

Don't befool yourself into thinking that because women's point of view about chastity may have changed that so has men's. Men may scoff at virtue and tell you that a belief in it has gone into the discard along with other superstitions.

They may tell you that you have a right to your sex life, and that love takes the sin away from an illicit relationship, and that they admire and respect you more for defying the conventions. It is the old line of the seducer.

But back in every man's mind is a contempt for the woman who has no code of honor by which she stands, and when she marries he wants a woman who comes to him virtuous, not one who is second-hand goods.

All Faith Is Gone

You will say that many men do marry their mistresses. True. But if you could see the letters that I get from the men who do, you would know that such marriages are rarely happy. There is always that smudge of blackness on them. The men do not trust their wives because they believe that the woman who has been weak enough to yield to them, will yield to another man under temptation. There is lacking between the husband and wife that respect, that confidence, that is at the bottom of marital happiness.

And the girl, who for the sake of having attention from boys casts her bonnet over the windmill, has a frightful day of reckoning when she has to try to decide whether she has to tell some fine man who wants to marry her, of her past and take a chance on his forgiving her, or bury her secret in her heart and live in constant fear of his finding it out.

In either case it spells misery for her, and I get no sadder letters than I do from girls who write: "Oh, what would I give to be able to go to the man I am going to marry clean, with nothing in my life of which to be ashamed."

Don't Take the Risk

Don't be silly enough to think that because you are in love with a boy and plan to marry him some time in the future that it justifies your entering into a liasion with him. That is too big a risk for any sensible girl to take. More engagements end in a break than do in marriage. You might grow tired of him. He may lose his taste for you.

He may decide when it comes to marrying that he wants a wife whom other women will receive instead of one at whom they will look down their noses. For it is a frightful handicap for a man, both socially and financially, to marry his mistress.

So there you are, girls, and before you take the primrose path consider the subject carefully. If you scorn morality, consider prudence.

• • •

Dear Miss Dix—How valuable an asset do you consider a good knowledge and its use of correct English to the common run of people, such as small merchants, tradesmen, shopkeepers and housewives?

LOU.

ANSWER—The ability to speak correct English is one of the most valuable assets that any one can possess. It is not only a mark of culture, but opens the door of opportunity in business and society.

A man and woman, for instance, applying for a position would have a hundred times the chance of getting it if they spoke and wrote correctly and fluently instead of using uncouth and awkward expressions. And, of course, in many professions, such as secretarial ones, a knowledge of language is imperative.

Parents should see to it that their children have a large vocabulary, and the best way to do this is to make them memorize a column in the dictionary every day.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a boy of 18. There are four of us in our family and we have always loved each other and been very happy until now, but my father has recently been going with another woman. I have seen them together in his car and she calls him on his office 'phone. He doesn't seem infatuated with her, yet she pursues him. I am very fond of Mother and I don't know what to do. Should I tell Mother? X.Y.Z.

ANSWER — No, don't tell your mother. It would only break her heart and do no good. Go to your father and tell him what you know. Tell him how you love him and how it breaks your heart to see him doing such a foolish thing. The thought of losing your respect will stop him, if anything can.

Long Engagements Unfair to Girls

Dear Miss Dix — I am 20 years old and am very much in love with a girl a year older than I am. She is very popular and is one of the old-fashioned "nice" girls, gracious to every one, and although I have tried to make her love me I have never told her of my feelings because I am a junior in college and plan to go to medical school, so it will be at least six years before I can support a wife.

Now shall I take a chance and tell her I love her and ask her to wait for me? Or shall I just keep on being nice to her and hoping that she will not marry somebody else until I am ready to marry? I can't afford to go "steady" because she is so popular and is taken to all the big events and would be cut out of some good times if she confined herself to me. AFRAID.

ANSWER — Of course, when a man tells a woman that he loves her, he pays her the highest compliment of which he is capable, and naturally it is gratifying to her vanity. So, perhaps, the girl rates that. Also, it may settle you emotionally to get the matter off of your mind by bringing it into the open, as the psychologists say.

So, if you want to, tell the girl how you feel about her. But don't involve yourself in a long engagement. If you are just a junior in college, it will be a lot longer than any six years before you finish your medical course, and are making enough money practicing medicine to support a family.

And, in the meantime, you will have changed and the girl will have changed, for time gets in its inevitable work upon us and alters our ideals, our thoughts, our habits, our desires. Your romance will have worn thin and there is every chance in the world that the girl, who will be by then at least 30 years old, will look like an old maid to you and you will wish that you were free to pick out some pretty, young girl who is as fresh as she is now.

A long engagement would not be fair to either you or her. When the chances of your marrying her are so slim, you would not want to keep her from making some advantageous match that she might make while she was young and pretty and popular. Nor would you want to doom her to the dull life she would have if she sat at home with Mama and Papa and waited for you to get ready to marry her.

And it would not be fair to you because if you are a fine, ambitious, young man and want to fit yourself to be a successful doctor, you will need to be able to give all of your thoughts and interests to studying your profession, instead of having them distracted by a love affair.

The president of one of the big universities said the other day that when his students began falling behind in their work, it was nearly always because they were in love and giving their thoughts to some girl.

WE . . . NOTICED

. . . .About the question of waste, and it is a very big one, one woman editor writes: "From various sources lately have come complaints about waste of food in military camps. Women concerned with a study of food in wartime might well investigate such rumors, and if true, help to bring about a better system of serving food to the troops so that waste will not occur—or if not true, kill the rumor.

✧ ✧ ✧

. . . .Of course, this bad habit is not peculiar to our military camps alone. For years it has been a standing reproach to Canadians generally.

✧ ✧ ✧

. . . .We are being told daily not to waste anything. There is no shortage of food in Canada, but we must be prepared for any emergency and we cannot tell from month to month what my be expected of us. There is no good reason why food should ever see the inside of a garbage can.

SAUCE SAUSAGES WHILE FRYING

—You'll give them richer flavour

WHEN sausages are nearly done, add half a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce and a little water. Rock the pan to spread the gravy all over it, then dip up the gravy two or three times and pour over the sausages as they finish cooking. This seasoning with H. P. Sauce, adds a most enjoyable touch of flavour. Makes both pork or beef sausages much tastier. All meats are given a heartier, more relishable flavour if H. P. Sauce is added while cooking or when serving. Being a thick, fruity sauce, H. P. helps you to economize as well as add flavour. With a dash of this sauce you can make tasty dishes from leftovers and from plain, inexpensive foods. Try H. P. Sauce for your next family meal.

"WHY DO YOU CATCH COLD?"

Robt. G. Jackson, M.D. Now in his 83rd year

A cold is evidence of a wrong internal condition. It is Nature's device to throw off poisonous irritants from the body. These irritants we need not have because we do not need to follow the wrong food habits that cause them.

I have had only one cold in 28 years, in England, August 1913, where my living regime was not easily carried out. Formerly I had frequent colds at all seasons.

I have been able to avoid colds since that time because my foods have consisted largely of fruits, vegetables, nuts, milk, my alkaline beverage Kofy Sub and one or another of my three wholegrain cereals, Dr. Jackson Meal (formerly Roman Meal), Bekus-Puddy and Lishus. All these foods have natural protective qualities. They help build resistance, and maintain the system, including elimination in a healthy condition.

If colds attack you frequently, I urge you to give my cereals (any one or all) and my delicious alkaline beverage Kofy Sub a thorough trial . . . a month at least. And include in your diet as many as possible of the natural foods above mentioned. If you are interested in the subject of food and health, send for my free booklet "A Glorious Achievement". CHINA FIGURES

Presented By

"ROYAL DOULTON"

AT

WARNE'S JEWELLERY

People of cultured taste always feel and appreciate the beauty and charm of a finely produced china figure.

The delicate coloring of a picture by Watteau or Fragonard imparts the quality of good taste to a room, and these charming figures in fine bone china are in perfect harmony with such a scheme.

Some of them are in the tradition of Bow and Chelsea, but most happily lack the fussiness and over ornamentation which marked the work of many eighteenth-century potters.

Not elaboration of detail, but freshness of color and simplicity of line are the means by which they achieve this effect. Their very real charm is not in the least finicky, and their facial expression alone is a mark of the highest technical achievement. The flesh tones are delicately soft, rivalling, indeed, the old soft paste.

They are examples of high artistic achievement of workers who have not sacrificed their originality either to factory routine or to traditional conception of what a china figure should be.

Sketch Club Presents Showing Of Pictures

(By JACK HUGHES.)

A host of art enthusiasts gathered in the store of the Richard Hall Company on Thursday night, to view the paintings exhibited in the Annual Showing of Pictures of the Peterborough Men's Sketch Club. More than one hundred pictures of varying degrees of excellence were on display, all having been done by members of the club during the past year.

Each of the various artist's media was represented with the exception of charcoal and tempra, and much interest was evidenced in the work of a group which has been functioning as such for only a few years. Each year their number has been added to, and in most cases the new members have been absolute beginners in this field of endeavour.

Especially Pleasing

With 13 paintings on display, all of them oils, J. E. R. Munro was probably at his best in "Lily Pads," "Mosquito Bay," and "Rain at Lang Mill Pond," although these three were by no means his only meritorious entries. In the mind of one looking for a true expression of form, "Lily Pads" is especially pleasing with its carpet of broad leaves floating on quiet water in the half shadows of trees on the shore.

With a painting in the true "Canadian School" style, Carl S. Browne's "Jackson's Park Pool" indicated a quiet sense of balance and a feeling of restfulness so much to be identified with that familiar summer haunt. In "Snow Flurries," Mr. Browne gives evidence of observation of a typical Canadian winter.

Charles Saunders' paintings, most of them water colors, are fresh to an appetizing degree, and have a clarity becoming the landscape advantages surrounding Peterborough. His "Blitzkrieg Hill," "Burleigh Falls," and "Old Mill" stood out, and a huge painting of a scene familiar to students of history "The Marauders" was inviting. Mr. Saunders explained that this is a copy from a small black and white which he found in a history text book, he was so much engrossed with its atmosphere that he decided to paint it.

Jack Hamer, a comparative newcomer, shows brilliance in the realm of perspective, and his drawings of buildings please in their exactness without being architectural. In his "Buckhorn Church," Mr. Hamer gives the much to be desired feeling of height, and the "Interior Sketch" shows an understanding and appreciation of clearness of statement.

Kawartha Countrysides

Some excellent landscapes of typical countrysides are contained in the paintings of H. Steegles. Most to be noted, probably, are "Gorge at Hall's Lake," and "Rocks at Burleigh."

Paintings with some of the best indication of draughtsmanship are those of Joe Tattersall. "Reflection" and "Cinderella" were among his best, with concise statements of fact being made in each. All through the works of this artist, the ability to draw is manifested, and a pleasant sense of values is evident.

Adrian MacDonald, who returns to his old home, Peterborough, to display his handicraft has some fine portrait work on display. "Debutante" and "Bushman" are probably his best, each having a goodly share of that substantial "fleshy" quality. In portrait work of this type, drawing is, of course, of supreme importance, and the difficulty of creating a likeness is increased if the artists attempts to convey form and a sense of the presence of bone and cartilage under a model's skin. In this respect Mr. MacDonald is successful to a satisfying degree.

Follows English Manner

One of the most distinctive techniques on display at tre exhibition is that of Stan Harris. In his water colors Mr. Harris clings to the English manner, and evidences a hardness which is quite apropos and which lends a crispness to his work. With outlined edges, the artist makes more clear his idea of defining subjects, and in his "Barn" this method is especially effective.

The only exhibition of pastels in showing is that of A. B. Burrows, and the softness and pliability of the medium is fully utilized in his work. A catching silhouette, "Stonehenge," and another drawing, showing one of the light pillars of Hunter street bridge in the foreground, and the town clock in the background, are particularly in keeping with what is expected of the pastel artist.

D. G. H. Melton, William English, Charles Shaw and Hugh Robertson have contributed in the efforts of the artists, and all are represented in the exhibition. Oils are evidently most in vogue with these members of the club as well as the others generally. Landscapes represent the four mentioned above, and all have painted with a feeling of the country in which they have worked.

Mr. Melton would seem to lean more toward compositions with water showing in them, and three of his paintings "Sand Banks," "Near the Beach" and "The Old Mill Stream" have this in common as the words themseves would suggest. His attention to fundamentals in painting overule a normal desire to be photographic, and both he and Mr. English succeed in more interpreting nature rather than copying it. Mr. English is represented by landscapes which demonstrate various plains effectively and are pleasing in their rhythm.

Being Observant

Mr. Robertson and Mr. Shaw both tell stories in their paintings of observation while in the open, and show their interest in the works of the so-called "Group of Seven." As Canadian painters advocate, these artists indicate their willingness to be intrigued by familiar landscapes and objects.

Considering the exhibition as a whole, it is evident that Peterborough artists have learned their lessons well, and qualities and factors sometimes disregarded are respected.

Not one of the men exhibiting is afraid of the use of color, and the individual's work, as well as the collection generally has profoundly benefitted from this fact. One of the most satisfying marks in the showing is the attempt on the part of the various participants to render texture with brush or crayon, and an appreciation of the distinction in foliage, wood and mineral texture is a highlight. Light and shade which combine with good drawing and keen observation to express form are regarded with reverence among the contributors and the exhibition of the work of the members of the Peterborough Men's Sketch Club has something really worthwhile to offer to art lovers. The showing is open to the public both tonight and Saturday night.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: April calls Ann, tells her Kent is home, asks her to catch the midnight train. Ann refuses, says the audition she has been waiting for is to be held. April doesn't tell her sister of Kent's blindness, fearing the news might upset her, ruin the audition. She ends the call abruptly, but already she is forming a plan.

* * *

TRUST IN TOMORROW

CHAPTER IV

April Burnett was a great believer in tomorrows.

Perhaps Mother and Dad would return ahead of time from the camping trip and figure a way out of this situation. Maybe Ann would change her mind and come home. That was it, of course. Ann would start thinking about Kent and would leave for Pattonsville, audition or not. Anything could happen tomorrow, so really all she had to worry about was tonight.

And tonight, after the long train ride, the fresh memory of what he'd been through, Kent must be spared. That was where the inspiration came in.

For a minute, it struck her as strange that she should be bothering at all. Yet somehow the memory of Kent's unseeing eyes, the thought of how much this weekend leave meant to him, made her pick up the telephone resolutely.

"Hello, Kent — bet you could never guess what sweet young hero worshiper this is."

She was all April now as she held the telephone cupped close to her mouth. Her voice was like Ann's, but the flippant word were hers.

"Why, yes," Kent was saying, "it's April. How are you, April?"

"Never mind about how I am," she crooned. "How is the conquering warrior?"

"Oh, very well, thanks." His words were clipped.

"Why didn't you let us know about your leave ahead of time so we could have brought the band out and thrown a party? It's not every day a man of military affairs comes into our midst."

"I'm hardly that." He made a forced attempt at laughter. April lowered her voice.

"Kent, in all seriousness, Ann wanted me to send word to you."

"Ann—is she all right?"

* * *

April held the hand-set a little closer. So far, so good. She musn't say a thing she couldn't stand by later.

"Ann will be all right," she hastened on. "it's only that she's a little—well, your coming home so sudden and everything—"

Kent was quick to answer. "I know it. It's all my fault. Trying to pull the heroics and not writing her."

"You know how Ann is," April was whispering, as if Ann herself might be overhearing. "She's not very strong."

"She'll be fine tomorrow if she gets a good rest, don't you think?" The eagerness in his voice made April's fingers curl around the cord.

"Oh, yes. Oh, my. I should say so," she answered. "Everything will be fine tomorrow."

"I guess it won't hurt me any either to slack up tonight. Army routine's pretty tough, you know. You tell Ann it's perfectly all right and I understand. I'll call her the first thing tomorrow."

"Yes, I'll tell her. Any other kind words you want to pass along?"

"Why, yes," Kent spoke very quietly. "Say that she's got to be okay tomorrow. I'm going to kidnap her for the whole day."

"H'm, orders from the top sergeant. If you were here, I suppose I'd salute."

He laughed. "Good night, April, and thanks for calling."

"Wait a minute, Cap'n Carter. Whoa, there!" She knew she should say good night. She knew she would spoil the whole results of her inspiration if she said another word. And yet she couldn't stop herself. The Glitterbug, indeed!

"Yes?" he said it impersonally.

"How about me volunteering in Ann's place tonight?"

"Thanks, April," he said, "but that wouldn't do. Good night and good luck."

She needed it. She felt very empty as she went upstairs to dress. Kent had said, "Thanks, but that wouldn't do." What he meant, of course, was that she wouldn't do.

* * *

Casa Blanca, everyone said, was a wonderful night club for a town like Pattonsville. A big shell of a place, it had a smooth floor and a good orchestra. Every now and then some of the big-name bands you heard on the radio came here to play a one-night engagement.

Tonight, April decided, Casa Blancha looked like Casa Blank to her. It seemed suddenly too big, too much decorated, a sort of imitation of the real thing. And every dance piece the orchestra played was just in imitation, too, of some other band that played it better.

April wore a new black net dress, with a skirt billowing in yards-and-yards and a bodice cunningly sprinkled with small silver sequins. Out of this froth of swirling black, her yellow head with the upbrushed curls rose like a sunburst.

"What's the trouble, April?" One of the trio of young men escorting her leaned forward. "There's a perfectly good rhumba going to waste and you haven't noticed a single imploring look in our eyes."

"Something got you down?" It was Hal Parks, the nicest of the three; in fact, the nicest man she knew.

For a whole, April tried to forget the problem that faced her in the morning. She made herself feel confident that Ann would return. If Ann didn't, surely there'd be some way to sidestep Kent. You could always send notes.

So she danced with the three men in turn; lighted their cigarets since she didn't smoke; listened as they made love in their bantering way. But through the haze of smoke and the blur of music, Kent's face kept coming before her.

* * *

It was Hal who had a way of understanding her better than anyone she'd ever known, who extricated her early and drove her home.

"Feel like talking about what's bothering you?" he asked.

She stammered an answer. "Oh, maybe it's the war business, the men going to training camps. You'll be leaving, too, Hal?"

Hal was handsome, with smooth dark hair and a mustache that gave him a debonair, man-about-town look. He wore a tuxedo with born grace, knew how to do things the right way. And yes, Hal was going places.

"I'd like to be in uniform right now," he was saying. "But I'm in chemical research at the plant on a rush order for the government, so it looks as if I'd be kept there for a while. Is that what was worrying you, April?"

April shook her head, uncertainly.

Hal didn't try to kiss her, but taking her hands said, "Well, whatever it is, April, if the time ever comes when you want to tell me, I'll be around. I feel that way about you."

A month ago, a week ago, even last night, April's heart would have given a skip or two at this. Now she could only nod and say gratefully, "You're a grand guy, Hal."

He helped her out of the car. "Sure I am," he said with vast aplomb. "And remember this, honey, there are other ways of being drafted besides for the army."

MORE ABOUT—
C.P.R. Foreman

"I remember three men being there. They carried a little radio" said the witness. I showed them to their rooms.

"I don't recall what time these men asked to be called in the morning.

"Do you know the man in the dock?" asked Mr. McElderry.

"I don't."

Bergeron said he went off duty at around 12 o'clock that night and "a guy named Charley" took over the desk. There was no record kept of the calling of guests.

"Did you see any lady in the party?"

"I did not."

Bergeron said that the card produced had nothing to do with the three he had been talking about.

Mr. Carley objected that Mr. McElderry had no right to cross-examine his own witness.

To Mr. Carley witness said that he had no recollection of seeing Burns before coming to Peterborough.

The card showing the registration "Larry Burns and wife" could not have been for February 2 Bergeron declared.

Everett Osborne, C.P.R. section foreman at Bowmanville, repeated much of his evidence given in the Gallow case in regard to the maroon-colored car he had seen near the C.P.R. station at Bowmanville at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of February 1 with four men in it.

"Do you see any one in this court room who looks like one of them," asked Mr. McElderry.

"His face looks familiar," said Osborne, indicating Burns.

Near Crossing.

The C.P.R. tool house was only 50 feet from the crossing where he had seen the maroon car, witness said.

Witness told of tools being stolen from the tool house that Saturday night and identified tools produced as exhibits as those taken from Bowmanville.

Mr. Carley cross-examined Osborne at considerable length as to the men he had seen in the car and as to the opportunities he had had to observe them. Osborne said that the men were wearing what he called working clothes, "second suits," and then added that they were all wearing overcoats.

"That how you tell what kind of suits they were wearing," asked Mr. Carley.

Osborne said the overcoats were unbuttoned. He could not say whether the suits worn were blue or black, they were dark, he said. He declared that he had a good look at the men.

The witness said that Detective Sergt. Meagher had visited him at Bowmanville and had shown him a number of photographs, six or seven altogether, and he had picked out three as photographs of the men he had seen in the car at Bowmanville.

Thursday's Evidence

That some of the money found on Lawrence Burns when he was arrested at Windsor bore evidence that it had been scorched, was the testimony of Professor Joslyn Rogers, of the University of Toronto, when he was called as a crown witness in police court Thursday afternoon, in a charge against Burns of burglarizing the C.D.S. store.

Burns is the second of four men similarly charged to have a preliminary hearing. Earlier in the afternoon Louis Gallow, Toronto, had been committed for trial.

Professor Rogers had testified in his case that money found on him had been scorched and he gave similar evidence in the case against Burns.

J. H. Jamison, manager of the C.D.S. repeated his evidence as to the burglary at the store, closely following the testimony in the Gallow case.

Constable Chris. Paget of the Windsor City Police said that he knew Lawrence Burns and had arrested him on February 12 on a stairway leading to a Windsor apartment. Paget said that when Burns was first searched $10.10 was found in his pocket and later $85 more was found in a watch pocket.

Evidence was given by Detective Sergeant Meagher and Chief Newhall as to the money found on Burns getting to Professor Joslyn Rogers. Professor Rogers testified that five of the one dollar bills, and three of the five dollar bills showed evidence of having been scorched. The witness said that the safe produced as an exhibit had a corner burned off by a blow torch and said that if the bills found on the accused had been in the safe it would have been possible for them to have been left in the scorched condition he had found them in.

T. J. Carley, K.C., who defended Burns, cross-examined Professor Rogers at some length before the court adjourned for the day. Professor Rogers agreed with him that a similar scorching might be produced by a lighted match.

OBITUARY

JOHN H. GEORGE.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 28—(ENS).—The community lost another of its well-known and highly-respected citizens in the death of John H. George, which occurred after only one week's illness, on Monday, February 24, in his seventy-fifth year.

He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hamley George, and was born and brought up near Roseneath, residing in later years for some time at Peterborough, moving from there to Hillcrest Farm, Fallis Line, and for the past thirteen years making Millbrook his home. His marriage to Elizabeth Anderson, who survives her husband, took place several years ago; they had no family. A nephew, John Allowell, took over the farm on Fallis Line when Mr. and Mrs. George moved to Millbrook to reside.

Mr. George had a life-long connection with the Methodist and the United Churches, and was a charter member of the Senior Men's Bible Class of St. Andrew's Sunday School and active in its various interests and undertakings. For a time he filled the position of teacher capably, and was well known as a clever reader, often being heard with pleasure at public entertainments in connection with the church and the Sunday School. As long as health permitted he seldom failed to be in his place at the church services, and was promoted from the Session to the position of an honorary elder, when failing strength compelled relinquishment of more active duties.

Mr. George was the last surviving member of his family, another brother passing away about four years ago at Baltimore; there are a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral took place from his late residence, Anne Street, on Wednesday at 2 p.m., a large number of friends and neighbors gathering for the service, which was conducted by his pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., who spoke from the words of Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

T. J. Carley, K.C., who defended Burns, cross-examined Professor Rogers at some length before the court adjourned for the day. Professor Rogers agreed with him that a similar scorching might be produced by a lighted match.

T. J. Carley, K.C., who defended Burns, cross-examined Professor Rogers at some length before the court adjourned for the day. Professor Rogers agreed with him that a similar scorching might be produced by a lighted match.

The pall-bearers were fellow charter members of the Senior Men's Class of his day, and included: A. J. Henderson, J. H. Might, W. F. Fallis, G. E. Burnham, Irwin Hatherly, and Thomas Douglas. Interment was at Gardiner's Cemetery, Millbrook.

Dates at Home More Fun With Twosome Games

"Pounce" Jolly Double Solitaire

Let's put some real zip into that quiet date at home! Let's play "Pounce"—a rapid-fire, version of solitaire for two.

You and your date each lay out a deck of cards as the diagram shows. Put 7 cards in a pounce pile, then deal 5 cards and build on these—leaving out one more pile to the left each time you build—until your last pile to the right has 5 cards. With all top cards face up, you're ready.

The object is to get rid of your 7-card "pounce pile"—fast! Playing separately, you each build red-on-black downward sequences on your 5 solitaire piles. Meanwhile, you both put all aces in the centre, on which you build upward sequences in identical suits.

Go through your decks, 3 at a time, when necessary to make more moves. An empty space? Fill it from the "pounce pile".

Suddenly you see a chance to play your last remaining "pounce" card and you cry "POUNCE—I win!"

What if two guests—or more—drop in? Our new 32-page booklet is packed with games for twosomes, threesomes, foursomes or "more-somes". Has card games, pencil games, stunts, puzzlers, nonsense gags—to make you a popular hostess.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GAMES AND STUNTS FOR TWO OR MORE to Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

"The Authority on Authorities"

USE A CHANGE OF PACE

BE DEPENDABLE, but not too dependable. Let your partner trust you in all things which are absolutely necessary—as a rule. But in certain situations, it is more important to misguide the opponents than to guide your partner aright. This is especially true if you are playing in a tournament and you reckon your side is behind, with only a few hands to go. Then you must try for a "swing." If it works, you may pull the chestnuts out of the fire. If it fails, you are beaten the same as if you hadn't made any special effort. But at least in that case you have the satisfaction of knowing you had tried.

This was one of the last three hands played in a recent national team of four championship. At the time North and South reckoned their side was probably about 1,000 points behind, and they had to get a "swing" of sizable proportions somehow in order to win. Actually, as they learned later, they were 1,190 points behind at this stage, and the last two hands were tied. So this deal did the business.

North's spade bid was for the purpose of steering the lead into one of the other two suits, reckoning that a club slam ought to be possible with that little help, as his hearts should furnish all of the discards South needed. It worked like a charm. West led his diamond J and South counted 13 tricks without taking a finesse. The pair scored 120 for tricks, 20 for the extra trick, 500 for game bonus and 750 for slam premium, a total of 1,390.

At the other table, the hostile team also reached 6-Clubs, but was set one trick by a spade lead, for a score of 100. Hence the total swing was 1490 points, and the team won the match by exactly 300, due to this well-placed lead-misdirecting bid by North.

BONARLAW, Feb. 28 — (ENS). — At the last regular meeting of St. Mark's Y.P.S. on Tuesday the program was in the nature of a Valentine party. In the absence of Carl Heath, president, the business portion of the meeting was conducted by Ralph Richardson. The roll-call was answered by each person present forming some words from the letters in the word Valentine. Several new members were initiated, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne.

The president then turned the meeting over to Mrs. W. J. Barlow, convener of the program committee, who gave a splendid talk on the origin of the observance of Valentine Day and then called on the members present for the following numbers: Community singing and quizz, led by J. Eden Returns To Egypt; Turks In Line

Quick Strategy Talk Then Will Fly To Athens Parley

ANKARA, Turkey, March 1. — (AP)—A British mission headed for Egypt today with assurances of Turkey's adherence to a two-year-old pact of alliance as events in the Balkans moved rapidly toward a crisis.

It was understood that after a flying trip to Cairo British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the Imperial General Staff, would return to the Balkans for conferences at Athens on British military aid to Greece.

(Dispatches from London said Britain had received with equanimity a Belgrade announcement that Bulgaria had decided to join the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance today.)

The British leaders conducted their talks in the wake of a new Turkish-Bulgarian non-aggression treaty, which the axis hailed as a diplomatic triumph, and the Turkish press termed a check to Germany's southeastward drive.

Britain said the pact, negotiated with her knowledge, did not affect the Turkish-British agreement, and as Mr. Eden and Sir John left a communique reaffirmed that tie.

"The two governments recorded their firm attachment to the Anglo-Turkish alliance," the statement said.

"The international situation was fully reviewed in all its aspects and special consideration was given to Balkan problems which closely concern the common interests of Britain and Turkey.

Frenchmen Cross Up Japanese Officials Fail To Appear At Peace Conference

TOKYO, March 1—(AP).—A hitch in last-minute negotiations of a Japanese-initiated peace agreement between French Indo-China and Thailand developed tonight.

Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka waited at his residence from 4 p.m. until 10 p.m. (10 a.m., EDT) for French Ambassador Charles-Arsene Henry to keep an appointment, it was said, but the meeting did not take place.

It was believed that the absence of instructions from Vichy caused the Ambassador's delay.

Previously authoritative quarters had suggested that a peace agreement was nearing completion and that a final settlement might be announced tonight or early tomorrow. A Japanese ultimatum expired at noon yesterday.

This silence appeared to make the next move Japan's, under the reported terms of her ultimatum, but there were immediate indications that any "forceful action" in Indo-China would be delayed.

Competent circles expressed the opinion that no "forceful action" would come before some 400 Japanese business and professional men and other civilians have been removed from Indo-Choina. This evacuation, already under way, is scheduled for completion March 7. On that day also the armistice in border warfare between Indo-China and Thailand will expire.

Wilhelmshaven, Big Sub Base Blasted Again

LONDON, March 1.—(CP)—Royal Air Force bombers attacked points in Brittany, in northwest Germany and in the Nazi-occupied Netherlands last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

The big submarine and naval base at Wilhelmshaven was described as the principal objective of last night's raiding, being subjected to its 44th attack of the war.

"Weather made exact observations very difficult," a communique said, "but some very large bombs dropped in the target area."

The port of Emden and several airdromes in northwest Germany and Holland also were attacked, the ministry said, and the invasion port of Bologne, on the Nazi-held French coast, was raided for the 77th time.

One British plane was reported to be missing.

Quiberon, on the south coast of the Brittany peninsula not far from the Nazi submarine base at Lorient, was identified as one of the targets of the raiders.

Objective on the Netherland coast also were bombed and the communique declared "several direct hits were observed."

Few Raids on England.

LONDON, Mar. 1 — (CP). — Thick mists and high winds over the Channel kept air attacks on Britain last night to a minimum.

Some bombs were dropped in the home counties around London and in East Anglia, causing a few casualties.

Kept Grounded

Newfoundland Airport, Nfld., March 1 (CP Cable)

UNFAVORABLE flying weather today grounded planes waiting here to take off for Canada with the bodies of Sir Frederick Banting and his two fellow victims of a plane crash last week.

Military fliers receiving reports of conditions over the route between here and the Dominion considered it possible the flight would be made later in the day. Two planes were to have taken off this morning.

List Eight Ships As Lost In Week

NEW YORK, March 1—(CP). — New York sources reported the sinking of four British merchant ships in the week ended February 28. New York agents of the vessel reported the loss of the 8,456-ton Siamese Prince, but gave no details. New York maritime circles reported the sinking of three freighters averaging 5,000 tons. None of these, so far, have been confirmed by the Admiralty.

The New York Maritime Register reported also that four Norwegian freighters, aggregating 8,728 tons, had been sunk in the Atlantic, but it was not clear whether these were sunk in British or German service.

The 1,400-ton vessel Xenia carrying Italian supplies to Albania was blown up, possibly by her own crew, in a Yugoslavian port.

The British Admiralty's summary for the week ended February 16, showed 12 British and Allied merchant ships totalling 37,636 tons were lost in the period.

Ontario Donates Great O.A.C. As Air School

TORONTO, March 1 (CP)—Ontario faced the problem today of trying to salvage something from its great Agricultural College at Guelph, the buildings of which are to be turned over to the department of national defence for air almost immediately. Premier Hepburn advised the legislature yesterday just prior to the week-end adjournment a school for training wireless operators under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan would be started at the O.A.C. June 9.

The 24 buildings that comprise the college and its affiliate, Macdonald Institute, will be used for training school that will have a personnel of 1,500. The buildings will be vacated May 1 by the agricultural staff of 100 and the 800 students.

Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan doubted whether the proper buildings could be obtained to permit the O.A.C. to continue some of its work. He said the Ontario Veterinary College would not be affected by the change.

Want Studies Kept Up

However, a number of Conservative members made suggestions that the Kemptville School of Agriculture or the Experimental Farm at Ottawa perhaps could be used for maintaining the continuity of studies.

Premier Hepburn admitted the change will create certain hardships for agricultural education but it was just another instance of the province's wholehearted support of the war effort. Earlier in the war another great collection of buildings that comprised the Ontario Hospital at St. Thomas were converted into an R.C.A.F. training centre.

Col. T. L. Kennedy, (Con. Peel) who said he was "shocked" by the premier's announcement asked whether some of the college's work could be carried on at the experimental farm at Ottawa.

31 Raid Warnings

London, March 1 (CP)

GERMAN planes flew up the Thames estuary today apparently trying to reach London, but they were driven off by anti-aircraft fire before they could reach the capital.

London had 31 air raid warnings totalling 44 hours in duration during February, as compared with 41 alerts totalling 81 hours in January. Since the beginning of the war the capital has had 489 alarms aggregating 1,312 hours, or nearly 55 days.

Nine Winged In Duel Over Albania

Biggest British Bag In Greek Fight In 4 Months Of War

ATHENS, Greece, March 1 (AP) —A British fighter squadron closed out the fourth month of the Greek-talian war yesterday by shooting down more than 30 Fascist warplanes over the southern Albanian front without a single loss to itself, the Greek high command announced.

A British communique said 26 planes in "a numerically much larger" formation of Italian bombers escorted by fighters were known to have been destroyed while nine others "were so seriously damaged as to make their return to base improbable."

It was the largest bag reported for a single British squadron in the four months of fighting in Albania and Greece. The Greek high command said the aerial success was paralleled by "successful local efforts" of ground troops in which "the enemy was dislodged from his position."

Some prisoners were said to have been taken and Italian tank attacks were reported to have been repulsed. One tank, the communique said, was destroyed.

Royal Air Force headquarters said reconnaissance flights had shown that two of the power station buildings at Tripoli, chief port in Western Libya and headquarters of the remaining Italalian forces in North Africa, had been burned out as a result of an air raid Monday night.

Air units supporting the Eritrean offensive caused many casualties and much damage in bomb and machine-gun raids on Italian positions south of Cheren, the R.A.F. communique said. The Cheren-Asmara railroad likewise was attacked.

Plaies ranging ahead of land forces in Italian Somaliland reported a number of Fascist lorries were destroyed beyond Bulo Burtin on the Webbe Shibeli river, 150 miles north of Mogadiscio. The position of the Italians indicated they were withdrawing along the river toward Ethiopia.

Another Axis raid was made on Malta yesterday but there were no casualties or damage.

U.S. Stands Ready To Tie Up Assets

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull indicated today that Bulgarian assets in the United States would be "frozen" if German troops occupied that country.

Hull said the state department was watching closely the situation developing in the Balkans and that, if and when, Bulgaria joined the Axis and German troops occupied the country the question of freezing Bulgarian funds here would immediately arise.

See Britain Set For R.A.F. Blow At Rumanian Oil

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(AP). —A Nazi-British showdown in the Balkans seemed at hand as this was written. Rumor ran riot through Southeastern Europe. War storm warnings fluttered from every post of observation.

Every fresh report of German military activity pointed toward a Nazi march, perhaps already in progress, into Bulgaria.

There seems small doubt that Britain, due to Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's reported understanding with Turkey, holds a strong trump card. Only time can tell whether or not that includes a Turkish commitment to join the conflict against Germany in event of a Nazi incursion into Bulgaria.

There seems no question, however, that Britain has fully paved the way for a powerful air counter-attack on any Nazi armies that jump off from Rumanian bases, and also upon Rumanian oil wells. The first pitched battle of a new war in the Balkans well might come in the air over Ploesti, the nerve centre of the Rumanian oil industry.

Must Protect Oil.

There seems every reason to assume that the Royal Air Force, poised at Greek bases within two hours' flight from Ploesti, would make its main smash there. It woud have a double value strategically. What-

British Envoy All Packed To Leave Country Hitler Attends 7-Min. Vienna Ceremony; Sofia Reported Madhouse, Scores Arrested

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 1.—(AP) German troops drove into Sofia today in grey armored cars, wearing battle dress.

They wore steel helmets and complete battle kit and reached the centre of this capital late in the day.

The Germans carried rifles, gas masks and heavy packs as they rode into the city.

Three carloads rolled through the main streets of Sofia and passed the German Legation.
